Spain Weighs Asking U. S. To Intervene In Cuba Rule

Worried Over Nationals, She May Cite Platt Amendment.

Labor Arrests Add to Concern

Madrid Will Act Today; Decision Surprise to Washington.

Madrid, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Spanish Government, "deeply concerned" over the safety of Spaniards in Cuba, will give full consideration in a cabinet session tomorrow to determine a course of action, a high government official said tonight.

This official said he believed personally that the best solution to the problem of protecting Spanish lives and property in the Caribbean isle would be to confer with the United States in an effort to enforce the Platt amendment, which provides for United States intervention in Cuba under certain conditions.

The official said this move had been discussed at several previous cabinet sessions, but through "lack of decision," no definite action had been taken. He said events in Cuba had reached such a point now, however, that the Government had decided to come to grips with the problem tomorrow.

Spanish concern over the fate of their Nationals in Cuba has grown acute only since the passage of the "50 per cent law," passed by decree of President Grau San Martin, which requires that at least half the personnel of all firms and establishments be Cubans.

Several score Spaniards have been arrested by police and soldiers supposedly instructed to enforce the law, and others have been killed or wounded in demonstrations accompanying attempts at enforcement.

Report Arouses Surprise.

State Department officials refused to comment pending the arrival of an official request from the Spanish government.

Observers, however, showed surprise at the news, pointing out that while the Platt amendment gives the United States the right to intervene in Cuba to maintain a government capable of protecting life and property, there is no compulsion to do so. Furthermore, Spain has always shown herself most circumspect in matters involving the former Spanish colony of Cuba and the Nation which freed Cuba from Madrid's rule.

Should such a request be made it is believed it would create a distinctly unfavorable impression throughout Latin-America—a fact of which it is assumed the Spanish government is aware.

It will be recalled that early in the present Cuban revolution it was reported the Spanish Ambassador had mentioned to Ambassador Welles the matter of Spanish life and property. The report caused a storm of indignation in Spain and is understood nearly to have cost the ambassador his position. The Strike Called In Philadelphia

Taximen Summon 25,000 Drivers to Sympathy Walkout.

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (AP).—Asserting Philadelphia's largest taxicab concern had rejected the National Labor Board's strike settlement, the Taxicab Drivers Union late today called on all motor transportation unions to carry out their threatened sympathy strike.

Approximately 25,000 chauffeurs and drivers would be affected. They serve the city's milk, bread and newspapers, deliver its coal and laundry, handle its produce and motor freight.

David H. Felix, counsel for the taximen, announced that the reply of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. to the Labor Board "does not constitute acceptance," and therefore the union would recommend an immediate walkout.

In a letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the board, the P. R. T. recognized the union and agred to take back strikers as fast as possible.

Boy Leaves Orphanage To Hunt Santa Claus

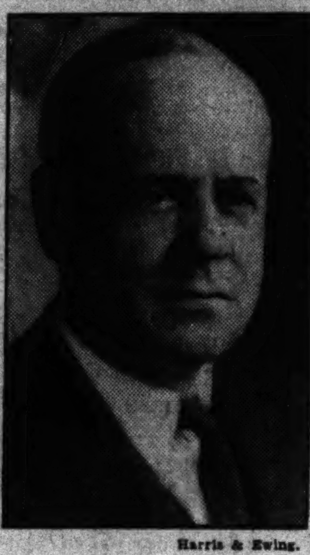
Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 21 (AP).—Nine-year-old Junior Montague was reported missing from St. Vincent's Orphanage here today. A few hours later he was found trudging down the railroad track about 11 miles from the home.

To a deputy sheriff he explained he had heard that Santa Claus had established headquarters at Gary, Ind., and he was on his way there.

Emergency Council Regarded As Santa Claus Offering Jobs To Faithful in Ranks of Party

48 State Directors May Be Named at $4,000 to $6,000 Salaries.

By Felix Bruner.



Harris & Ewing.
FRANK C. WALKER.

Political possibilities of the new National Emergency Council, both in helping silence clamor for patronage and in creating a huge organization that will be extremely useful in the Congressional election, were coming to light yesterday as the Nation-wide set-up was being formed.

Within the next two days President Roosevelt is expected to announce appointment of 48 directors to head the State emergency councils. These directors will find in their Christmas stockings jobs with salaries ranging from $4,000 to $6,000, depending on the size of the State.

Extreme care is being taken to make sure that these State directors are in sympathy with the Administration's relief program.

To determine just how much care is being taken, a check was made at the offices of a number of Democratic Senators. In each instance it was learned that a recommendation had been made for a State director. In each instance it was learned that the person recommended was not only a reliable but an active Democrat.

There was some difference of

Reichstag Fire Culprit to Get Death Penalty

Other 4 Defendants Face Acquittal; Extremists Hint Mob Action.

Berlin, Dec. 21 (AP).—A sentence of death for one of the men accused of firing the German Reichstag last winter and acquittal for the other four defendants will be contained in the verdict of supreme court judges before whom the men have been tried, the Associated Press learned today from a reliable source.

Simultaneously Chancellor Hitler and Reichsminister Hermann Goering, appraised of the nature of the verdict which will be handed down Saturday, faced a supreme test of their statesmanship, for civilian extremists threatened that three Bulgarian Communists, for whom acquittal was said to be in store, would not reach the German border alive.

Three to Be Expelled.

The informant said Marinus Van Der Lubbe, young Dutch brickmason, will be sentenced to death, that Ernst Torgler, former Communist whip in the Reichstag, will be acquitted, and that the Bulgarians, Georgi Dimitroff, Blagoi Popoff and Wassil Taneff, will be acquitted and expelled from Germany.

The chancellor and Goering, it was said in political circles, will give strict orders that the verdict, even though it may be disappointing to Nazi followers, must be respected at all costs.

Upon their acquittal, for lack of evidence, the trio will be handed back to the Prussian political police, who then will be responsible for their safety until they reach the German frontier, it was reported.

Goering, head of police and the Prussian minister of the interior, is said to realize that were the Bulgarians to be "shot while attempting to flee," all the world would recall the remark Goering made at their trial November 4, when he told Dimitroff that "you have reason only to be afraid when once you leave the custody of this court."

Hitler Is Aroused.

Hitler was reported to have flared up at the mere suggestion of a threat, and to have pointed out that, aside from everything else, his proposals for the pacification of Europe, as evidenced by his negotiations with England, France, Italy and Poland, would suffer a severe setback.

Fog Fails to Down "Flying Boudoir"

Women Pass 24-Hour Mark in Endurance Race.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 21 (AP).—Heavy fog today made hazardous the contacts between the "Flying Boudoir," endurance plane piloted by Helen Richey and Frances Marsalis and their service plane.

The planes made four short connections during the day.

4 Airmen Held in Plot Against Venizelos

Athens, Dec. 21 (AP).—Four senior air force officers, who were understood to have accused unnamed colleagues of complicity in an attempt against the life of former Premier Venizelos, were arrested today.

The air minister ordered an investigation.

Economy Bill Pay Slashes Facing Fight

Restoration of automatic promotions in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will be recommended by the Administration to Congress and will find strong support there, it was said authoritatively yesterday.

Return to the former system is to be one of several modifications of the so-called economy program which has controlled ordinary Government operations for the last two years.

Modification, if not elimination, of the slashes in Government salaries is generally expected to be voted, but there exists sharp difference of opinion as to just what should be done about this according to leaders who have returned to the National Capital to start legislative wheels turning.

The economy law involved hospitalization for veterans, pensions, furloughs, annual leave, travel allowances, promotions, filling of vacancies and other matters. Several are expected to afford a battleground during the progress of appropriation measures through the House and Senate.

Opposes Junking Law.

Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, served notice yesterday, however, that there is to be no abandonment of the economy law as a whole if he can prevent it.

"If we were to repeal the economy law it would be such a shock to the country that recovery would be materially retarded," Mr. Buchanan said.

How far the law will be modified will depend largely on what the President says he wants, according to House leaders. Mr. Buchanan said he would be guided by recommendations of the President.

The committee chairman, however, is emphatic in his opposition to proposals to restore Government salaries to their statutory levels.

He advocated cutting the 15 per cent reduction to 10 per cent with a proviso that the President could restore any of the 10 per cent when living costs rose enough to justify the higher pay. The 1928 living cost figures would be taken as a base for restoration to 100 per cent of the statutory salaries.

Would Assure Some Raise.

This plan, Mr. Buchanan said, would assure Government employes an increase of at least 5 per cent in their salaries beginning July 1, next.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey, Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader, and others, however, have declared themselves in favor of restoring salaries to their statutory levels at the beginning of the next fiscal year.

The question has not been fought out in the Appropriations Committee. Decision of that committee will have an important although not binding effect on House action.

Issue probably will be drawn on January 2, when the subcommittee in charge of the Independent Offices appropriations is to meet to decide finally on their recommendations to the full committee. Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, is chairman of the subcommittee. He is on record as favoring elimination of the 15 per cent cut.

The question, however, has not been decided by the subcommittee despite the stand taken by Chairman Woodrum.

Action on the measure is regarded as important because usually it is the first bill reported to the House and decision on salaries is followed by the committee and the House in subsequent measures.

House Body Proposes $2 Liquor Tax

Approval of Complete Committee Sought at Meeting Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

House Ways and Means Committee Democrats have agreed on a $2-a-gallon liquor tax, without any allocations of Federal revenue to the States, it was learned last night.

The unexpected action, which contrary to usual caucus rules is not binding on members, was taken at an unheralded meeting of Democrats Wednesday night, a member of the committee told The Post.

Approval of Republican and Democratic members alike will be sought at an executive session of the full Ways and Means Committee at 10 o'clock this morning.

The agreement is a far cry from recommendations of the President's interdepartmental committee, which several weeks ago proposed a tax of $2.60 a gallon on liquor, and allocation of 20 per cent of the revenues collected to the States.

Foreign Liquor Issue Undecided.

On the third recommendation in the interdepartmental committee's report, proposing a reciprocal trading arrangement whereby the President could bargain with other nations in adjusting the liquor tariff, the Democrats reached no understanding.

It is known that the President would like this authority, however, and no substantial opposition has developed in the committee.

Meanwhile, Chairman Robert L. Doughton, at hearings yesterday on the committee's general revenue bill, served formal notice tariff schedules will not be thrown open to amendment in the income tax revision measure now being framed by the committee, unless direct pressure is exerted from the White House.

Committee to Meet Today.

A similar position was taken on proposed curtailment of excise levies, after a score of witnesses, representing most of the industries hit by the so-called "nuisance taxes," had appealed for relief.

Democratic leaders, sympathetic with requests that excise taxes be lifted, nevertheless point to the growing need for new Federal revenue. Any relief from the special levies must hinge on Budget Bureau recommendations, they said.

Agreement of Democrats Wednesday night on the two most controversial features of the liquor tax program, was regarded as paving the way for full committee approval of the program today.

Seek $220,000,000 Revenue.

The proposal to allocate 20 or even 25 per cent of Federal liquor revenues to the States was discarded by Democrats, even though it was known the President supported the allocation, and Chairman Doughton fought to retain it.

There was strong opposition, however, from representatives of States which already have imposed liquor taxes, and others who felt the States should receive a larger allocation. In the end the plan was thrown out in favor of one Federal tax, low enough to permit States to impose their own levies if they see fit.

Although several members sought a lower tax than $2, and others asked it be raised slightly higher, a majority struck on $2 as a happy medium and left it for the full committee to thrash out today.

As early as last week, Democrats attempted to reach an agreement in secret caucus on the liquor tax, but without success. One futile effort was made to bind them to a $2.60 rate.

In fixing the $2 rate, Democrats acted on the theory that new liquor revenues must at least yield as much as the $220,000,000.

An informal decision to follow this policy was reached at the first

U. S. Will Buy Newly Mined Silver And Coin Half of American Output As President Ratifies London Pact

Price of 64½ Cents Per Ounce Is Set

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt, acting under authority conferred upon him by the Thomas inflation amendment, late yesterday directed United States mints to receive all newly-mined American silver offered to them at a price which would net the producer 64½ cents an ounce.

The President took this step in announcing he had ratified on behalf of this country the agreement reached at London last summer in regard to silver, under which the United States Government agreed to take from its mines annually at least 24,421,400 ounces of silver for a four-year period.

Under the procedure outlined in the President's proclamation, this silver will be accepted by Government mints for coinage at the legal ratio to gold of 16 to 1, subject, however, to the condition that the Director of the Mint may deduct and retain 50 per cent of such silver received as seigniorage.

Sets Goverment Price.

Thus President Roosevelt's silver program has the effect of setting a Government price of 64½ cents an ounce for newly produced silver, or 21½ cents above the New York price yesterday for bar silver. This constitutes an overnight increase of 50 per cent in the price for newly produced silver.

Although the President's action constitutes a mild form of currency inflation, its greatest effect is expected to be a stimulation of foreign trade with China, India and other countries using silver as a currency.

By pegging silver prices at the equivalent of 64½ cents an ounce, the purchasing power of these countries in the American market has been increased 50 per cent, according to Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, author of the London silver agreement and leader of the Senate silver bloc.

Gold Price Continues.

Senator Pittman, who hailed the President's announcement as the "greatest Christmas gift I have ever received," contended that the action established "a conditional free coinage of American-produced silver." In the domestic field, the chief beneficiaries of the new policy, it was believed, would be silver-producing companies.

The amount of the new currency which will be thus put into circulation depends on the extent to which American silver production increases, and whether the Government will coin that part of the silver bullion it retains as seigniorage, but it would be negligible. On the basis of last year's production, however, the increased currency

Roosevelt Silver Statement

Presidential Announcement Explains Authority and Reasons for Issuing of Decree Here on Coinage of Silver Currency

"Under the clear authority granted to me by the last session of the Congress, I have today, by proclamation, proceeded to ratify the London agreement with regard to silver, which has already been put into effect by the Government of India, and on which I understand other nations concerned are about to act.

"This proclamation, in accordance with the act of Congress, opens our mints to the coinage of standard silver dollars from silver hereafter produced in the United States or its possessions, subject to depositors of such silver surrendering to the Government one-half of it as seigniorage and to cover all usual charges and expenses. The dollars coined from half of such newly mined silver will be returned to the depositor. The half surrendered to the Government will be retained in the Treasury.

"It will be remembered that at the London conference 66 governments unanimously adopted the silver resolution proposed by our Government, providing in substance that these governments would refrain from the policy and practice of melting and debasing silver coins; that they would replace low-valued paper money with silver coins; and that they would not enact legislation that would depreciate the value of silver in the world market.

"This resolution, however, was contingent upon an agreement between the governments of those countries producing large quantities of silver and the governments of those countries holding or using large quantities, looking to the elimination of an unnatural oversupply of silver on the markets of the world. This agreement, of course, was for the purpose of allowing demand and supply to govern the price of silver by the limitation and neutralization of this oversupply derived from the melting up of silver coins.

"India had the power to dispose of, on the markets of the world, at any time, and at any price, hundreds of millions of ounces of silver. In fact, India had the power and capacity to dump silver derived from the melting up of Indian silver coins in an amount equal to the world's production from the mines—for the period of two years. This power and the uncertainty attending its execution was destructive of the value and stability of silver throughout the world.

Agreement by China.

"China agreed, during the period of four years, commencing January 1, 1934, and ending January 1, 1938, not to permit the sale of any silver derived from the debasing or melting up of silver coins. India agreed to limit the sales of such silver to a maximum of 35,000,000 ounces an-

France Wins Boost in U. S. Wine Quota

(Associated Press.)

An agreement between the United States and France to expand the French liquor import quota came last night as complaints against liquor prices threatened to bring Congressional action.

Days of effort to break a deadlock over tariffs imposed on American goods to be imported into France under a reciprocal liquor trade agreement ended in a compromise. Under it, France guarantees a market for 20,000 tons of American apples and pears regardless of tariffs. In exchange, the United States opens its liquor import quota to an additional 784,000 gallons of the French product.

The compromise was viewed as dictated by a desire of this Government to continue increasing the domestic liquor supply. This was made urgent yesterday when it became known that the import quotas from all countries had virtually expired and that France actually had completed her imports under the original 784,000-gallon allotment.

Legislation Framed.

While these international negotiations were proceeding, it was learned that members of Congress already had begun framing legislation to combat charges of high prices and low quality for the new legal liquor.

One Representative has drafted a bill for introduction which would limit liquor retail prices to cost, plus tax, plus 10 per cent. on the other side of the Capitol, Senator Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, has declared himself for "high quality and low price," coupling this with the added statement that "people want some assurance of safety to health and morals when they buy."

Meanwhile, Attorney General Cummings disclosed that the question of merging temporarily all Governmental investigating units to war on illicit rum handlers was being considered.

The wine-fruit agreement with France was reached after many conferences between the French commercial attache, Maurice Garreau-Dombasle, and a committee headed by Dr. Frederick Livesey, of the State Department, and Ray Miller, of the F.A.C.A.

Market Assured.

Under the agreement a market in France for about 1,000,000 bushels of American apples and pears, chiefly apples, as the pear exporting season is about over, was assured between now and April 1.

The French Government gave

Bullitt on Way Back to America

Several Buildings Offered as Moscow Embassy.

Moscow, Dec. 21 (AP).—American Ambassador William G. Bullitt started for Washington tonight, where he will take up the matter of quarters for the United States Embassy here.

Before he left by train for Berlin, the envoy said he had been offered a number of buildings and had inspected them, but could not make a decision before laying details before the State Department.

Mr. Bullitt will sail from Havre December 28.

Drug Peddler Suspect Shot By Agent at Union Station

An alleged narcotic peddler was shot by a Federal officer last night while standing in the crowded entrance of Union Station.

The wounded man is Harris Stein, 29, formerly of Chicago, said to be head of a local dope ring. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital with a bullet in his hip.

The shot was fired by Thomas Maxwell, Federal narcotic officer, who reported he had just bought 850 grains of heroin from Stein.

Stein and Maxwell met at the station entrance by appointment, according to Maxwell. The detective was accompanied by Detective Sergts Dan H. Jones and Charles E. Mansfield.

Maxwell, who said he had previously purchased dope from Stein, engaged him in conversation and then bought the heroin with marked bills. Jones and Mansfield, meanwhile, stood about 30 feet away and watched.

After the purchase, Maxwell said he pulled a badge from his pocket and said to Stein:

"I am an officer and you are under arrest."

Maxwell said Stein reached for his hip pocket and Maxwell fired. Instead of pulling a gun from his pocket, Maxwell said Stein pulled out a quantity of cocaine and put it in his mouth.

In spite of the bullet wound, Stein struggled with Maxwell, but was overpowered by the Federal detective and the two detective sergeants.

Stein was said by police to have been the head of a narcotic ring in Washington. It was said that he changed his address frequently. He registered at a downtown hotel Wednesday.

According to police, Stein obtained his dope from New York and sold it himself and through agents.

No gun was found on Stein after the shooting.

After the shooting, detectives searched the wounded man's hotel room. They found papers indicating that Stein's correct name is Harry Altman, of Detroit. They found no narcotic in the room, they said.

Police Hunt Dillinger, Kill 3 in Gun Fight

Riddle Chicago Flat With Bullets; Hold Up Theater Crowd.

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—A picked police detail, searching for members of the John Dillinger band of outlaws, stormed an apartment tonight and shot to death three men, all of whom were identified as former convicts, but not connected with the Indiana outlaw gang.

Those identified were:

Lewis Katzewitz, of Streator, Ill., said by Police Detective John Anderson to have been an escaped convict from Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet.

San Ginsberg, said by Anderson to have escaped from the Michigan State Prison at Jackson.

The identifications were made by means of fingerprints.

Capt. John Stege and 20 expert marksmen from the detective bureau surrounded an apartment on Farwell avenue in the Rogers Park district where the men were barricaded.

In the ensuing gun battle police blasted through doors and windows. When fire from within was silenced the officers crashed into the place. Three men were found lying dead on the floor, their bodies punctured with numerous bullets.

Twenty bullet-proof vests, three machine guns, half a dozen shotguns, many pistols and a store of ammunition was found in the place.

Identities of the men were not immediately ascertained.

Battle Alarms Neighbors.

The sally into the Rogers Park district, located on the North Side and long the headquarters of the Roger Touhy gang, came with dramatic suddenness.

Detective bureau headquarters knew nothing of it until a cryptic telephone call was received at 10 p. m. from Stege. Stege was quoted as saying:

"We have killed three men, members of the Dillinger mob. The trio was surrounded in an apartment on Farwell street."

Almost simultaneously frantic calls from neighbors were received at the Rogers Park Police Station a few blocks away, reporting the gun fight.

Theater Crowd Surrounded.

A few minutes after the shooting a half dozen squads of detectives were rushed to the Uptown Theater, a motion picture house in the same district, on information that a fourth member of the gang and a woman companion were within.

Several thousand patrons were in the place when the police with leveled pistols charged into the theater and took up positions barring all entrances.

Philadelphia G.O.P. Boss and Louisiana Senator Face Inquiry.

Government income tax investigations have been extended to include William S. Vare, Philadelphia Republican political boss, and a number of his associates, it was learned yesterday.

Revelation that the Department of Justice investigators are interesting themselves in Vare's tax reports followed reopening of the investigation of income tax payments of Senator Huey Long, of Lousiana.

The investigation of Senator Long's taxes is said to cover payments over a period of years. The inquiries are being conducted by the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau and by the tax division of the Department of Justice.

Long "Not Interested."

From New Orleans, the Associated Press reported that Long expressed himself as not being worried about the investigation.

"That has been up 750 times and always comes up just before Congress meets," he said. "I am not interested."

It was learned that if the Government intends to proceed against Long it must do so quickly, as the statute of limitations relating to the chief Long issue will expire in March.

The Long investigation had its inception in the summer of 1932, when his political opponents in Louisiana presented to the Bureau of Internal Revenue charges concerning Long and leaders in his political organization. Elmer L. Irey, chief of the bureau's intelligence unit, conducted an investigation. A report found its way to the desk of Ogden L. Mills, then Acting Secretary of the Treasury, but no action was taken.

Roosevelt Revives Case.

The next move came last September, when John M. Parker, a former governor of Louisiana, conferred with Commissioner of Internal Revenue Helvering and later, by invitation, with Postmaster General Farley. The entire file of the case thereupon was forwarded to President Roosevelt to decide whether it should be pushed or dropped. He

Death Parts Twins After 99 Years

Survivor Not to Be Told of Sister's Demise.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Death today parted twins in their 100th year. And the survivor will never be told of her sister's death.

Mrs. Jeannette Lauchheimer—she would have been 100 years old January 16—died at the home here of her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Harris.

Her twin, Mrs. Henriette Dannenbaum, of Philadelphia, is an invalid, and Mrs. Harris said she will not be informed of the tragedy, as the shock might kill her.

The sisters came to America 73 years ago from Germany.

Cash Cleaners Plan to Seek Further Cuts

Association Head Says Gen. Johnson Wrong About Quality.

Isadore Paul, president of the Retail Cleaning Stores and Outlet Association, said yesterday that his organization would continue to fight for lower dry cleaning prices. He declared, however, that meanwhile he would advise his membership to accept the prices fixed Thursday by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

"We are far from satisfied with Gen. Johnson's answer to our protests against the ridiculously high prices first established," said Paul. "We will, however, urge our members to abide by the new price schedule while continuing to fight for prices the public can afford to pay."

Johnson Raps Quality.

Originally, the recovery administration had fixed minimum prices for cleanng and pressing men's suits and women's plain dresses at 65, 75, 85 and 95 cents, respectively. The cash-and-carry cleaners who operate on a lower cost basis, objected so strenuously that they won a 20 per cent horizontal cut in these rates.

In granting the concession, Gen. Johnson declared: "The evidence clearly shows the differential in cost as between the so-called cash and carry cleaners and so-called call and deliver cleaners is not, in general, due to any saving by the cash and carry method.

"It is clear, from the evidence, that the existing wide differences in prices are accompanied by wide differences in the quality of the work and there is some demand for scamped work."

This statement also drew Paul's fire yesterday.

"We also strenuously object," he said, "to the statement that the public wants 'scamped' or inferior work. The highest quality of cleaning can be given at prices far below the minimum price now established.

Challenges Johnson.

"Speaking for my own company, the Kent Stores, Inc., operating 18 stores in Brooklyn, Queens and Long Island, we can make a handsome profit with a base price of 50 cents instead of the 70 and 75 cents we will now charge.

"We challenge Gen. Johnson to show that the quality of our work is in any way inferior to that being done by call and delivery concerns at prices more than double.

"We intend," he added, "to petition for a further downward revision of prices to the proposed Price Study Board as soon as it is established."

Pupils Enlist As Santa Aids

Youngsters at the Bancroft School are busy these days aiding Santa Claus to see that every needy child gets a remembrance Christmas morning.

Under the direction of Mrs. Mary Bowie, pupils of the various classes have collected, reconditioned, painted and wrapped more than 500 toys and dolls. With each gift will go a box of candy.

Girls in the upper grades have also had their hands full. Approximately 17 crazy quilts have been pieced together. Each is lined with cotton batting and finishing touches are supplied by their mothers.

School principals throughout the city will take charge of distribution.

Miss Grace Lind, principal of the Bancroft School, announced that about 30 bundles of clean clothes and 60 pairs of shoes will also be distributed.

Woman, 55, Is Struck By Car, Badly Injured

Mrs. Viola Dale, 55, of 1368 Euclid street northwest, was struck last night by an automobile while crossing Fourteenth street near Euclid. She was in a serious condition in Garfield Hospital.

Hundreds Remain Unaided as Demand Exceeds The Post's Fund.

Social welfare agencies were in danger of failing to bring a merry Christmas to every needy child in the city last night, as thousands of toys were distributed without reducing the apparent demand.

Unemployment and calls for aid from relatives upon those with incomes have reduced the ranks of donors this year, and the demand has exceeded the supply.

More than 5,000 toys have been distributed by The Post Toy and Doll Fund to organizations which will give them to the children under their care. Hundreds of individual pleas, after investigation, have been answered. But all day yesterday the telephone of the Santa Claus lady rang. Each call was a request from some group determined to bring a merry Christmas to its charges through The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund.

Fund Still Short.

The fund was still $350 short of its $1,000 quota when the day's gifts were counted. The Santa Claus Lady refused to be pessimistic, however, and insisted, "of course we are going to reach our quota. I know there are enough persons interested in our fund to contribute the $350 we lack. We will get it in dimes if it does not come in dollars."

Three hundred and fifty persons giving a dollar each, 700 contributing half dollars, or 3,500 each sending in a dime by tomorrow morning can justify her faith that Washington will make good its promise: "A toy for every needy child in the city at Christmas time."

All money donations should be sent to The Post Toy and Doll Fund, Washington Post, and gifts of toys—used toys in good condition or new ones—may be left at either The Washington Post or the headquarters of The Post Toy and Doll Fund in the Washington Building.

Only two days are left.

Operators Give Dolls.

Representatives of Motion Picture Operators Union, No. 224, yesterday brought a box of brand new dolls and harmonicas as their donation to the Toy and Doll Fund. The Santa Claus Lady thanks the Motion Picture Operators Union heartily, in behalf of the scores of children who will be made happy by their gift.

Post Toy and Doll Fund yesterday were:

Doctor Orders Quiet Yule for Rockefeller

Tarrytown, N. Y., Dec. 21 (U.P.)—John D. Rockefeller, sr., has been ordered by his physicians to spend Christmas quietly in his home here, it was said by members of his household today. The 94-year-old millionaire's health has been frail since he suffered an attack of grippe several weeks ago.

Parley Chiefs Strive to Save Chaco Truce

Ask Paraguay and Bolivia to Accept Board of Inquiry.

Montevideo, Dec. 21 (AP).—Pan-American Conference leaders tonight telegraphed the presidents of Paraguay and Bolivia asking their agreement to the appointment of a subcommission which will investigate charges that Paraguay violated the Chaco armistice.

This action followed an announcement that the Pan-American Conference will be prolonged several days in order to assure the establishment of peace in the Chaco.

Bolivia chargees that Paraguay violated the 11-day truce by capturing four forts on the eve of the armistice, which began at midnight last Tuesday, have resulted in a two-day postponement of plenary conference sessions, in an effort to smooth over the new difficulty.

Hull Hears Complaints.

Secretary of State Hull, Alberto Mane, Uruguayan Minister, of Foreign Affairs; Miguel Cruchaga, of Chile; Carlos Saavedra Lamas, of Argentina, and others met at the Uruguayan Chancellery today and heard both Bolivian and Paraguayan delegates separately. After a three-hour session they telegraphed the presidents of both countries.

The atmosphere prevalent after today's meeting indicated strong hope that a proposed examination of the alleged truce violation would enable continuance of the armistice and the resumption of efforts to seek a basis of permanent peace negotiations.

Diplomats were faced with the fear that news of the fall of Fort Munoz, important Bolivian stronghold captured on Tuesday, might result in the overthrow of the Bolivian government under Salamanca and the establishment of a military regime. This was considered one of the chief reasons for vital concern in the conference over the Bolivian protest.

Paraguayans here said they had received the details of the fall of Fort Munoz on Tuesday, which they said occurred at 11 p. m., one hour before the truce became effective. They said the fort was occupied "without enemy resistance and was found totally burned, revealing that the enemy had earlier decided upon evacuation. All our troops loyally complied with the armistice."

Chief Takes Forced Ride in New "Wagon"

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—Dedication of a new patrol wagon by police of suburban Berwyn was a success today until Chief John Regan was locked in and the key lost for 45 minutes.

The chief got the first ride in the "Black Maria" but when Officer Tony Weber sought the key to release his superior, he found only a hole in his pocket. After the key had been found Chief Regan ordered a dozen duplicates made at once.

Sound in Air

Science to Try Radio on Stratosphere.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 21 (AP).—Soundings are being taken in the sky by much the same method that mariners use.

Reversing the deep sea method of plumbing the depths of the ocean with sound waves, science is now experimenting with radio waves to sound the stratosphere.

Atmospheric conditions permitting, a demonstration of this method of upper-air soundings will be given next week during the ninety-third annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

While there is no land up above, there is a stream of ionized particles many miles above the earth known as the Kennelly-heaviside layer.

This "ceiling" is of great interest to scientists because it is believed to reflect short wave radio signals, and may be one of the chief causes for radio fading, particularly in the shorter wave lengths.

Public to Hear Macy Charges

N. Y. Chairman Is Asked to Attend Hearing. Next Week.

Albany, Dec. 21 (AP).—The way was opened today for the public to "sit in judgment" on Republican State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy's charge that the New York Assembly is the legislative tool of great power corporations.

A committee from the Republican-controlled Assembly "respectfully requested" their own State chairman to appear at a public hearing Wednesday to substantiate his charge. Macy declared at a meeting of county chairmen December 8 that H. Edmund Machold, former Republican State chairman, now a power executive, controls the Assembly through the Republican-appointed clerk, Fred Hammond.

The committee of legislators, saying integrity of the Assembly was at stake, called on Macy to "give the facts upon which he based his charges, before the Republicans organize the 1934 Assembly January 3."

"When he presents his facts the public will sit in judgment," the committee announced.

Gandhi's U. S. Disciple Held for Test of Mind

Calcutta, India, Dec. 21 (U.P.)—Nila Cram Cook, Mahatma M. K. Gandhi's American disciple, was a patient in a mental hospital today.

Surgeons were unable to examine her because she would not speak except to denounce them. It was understood authorities were considering deporting her to the United States.

Happiness Comes to Home Of Girl Asleep Two Years

Christmas Season Finds Her Showing Charge for Better.

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 21 (AP)—There is more happiness this Christmas season in a modest yellow house here, for pretty 29-year-old Patricia Maguire is showing signs that might be interpreted as approaching an awakening from a sleep of nearly two years.

There was a lilt of hope in the voice of her mother, Mrs. Peter Miley, as she told today of little things that seemed to her a decided improvement in the condition of her youngest daughter, who has been unconscious since February 15, 1932, a victim of sleeping sickness.

Now Shows Improvement.

Patricia was very ill about a month ago—nearly died, her mother related. But lately her doctors, the mother said, are much encouraged.

Now, her mother said Patricia can sit up, propped with pillows, for short periods before making it known in a mumbling sort of way, familiar to her mother and sister, Mrs. Charles Hanson, who have tended her through the long illness, that she is tired. Pat is showing increased signs of restlessness, Mrs. Miley said.

Part of the care given her has been to have a dentist come in periodically to examine and clean her teeth.

Can Take Solids.

Among these now is for her to take a little solid food—cereals, mashed vegetables, custards—and chew them with the aid of her mother gently working her jaw.

Pat's case has attracted wide attention, and already, her mother said, Christmas cards of well wishes have come to the family from many parts of the country—some addressed to Pat.

The family plans a tree and a regular Christmas dinner—and a barber came in to give Pat a hair cut, for she is part of the picture of Yuletide gayety in the home, even though she slumbers on.

Guardian Bank Assets Padded, Witness States

Ford Company Declared Among Those Making Temporary Loans.

(Associated Press.)

Huge temporary loans by such large depositors as the Ford Motor Co. to build up the resource sheet of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc., and show a highly satisfactory condition when bank reports were about to be made, were described yesterday before the Senate Investigating Committee.

The committee, inquiring into the Detroit banking collapse, was told by Robert O. Lord, who was president of the group, that funds were borrowed in order "to increase our deposits and to take us out of bills payable."

Questioned closely by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, Lord agreed that it had been a practice to make requests of large holders such as the Ford company, but insisted the purpose was primarily to remove indebtedness.

Time of Loans Argued.

Pecora sought to show these requests were made shortly before the regular call of the Comptroller of the Currency for a statement of condition of all banks and before reports of condition were about to be made to the public.

Just previously Pecora read into the record a lengthy letter from the Comptroller of Currency, written to directors of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, in which the Comptroller criticized the bank's assets and particularly a repurchasing agreement involving $4,495,000 with the Guardian Union Co.

Criticism also was directed at real estate holdings. The Comptroller said the aggregate of criticized and doubtful assets almost equaled the capital structure and called attention to bond losses.

Lord told the committee that although the letter was received late in January it never was presented to the board of directors until after the State banking holiday was declared in February.

Annual Statement Attacked.

Pecora attacked the annual statement of the bank issued on December 31, 1929, and asked if seven banks included in the units listed as members of the holding company actually were in the group on that date.

He read the names of the Grand Rapids National Bank, the Grand Rapids Trust Co., the Peoples National Bank of Jackson, the First National Bank & Trust Co., of Kalamazoo, the City National Bank & Trust Co., of Niles, the Capital National Bank of Lansing, and the Second National Bank of Saginaw, with total resources of $63,552,000.

Lord insisted that the report was sent out with a letter to the stockholders on January 28, 1930, when these banks had become members of the group. Pecora's persistence that the institutions were listed as members on a date prior to their actual membership brought only the reiteration from Lord that the report and letter were not mailed until January 28.

In attempting to develop that large depositors were solicited from time to time to add temporarily to the bank's resources, Pecora introduced in evidence a certificate of deposit that had been placed in the Union Industrial Bank of Flint in the amount of $600,000 on December 31, 1931, by the Guardian Detroit Bank.

He then presented an exhibit showing the certificate was withdrawn in 1932, and asked Lord if that was "a case where deposits were used to offset bills payable." Lord said he "presumed it was."

The committee counsel inquired as to whether the bills payable were reinstalled after the certificates of deposit had been used to offset them.

"It is quite possible," Lord said, "that they were restored at the first of the year, when the banks were in need of funds."

U. S. Pledges of 11 Millions.

Referring to the report of the condition of the Guardian National Bank of Commerce to the Comptroller of the Currency on November 9, 1932, Pecora said it listed United States pledges in the amount of $11,021,144, and $3,596,145 unpledged, and asked if the December 31, 1932 report contained pledging of bonds.

Lord said some of the unit banks had reported safe-keeping bonds because they thought it would "build up the bank's picture." He said he never favored the practice but that he understood it was favored by the State banking commissioner.

Evidence was presented that the Guardian bank had loans of more than $4,000,000 to its directors outstanding in May, 1932, in addition to other loans of $3,338,000 for which the directors were guarantors.

Kellogg Returns For Xmas at Home

World Court Judge Is 77 Today.

St. Paul, Dec. 21 (AP).—Frank B. Kellogg, judge of the World Court and former United States Secretary of State, returned here with Mrs. Kellogg to spend his seventy-seventh birthday tomorrow and Christmas at their home.

He commented only briefly on international affairs. Some parts of Europe, he said, "are recovering fully as much, possibly more," from the depression than America, and asserted the last few months had brought a significant recession of European war talk.

He said he planned to remain all winter, but planned no birthday celebration.

No Rest

Labor Employes Must Work Holiday on Report.

The Federal holiday tomorrow just won't mean a thing to the workers in the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It is the plan of the bureau's heads to get the Federal cost-of-living report to the White House tomorrow. In order to complete the report, the bureau supervisors and many of the staff, who have been working nights to complete the survey, will have to work most of tomorrow.

They expect to complete the work late in the day and get it to President Roosevelt for determining whether the 15 per cent pay cut shall be restored.

2 Kidnapings Baffle Police Of Two States

Hagerstown Men Silent After Armed Gang Loots Home.

Two kidnapings of a peculiar nature mystified police of Maryland and Pennsylvania yesterday.

In one which occurred at York, Pa., the first evidence of an "oyster racket" was seen, according to the Associated Press.

The other, near Hagerstown, Md., became more obscure when the kidnaped man refused to discuss the matter.

At York, the oyster delivery truck of two Crisfield, Md., men was hijacked. Harold Ward and Milburn Elliott told police they were held up, blindfolded and held prisoner in a house for 24 hours.

Men Threatened.

They were released and walked 8 miles to York, where they told their story to a policeman. Police have not found the stolen truck.

At Hagerstown, Russell Clark, 35, refused, on advice of his attorney, to discuss the raid in which eight heavily armed men seized him and a helper, Albert Huntzberry.

Nor would he talk about the contents of an outbuilding which the eight men loaded into Clark's truck and hauled away. Police had not located his truck nor a truck and car which the men brought with them.

The men took Clark and Huntzberry with them and released them near Kensington, Md., several hours later.

Wife, Children Held.

Clark's wife said she was held prisoner with her three children, her husband and Huntzberry for nearly an hour before she slipped from a side door unnoticed and went to the home of a neighbor, where she phoned authorities at Hagerstown.

The eight men, two of them guarding Clark and Huntzberry while the remainder loaded the trucks, remained at the Clark home for two hours. Sending the trucks ahead, the leader and a companion and their two captives followed. All three cars eluded State and county police, who were notified half an hour before they left the Clark home.

Mrs. Clark said she was aroused shortly after 1 o'clock by cars driving into the yard beside the pretentious Clark mansion. A moment later she heard a rap on the back door, and her husband went down and asked who was there? "A friend of Slim," some one replyed. Clark looked through the window and failing to recognize the man, asked him what he wanted.

"We're Federal men, and you open up," Mrs. Clark said she heard one of them say. She gave her husband a revolver. As he started down the stairs, the door was smashed and two men stepped in, each carrying a submachine gun. When the leader, a man about 40, saw Clark with a gun, he shot twice, the bullets lodging in the stairs, and then disarmed Clark.

He slipped handcuffs on both Clark and Huntzberry, who had come into the room, ordered Mrs. Clark upstairs to dress and told her she was going to be handcuffed.

He followed her upstairs, while his companion guarded Clark and Huntzberry and began ransacking the room.

A daughter, Adeline, 12, came down stairs, and Clark whispered to her to get a roll of money from his rear pocket. She was seen, and Clark was relieved of a considerable sum.

Mrs. Clark, in the meantime, slipped out and phoned police.

written assurances that this quantity of American fruit would be sold regardless of the increase in cost produced by the imposition of taxes on licenses to import.

Representatives of Portugal, Spain, Haiti and Hungary were also heard by the committee yesterday. Spain sought an increase of 395,000 gallons in its wine quota. American officials expressed a willingness to consider such an increase if Spain would buy more tobacco in this country.

Control Up to Congress.

The final determination of how much and in what manner the Federal Government will control liquor must be decided by Congress. The Federal Alcohol Control Administration, created by President Roosevelt, is of a temporary nature. Its life expires on December 31, although it is probable the President will continue it until Congress decides what permanent agency it desires to administer all control except that relating to revenue, which is a function of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

It is expected the bills relating directly to control will be handled by the Judiciary Committees of the Senate and House.

Taxes Chief Concern.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, chairman of the Senate committee, said yesterday he had not talked with committee members, but that he personally believed the matter of control, so far as legislation was concerned, revolved around two points—keeping liquor out of dry States and whipping into shape any laws necessary for strengthening the liquor tax system.

Two general courses are open to Congress in enacting legislation relating purely to the control phase of the question—to set up its own agency or to continue, by Congressional enactment, the life of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

In either case, it was pointed out, the complaints of prices and equality are more than likely to crop up in consideration of the proposed legislation.

Trouble Hinted Elsewhere.

Hints of trouble ahead have come from other quarters on Capitol Hill. Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, a physician, has protested against the use of blended whisky in the filling of drug-store prescriptions, and a similar complaint has been voiced by Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York. Dr. Shirley Wynne, health commissioner of New York City, has added to the complaints his criticism of the quality of liquor sold under Federal Government permits.

Attorney General Cummings revealed yesterday that the Justice Department considered these permits "an enormous big stick" in the Government's fight against bootleg operations.

Cummings said consideration was being given to consolidation of all governmental investigating agencies to combat the threatened flow of illicit liquor from a supply which has been estimated as high as 40,000,000 gallons.

Points to Duplication.

"There has been," he said at a press conference, "a good deal of duplication in the Revenue Bureau, the prohibition unit and the Customs Bureau, for example. Sometimes two or three agents have been on the same spot.

"Some consideration is being given to consolidating certain powers so that an agent finding a violation does not have to go to another division of the Government before action can be taken."

Cummings made it clear there was not unanimity of opinion on the question of unifying investigating agencies.

"There always is some resistance to consolidation," he said. "Somebody loses jobs and there is always pride in organization. It is this trait, a commendable one, which causes mushrooming and leads to bureaucracy."

Pending a ruling by the Supreme Court on whether the Government can prosecute prohibition cases coming to the courts before repeal, Cummings said his department would concentrate on cases of gangster or habitual criminal types wherever courts accept the view that such cases still can be pressed.

Northwest Floods Take Three Lives

Sixth Day of Rain Swells Inundated Areas.

Andrew Montag, 52, drowned in his flooded basement while trying to save furniture from rising water. An unidentified track walker of Seattle also was drowned.

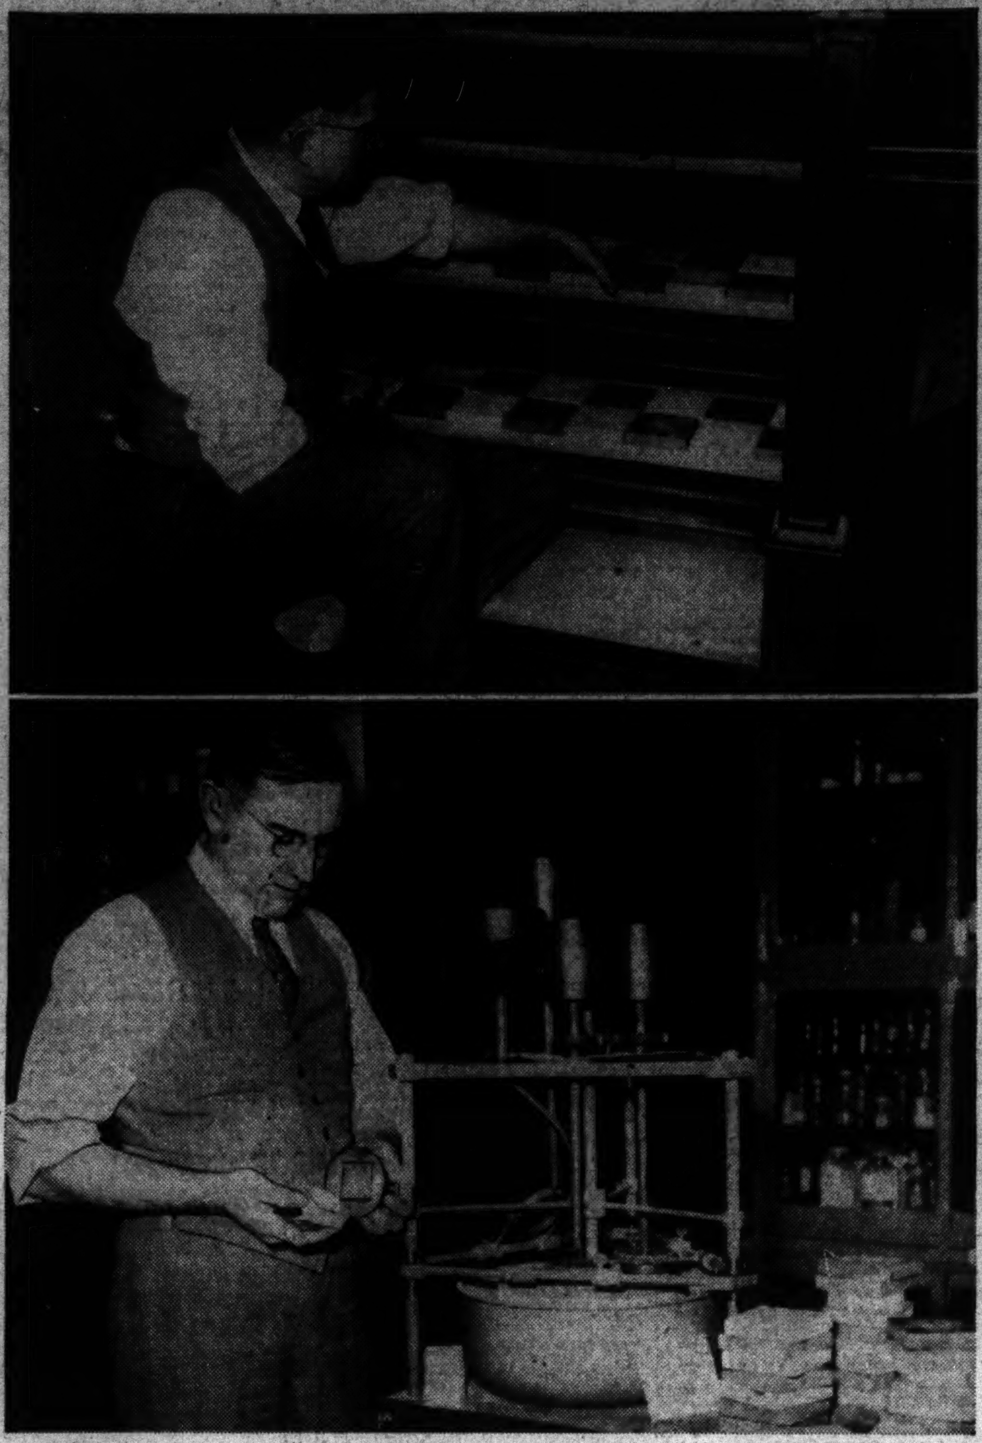
Siegel Morris, 59, of Raymond, perished when his motor car, driven in a heavy rain, crashed through a bridge rail at Aberdeen and sank in 30 feet of water.

A new record for rainfall in December was set up in Seattle with 12.33 inches.

Woman's Purse Snatched.

A pocketbook snatching last night netted a shabby colored robber $4 and a rosary. They were in a handbag he grabbed from Mrs. Minnie Heitman, of 1925 Sixteenth street northwest, at Sixteenth street and Florida avenue. After pushing Mrs. Heitman into the street, the man escaped through an alley.

It's Still the Stone Age for U. S. Scientist Who Measures Resistance of Stairways



Underwood & Underwood.

Uncle Sam can't keep stone flooring from wearing out, but he can tell you before you put it down how it will endure. D. W. Kessler, of the Bureau of Standard, demonstrates the two methods. One employs blocks made of the material to be tested, which are laid on stairways; the other is by a complex machine which indicates how elements will affect the stone.

Kessler Discovers How Footsteps Wear Away Materials.

D. W. Kessler, Bureau of Standards specialist, who has developed his art to the point where he can almost measure the strength of a stony glance, is still at work on experiments to determine how much footsteps wear away stone stairways.

Yesterday he was found in the Connecticut avenue experimental station deeply concerned with a machine which reveals how well (or how poorly), various materials react to continuous pedal pounding. It works thus:

Specimens of stone are placed in the machine and held against a moving surface under various pressures, governed by weights at the top of the device. All the while a gear train rotates them to insure even wear. After a certain period, the stone sample is removed, weighed on a sensitive scale and presto! your gain there has been a loss.

Simpler to comprehend are his stone blocks made of materials which are to be tested. They are placed on a much-used flight of steps. The punishment lasts for, say an hour or a day, when the blocks are removed and weighed. If they have shrunk little, it's probably a sale. If they can't take it, well, probably some tougher stone will get the call.

Three years ago Mr. Kessler made tests on stone samples from Washington Monument, demonstrating how time and weather have taken toll of the obelisk. Incidentally, bids will be opened in a few days to waterproof it and otherwise remedy defects.

To most folks this is the twentieth century but to Mr. Kessler it is still the stone age.

Connally Assails Louisiana Rule Under Long's Regime

Insists Committee Report Condemn Political Practices.

Political practices under the Long regime in Louisiana yesterday came in for the scathing criticism of Chairman Tom Connally, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, following an informal attempt to agree on a report.

Senator Connally said he will insist the report "contain a condemnation of the political practice in Louisiana of having so-called 'dummy candidates,' whereby control of the election machinery is secured and exercised."

The committee chairman denounced the alleged practice of compulsory assessment of State employes for political purposes as "reprehensible and vicious."

Fail to Agree.

Although no formal agreement was reached on provisions of the report, the committee decided to meet again next week, when tentative recommendations to the Senate will be drawn.

Inasmuch as the election of Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, has never been formally contested, the committee is not expected to challenge his right to a Senate seat, although the Overton primaries were investigated at length.

Following a formal statement on yesterday's committee session, Senator Connally, appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee on tax legislation, told House members he had just emerged "from the muck and mud of Louisiana's bitter factionalism."

He said his investigating group performed its duty "without fear of fowls or fishes, Kingfishes or otherwise."

Assails State Law.

Earlier the Texas Senator told newspapermen:

"The failure of Louisiana law to limit campaign expenditures and the failure of Louisiana law to require sworn statements of campaign expenditures and the failure to require any form of accounting or bookkeeping regarding campaign expenditures, added greatly to the difficulties of the committee in its investigations.

"Louisiana ought to have a corrupt practices act. In my view, the committee should also point out the deplorable political conditions in Louisiana for the information and guidance of the Senate and the interest of electoral reform for the country generally."

He said the committee was "greatly hindered, harassed and annoyed by the bitter factional quarrels of the two political groups in Louisiana."

Man Finds Cache Of Robbers' Gold

Austin, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Authorization from Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson to move gold and silver coins reportedly hidden by the Sam Bass band of robbers at a cache "eight miles west of Georgetown," was asked today by a man who said he was A. Modgling, of Brownwood.

Modgling, tall, weather-beaten, erect despite his 62 years, said that when a boy he was captured by members of the Bass gang and was held by them for 14 years. He said he then learned of the cache. He said he visited it recently and saw the money, now tarnished by corrosion.

77 Take Boats in Snowstorm When Canadian Ship Hits Rock

Pacific Vessel Saved After 3 Race to Answer SOS in Gale.

Vancouver, British Columbia, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Canadian National liner Prince George crashed on a rock in a blinding snowstorm last night on the British Columbia coast and was refloated today after passengers and crew were rowed ashore.

A gale was blowing and the temperature was near zero as the vessel hit Vadso Rock, near Anyox, British Columbia. S O S was flashed and three ships raced to the rescue. The Prince George was abandoned early today by the 17 passengers and crew of 60.

"Capt. McLean gave the order for us to take to the boats, women and children first," said Anton Pervich, one of the passengers. "We were given blankets to protect us from the cold. It was snowing very hard. Every one took places in an orderly fashion. There were four or five women and three children."

In Anyox, Thomas Louden, superintendent of the Canadian National, who was a passenger, sent a tugboat to pull the Prince George off the rocks.

"Most of the passengers were getting their belongings together in readiness for landing at Anyox. Suddenly there was a long grinding sound and the ship seemed to shudder all over as it lurched to a stop," Pervich said.

"After we waited about an hour, Capt. McLean gave the order to abandon ship."

Meanwhile, the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Alert, the Prince John, of the Canadian National Lines, and a relief boat had caught the S O S and were racing to the rescue.

Wife Burns Toast, Then Slays Mate

Stabbing Follows Fight Over Spoiled Food.

San Diego, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Because she burned the toast for her husband's breakfast, Mrs. Nora D. Norton, 24, was in a jail cell here today awaiting police action for a murder warrant against her.

Mrs. Norton, informed of her husband's death, said she stabbed him at the height of a quarrel over the burned toast, police said.

Boy, 4, Critically Hurt; Police Hold Motorist

According to police, the child ran into the street after a ball and was struck by a car. Ellsworth W. Colbert, 25, colored, of 305 D street southeast, said to be the driver of the car, is being held by police pending outcome of the child's injuries.

7 Lose Lives as Ship Sinks After Collision

Hull, England, Dec. 21 (AP).—Seven lives were lost today when the trawler Kurd collided with and sank the Swedish steamer Castor off Flamborough Head in a dense fog. The trawler rescued the captain and five members of the crew of the Castor and brought them here.

The Swedish ship went to the bottom two minutes after the collision. A stewardess was among those lost.

Milk Profits Are Exorbitant, Says Wallace

U. S. Trying to Aid Farmer, Not Fix Companies' Incomes, He Avers.

(By Associated Press.)

Secretary Wallace replied yesterday to charges of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation with a denunciation of milk distributors.

The Secretary's statement came on the eve of a meeting at which farm leaders and dairy representatives will discuss the farm act and especially its application to dairying.

The federation had charged him with not having fulfilled a promise to purchase 61,000,000 pounds of butter, of being responsible for the recent slump of butter prices, and failure to purchase cheese.

Calls Profits Exorbitant.

Secretary Wallace said:

"The issue is whether a fair share of returns should go to the dairy farmers or whether a good deal of the cream of profits taken from producers and consumers should go to a few companies distributing milk."

His statement was based on a recent audit of the books of producers and distributors in the Chicago area following a hearing on the Chicago milk marketing agreement. The agreement was terminated by the Secretary Wednesday.

With the figures from this audit at hand Secretary Wallace said "to our own knowledge the profits of some milk companies, including subsidiaries of big holding companies, are exorbitant to say the least."

Charles W. Holman, secretary of the federation, said marketing agreements should "specify resale prices of milk and its products." To this the Secretary replied, "it is not our duty to enforce fixed prices to the consumers.

"I have publicly stated my position that we should use the powers of Government under our act to lift farm prices, not distributors' prices," he said. "Mr. Holman for the first time has publicly stated his position, which is that we should enforce distributors' resale prices.

"While the dairy farmer is sweating under ruinous prices, it is scarcely the function of a Government department devoted to the interests of agriculture to scatter its resources in efforts to enforce exorbitant profits to some milk companies."

Crawford Plea To Be Delayed

Prosecutor Wants to Be Sure of Aid in Hunt for Accomplice.

Richmond, Dec. 21 (AP).—John Galleher, Commonwealth's attorney of Loudoun County, said today that assurance must be given that George Crawford will really assist in the apprehension of his accomplice in the double murder of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley and her maid, Mrs. Nina Buckner, before he will consent to recommend that the Negro be given life imprisonment on a plea of guilty on the Buckner indictment.

Crawford's chief counsel, Charles H. Houston, has made this proposal to Galleher. The Negro has been found guilty by a Loudoun County jury of the murder of Mrs. Ilsley and sentenced to life imprisonment. The Buckner indictment still stands against him.

Houston's suggestion was that he plead guilty, with the understanding that he would be given life and thus be afforded opportunity to help find another Negro he calls "Charlie Johnson" who, he said, really killed the two Middleburg Women while Crawford stood on the outside of the cottage.

Get Out by Jan. 31, Greece Tells Insull

Fugitive Utilities Magnate Silent on Next Move.

Athens, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Greek government decided today that Samuel Insull, sr., former Chicago utilities operator, must leave Greece on January 31.

Greek courts twice have refused the American request for the 74-year-old fugitive, but the present decision has no relation to the Greek courts.

Federal Farm Called Center Of Patronage

Men "Forcibly" Hired at Beltsville, Council Charges.

The Agriculture Department's experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., has been turned into a patronage dispensary, according to a complaint made yesterday by the Washington Building Trades Council.

Many mechanics in the various trades have been hired through pressure brought by their Congressmen, even though they are not needed, said John Locher, secretary of the council. He brought his charges to Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who asked that they be put in writing.

Locher said he has learned 100 men were "forcibly" hired at the agricultural station, where many new buildings are being constructed and which has been proposed as the site of a subsistence homestead demonstration.

He also charged that bricklayers, plasterers, plumbers and all other mechanics on the job are not being paid prevailing wage scales, contrary to public and civil works regulations. Neither are they being hired through proper channels, said Locher.

The council's protest earlier this week that CWA provisions are not being carried out in the system of hiring union workmen on Washington projects will be laid before the District Commissioners, at the suggestion of the Civil Works Administration.

House Group Votes $2 Tax for Liquor

Treasury experts estimate a $2 tax will at least return $220,000,000 annually to the Treasury, while receipts may run as high as $300,000,000 the first year.

Chairman Doughton has reached an understanding with the President and House leaders whereby the liquor tax bill will be introduced in the House as soon as Congress convenes, and rushed through both Houses ahead of the general revenue bill.

As the domestic liquor tax now stands at $1.10 a gallon, Administration officials are anxious the new bill be enacted as rapidly as possible to avoid loss of revenue. On the revenue count, there is no complaint against the present $5 tax a gallon on imported liquor. Members instead feel it should be rapidly modified, however, to discourage smuggling and bootlegging.

Testimony before the committee on new revenue legislation yesterday ranged from farm groups seeking 2½ to 5 cent tax per pound on imports of edible oils and fats to representatives of the Theater Code Authority, asking elimination of the 10 per cent admissions tax "to save the legitimate stage from ruin."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, vigorously opposed the proposal of Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to force married couples in all States to file joint-income tax returns.

Senator Connally declared all income is earned "jointly" by husband and wife, and each have a right to file separate returns for their proportionate share.

"If the Treasury says that isn't so, it lies," he told the committee.

Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the American Automobile Association, led a delegation of witnesses protesting Federal taxation of motor transportation, including the Federal gasoline tax, the tax on passenger cars, trucks, accessories and parts, tires and tubes and lubricating oil.

Henry Moskowitz, of the Theater Code Authority, Frank Gilmore, of the Actors' Equity Association, and Fred Dempsey, of the stage hands' union, who testified 6,000 theaters have been forced to close in the past five years, said repeal of the admissions tax would do much to revive the industry.

The American Bar Association, as represented by George M. Morris, requested that the United States Board of Tax Appeals be given full jurisdiction over refund claims to expedite settlements and relieve the courts.

A. M. Loomis, secretary of the National Dairy Union, led witnesses seeking internal revenue taxes on imported vegetable oils and animal fats competing with domestic productions.

Tire Workers Fight For Code Wage Boost

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 21 (AP).—Organized labor today started a movement for a higher minimum wage provision in the new rubber tire code as the Akron Beacon Journal reported discussion of a tire price increase.

Frederick L. Phillips, labor advisory board member at the code hearing and financial secretary of the B. F. Goodrich workers' local, asserted that an immediate fight will be started to increase the minimum wage from 40 to 60 cents an hour.

Cut Is Sought In Fast Trains

Report to Eastman Asks Reduction in Service to Northwest.

There will be only one instead of three deluxe passenger trains from Chicago and the Twin Cities to Seattle, if recommendations presented yesterday to Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, are put into effect.

The recommendation is contained in the Frederick H. Prince plan of railroad consolidation, studies of which are being prepared for Eastman, according to the Associated Press. The results of the studies made public yesterday point out that seven full sets of equipment are used by each railroad to operate the deluxe trains. The trains mentioned are the Great Northern's "Empire Builder," the Northern Pacific's "North Coast Limited," and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific's "Olympian."

It is suggested that the Great Northern continue to operate its present fast mail train, but that it cease functioning as a deluxe passenger line. The one train favored would operate via the St. Paul from Twin Cities to Terry, Mont., via the Northern Pacific from Terry to Logan, Mont., and via the St. Paul to Seattle.

Long, Suffering Reprisals, Calls Council of War

Denies He'll Pick Own City Ticket, But New Orleans Says He Will.

New Orleans, Dec. 21 (AP).—Forced into the unfamiliar role of sidelines spectator on the eve of a hot political campaign, Senator Huey P. Long late today called his "war council" into superprivate session atop the Roosevelt Hotel while all Louisiana guessed itself blue in the face on what his next move would be.

The shaping of a straight "Long ticket" to oppose the established Walmsley and Williams factions in the January mayoralty primary, in spite of the Senator's announcement of last night that he was "out" of the city race, was freely predicted.

A past master of the political coup and sudden maneuver, Long kept his plans to himself as the lieutenants of his machine gathered in his suite on the heels of his open break with the Walmsley organization and his circular announcement that he "would not be aligned with either the Walmsley or Williams crowd."

The same circular said over Long's signature that he would not enter a third ticket in the city race, because "nothing deserves such effort on our part. To capture the city hall now would be like Napoleon capturing Moscow, and we would probably be ruined by our new possessions."

"It sounds like a bunch of sour grapes to me," commented Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, candidate for reelection and head of the Old Regulars that broke off their alliance with Long after refusing to accept his suggestions on making up their ticket. "As Long as the Senator admits he is in retreat, it makes little difference whether he says he is retreating from Moscow or anywhere else."

Tax Reports of Vare, Long Investigated by U. S. Agents

decided about a month ago that the investigation should proceed.

While there have been no developments to connect Long with an illegal act, Government investigators feel that a method of compiling his income tax diffferent from the one used might enable the Treasury to collect about $350,000.

The names of Long and Vare were added to a list of big income taxpayers already under investigation. Revelations by the Senate Banking Committee of the fact that rich taxpayers have been able to avoid income tax payments have aroused public resentment and has stirred the activity of the Government.

Job Changes Hands.

The first step in the income tax campaign was taken June 10 when, by Executive order, the President transferred to the Justice Department the prosecution and defense of all tax cases in the Federal courts. These formerly had been handled by the general counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

With the transfer, 13 attorneys and many stenographers were sent from the Treasury to the Justice Department and an independent tax division was formed there.

Since then all important court cases which previously had been handled by local Federal district attorneys have been prosecuted by specialists from the tax division. Carrying to court of cases against big income tax evaders, however, it has been decided, will have to wait until the President can determine upon a man to head the division.

The President, it is known, has been seeking for the post a poor man and a liberal, with a personality that would attract public sentiment. He may be either a division chief or an Assistant Attorney General.

Among other taxpayers whose returns are being investigated are Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury during the last three Republican Administrations; Charles E. Mitchell, former president of the National City Bank of New York, and Thomas W. Lamont, a Morgan & Co. partner.

Meanwhile, an effort to collect an alleged income tax deficiency of more than $700,000 from John D. Rockefeller, jr., and another large sum from Edward L. Doheny, multimillionaire oil man, who figured in the Teapot Dome affair, will come to a head before the Board of Tax Appeals.

Both have petitioned the board to overrule the Treasury's attempt to collect. Rockefeller's case is awaiting assignment of a date for a hearing in Washington.

Government investigators are said to feel that a revision of Mellon's tax return might net the Government as much as $12,000,000.

Mitchell Tried, Acquitted.

The Mitchell case involves sales of securities which Mitchell made while he was president of the National City and led to his indictment on a charge of criminal violation of the revenue act and subsequent acquittal by a jury. A reported attempt to compromise the claim against Mitchell for $150,000 has been rejected by Acting Secretary Morgenthau, who has expressed the belief the Government can recover all of the $285,000 Mitchell is alleged to owe.

The Lamont case relates to a compromise by which the Wall street banker agreed to pay $111,575 to the Treasury to wipe out a deficiency which was charged to him by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Lamont had petitioned the Board of Tax Appeals to overrule the Government's attempt to collect $73,271 back taxes for 1929. However, when E. Barrett Prettyman, general counsel for the bureau, filed an answer charging Lamont owed more than $73,271 because during 1929 he realized more than $246,000 on a stock sale which the Government charged was not included in the net income reported by him, Lamont agreed to pay the first deficiency with additions for the securities profit.

The settlement, while ending possibility of further collections, need not stop possible prosecution, it was said.

7 More Favor Federal Wage CutElimination

135 in Congress Now in Line to Vote Restoration of 15 Per Cent.

Seven favorable replies from members of Congress yesterday added impetus to a poll by E. Claude Babcock, American Federation of Government Employes president, seeking to learn the extent of sentiment for restoration of the 15 per cent Federal pay cut.

The employes' leader interpreted the communications as indicating Congress would grant his salary demands early in the coming session. He reported 135 Senators and Representatives now have promised to vote for full restoration, 28 others have replied favorably without making any pledge, 17 were noncommittal and 2 others were opposed.

New comment included:

Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio: "It seems to me that the increase in price of the necessities of life, which seems to be continuing, will probably be enough to justify the early elimination of the 15 per cent reduction in Federal workers' pay."

Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky—When this matter first came up I thought it was unwise. I think I shall vote for elimination of the 15 per cent pay cut.

Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky—I hope it may be possible to eliminate this cut substantially or entirely at a very early date.

Representative Stephen M. Young (Democrat) Ohio—I would expect to vote under present conditions for elimination of the pay cut to all Government employes receiving $3,000 or less per annum.

Representative Brent Spence (Democrat), Kentucky—The curtailment of salaries will not aid industrial recovery. I am for a high standard of wages and will be glad to vote for elimination of the cut in salaries.

Representative Charles V. Truax (Democrat), Ohio—With wages of industrial workers being raised, hours shortened and commodities advanced, I see no reason why the 15 per cent cut should not be restored.

Another favorable reply was received from Representative John B. Hollister (Republican), Ohio, while Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), Ohio, and Representative William E. Hess (Republican), Ohio, were noncommittal.

Winter Park, Fla., Dec. 21 (AP). Mrs. Eda Mentz, 60, of Erie, Pa., was killed here today when her daughter accidentally backed their car over her mother.

Mrs. Mentz and her daughter had been visiting Mrs. Mentz's son in Texas and were returning home, stopping here to see an old friend they had known at Erie.

Miss Mentz was near collapse, police reported.

The club will also participate in the distribution of baskets filled with food in cooperation with the county welfare board tomorrow.

An appeal is made to citizens of the county to be generous in their contributions to the baskets, which will be found in all grocery stores.

Spying Charge Brings Denial By American

French Police Push Hunt for Leaders in Huge Asserted Plot.

Paris, Dec. 21 (AP).—Robert Switz, American, denied vehemently tonight police accusations that he may be connected with an international espionage syndicate which authorities believed would lead directly to "Germany's master organization."

"I am innocent," the 29-year-old native of East Orange, N. J., told his attorney, Charles Moyse, in Sante prison.

"I was the victim of an error."

Switz protested against imprisonment of his wife, the former Marjorie Tilley, 22, of New York, who was arrested with eight others after investigators had spent months in tracing clews officials believe may disclose far-flung ramifications.

Investigating Magistrate Benon was expected to make a thorough search of the couple's hotel room in the presence of the Americans on Saturday and to decide whether the pair should be held for trial.

U. S. Studies Case.

Theodore Marriner, American charge d'affaires in Paris, notified the Washington State Department that he had investigated the case as completely as possible and that Mr. and Mrs. Switz would be given preliminary hearings in Paris on December 23.

Robert D. Murphy, United States Consul, was assigned to investigate the detention of the Switzs.

Since the French counterespionage service was said by Police Commissioner Mondanelle to have uncovered two cases of spying pointing toward Russia, the Soviet angles were not dropped.

Martin, who authorities said knows 68 languages, was employed in the secret code room of the navy department.

Youth Says Police Used Third Degree

Beaten and Kicked, He Tells Inspector.

Directed by Inspector O. T. Davis, police officials last night were conducting an investigation into charges made yesterday by Raymond Hammer, 23, of 3161 Mount Pleasant street northwest, that he was kicked and beaten by officers while being held a prisoner.

In a statement yesterday to Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police, Hammer asserted Policeman J. C. Daniels, of the Tenth Precinct, struck him with his fist as he was being questioned in connection with the theft of a small check from Roosevelt High School. Daniels also kicked him on the leg, Hammer said.

Hammer was released from District Jail Wednesday, when the grand jury ignored a charge of housebreaking against him.

Gen. O'Duffy Wins Freedom

Irish Crowds Acclaim Blue Shirt Chief for "Victory."

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 21 (AP).—To the wild acclaim of his followers, Gen. Eoin O'Duffy, leader of the United Ireland party opposing the government, was released from the gloomy, gray-walled Arbour Hill Prison barracks tonight.

His freedom after five days of custody was gained on a justice's decision today that detention of the Blue Shirt head and his follower, Capt. John Sullivan, was illegal.

A crowd of sympathizers with the wearers of the Blue Shirt—a garb declared illegal by the government of President Eamon De Valera—rushed to the gates of the barracks and waited impatiently upon Justice O'Byrnes' order for their leader's release.

Once the gates swung backward, the crowd swarmed around O'Duffy and Sullivan, hoisted them on their shoulders and carried them to an automobile.

Supporters of O'Duffy, whose case has gripped all of Ireland, claimed he had won a triumph over the government.

Lowell Refuses Movie Code Post

Former Harvard President Bars "Honorary" Job.

The NRA met with rebuff from the man it was depending upon to bring new ideals to the motion picture industry yesterday when Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard, refused to serve as a Presidential appointee in the movie code authority.

Lowell, who has led a constant fight to inject a moral tone into sex pictures, was counted upon by the Administration to give new pressure to his campaign by reason of code authority membership. He declined the appointment offered by President Roosevelt, however, on the ground that the job was merely "honorary" and Presidential appointees have no vote.

The National Jitters.

Jesse L. Livermore, well known to the bulls and bears of Wall street, having consorted with both, walked out of his apartment on Park avenue, New York, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock and entered a taxicab, which, in the reportorial cliche, "whisked him away."

Twelve hours later, Mrs. Livermore notified the police, her husband's attorney and friends that Jesse had not returned to his home. Fourteen hours after Mr. Livermore had settled back into a taxicab to watch the meter click, the Missing Persons Bureau of the New York Police Department, a special squad of detectives and Federal Department of Justice operatives were looking for him. Within 18 hours after he innocently departed from his own vine and figtree, newspapers all over the United States had plastered his name across their front pages in big type.

Such is the jittery condition of this country that all 130,000,000 of us almost breathlessly awaited the ransom note which usually is the second development in a kidnaping plot. But with utter disregard for climaxes and dramatics, Mr. Livermore alighted from a taxicab and entered his home at 6 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, just 26 hours after he had left it.

Certainly we are coming to an undesirable pass and developing some sort of complex when a man can not have a night out, or an interesting and prolonged conversation, or even innocent amnesia, without everybody in the country knowing about it and looking for his "kidnapers." Robinson Crusoe stayed out years on end and nobody made much fuss over it. Washington Irving, who told the story of "Rip Van Winkle," does not record that any great hue and cry went up when Rip climbed up into the Catskills and went to sleep (so he told his wife) for 20 years. Nor did the good Monk Felix, of the Middle Ages, get more than a stick of type, and certainly no kidnaping headline, when he wandered off into the woods of Mitteleuropa and enjoyed a cat nap of a solid century's duration.

The Scientist at Seventy.

Since he achieved much of his early fame as a practitioner here, Washington has particular interest in the announcement from Baltimore that Dr. William H. Wilmer will retire on July 1 from the directorship of the Wilmer Institute of Ophthalmology at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Dr. Wilmer's brilliant career was capped by an invitation from the Hopkins in 1925 to head the institute which bears his name. Among his patients had been several Presidents of the United States, the King of Siam, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, J. P. Morgan, Booth Tarkington, Viscount Grey of Falloden, Sir Auckland Geddes and other world-famous figures. They, and other patients from all over the world, contributed to a fund of $1,500,000, matched by a similar contribution from the Rockefeller Foundation, which endowed the Wilmer Institute.

At that institute, Dr. Wilmer has fulfilled a long-cherished ambition: to establish in America an institute of such authority that it would not be necessary for Americans desiring to specialize in eye diseases to go to Europe for their training. Under his direction the Wilmer Institute has become a laboratory and school of research with international reputation.

Washington would warmly welcome Dr. Wilmer back to the National Capital and it is understandable that, at the age of 70, the renowned ophthalmologist feels himself entitled to release from administrative cares. At the same time it is a social loss when scientists of the first rank retire from research at an age when ripe experience is often in perfect balance with intellectual acumen.

The Hopkins has shown in the past that it knows how to handle cases of this sort without regard to arbitrary retirement rules. Some of the best work done by Dr. John Jacob Abel, the distinguished pharmacologist, has been accomplished since he retired from professional duties but kept his labratory "to play about in." Release from tedious and irksome duties is due to every man at 70. But release from a lifetime passion in the quest of knowledge is neither possible nor desirable in the case of those true scientists among whom Dr. Wilmer is so outstanding an example.

A Worth While Wisecrack.

In those blithe days when Jimmy Walker was lord mayoring in New York, the country became somewhat inured to executive "wisecracking." It was a gray, dull day, when His Honor could not think up something to brighten the pages of the daily newspapers and the hurried, but drab, lives of his lieges. At repartee, he was as adept as a champion hand-ball player on the come-back; in public address he was as smooth and as pleasant as a new silk glove.

Nobody expected the serious-minded Maj. LaGuardia to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor once-removed. On the Hill, in Washington, he was always ready for a good rough-and-tumble fight, using the Italian equivalent of an Irish shillelagh, rather than a rapier. But the mayor-elect now seems to have embraced the bon mot also. Announcing that there would be no formal inauguration or ceremony when he takes office on January 1, he said, "I have never yet heard of a receiver taking charge of a business with a brass band."

Provided all have as much substance and as much common sense as that, New York may be expected to drop the somewhat jaundiced attitude with which the wisecrack has come to be regarded in the metropolis.

Equal Nationality Rights.

Following personal intervention by President Roosevelt the delegation of the United States at the Pan-American Conference will sign the nationality treaty which reads:

> The contracting States agree that from the going into effect of this convention there shall be no distinction based on sex in their law and practice relating to nationality.

On the surface, no reason is apparent for the initial hesitation of Secretary Hull to sign this treaty, which several days ago received the approval of nineteen nations represented at Montevideo, only the United States abstaining. The wording of the convention is crystal clear and applies only to the removal of discriminations against women in nationality laws. These are working grave injustices to many American women married to foreigners, as well as to the alien wives of American citizens.

Mr. Hull's hesitation has been the more perplexing because this country has been properly proud of its past leadership in urging equal nationality rights for men and women, a development which of course can only be obtained by international action. In April, 1930, at The Hague, the United States voted against a nationality convention on the grounds that the treaty then under consideration discriminated against women. The Acting Secretary of State at that time observed that "we do not in our laws make differences—or make few or relatively unimportant differences—as to rights of men and women in matters of nationality."

Early this week, when the unexplained abstention of the United States delegation was reported from Montevideo, it was said that we had refused to indorse the current treaty for an exactly opposite reason—because our laws still contain such sex discriminations that to indorse the treaty would be to commit Congress to domestic legislation in advance.

If the argument of 1930 was sound that of 1933 was not, and vice versa. Therefore, one is inclined to look further to find reasons for the hesitation which President Roosevelt has now ended. And such quest indicates that the real reason for delay was the fear of the Administration that this gain for the doctrine of equality in nationality laws will lead to a stronger effort, by ardent advocates of "equal rights," for abolition of discriminatory legislation along sex lines in other fields. Such a campaign might seriously embarrass the advocates of stronger protective laws for women in industry, who are strong in Administration ranks.

Assuming that this argument underlay the tangle at Montevideo, its elimination by the President as a factor for delay is gratifying. By governments as by individuals, issues should be confronted on their own merits, as matters of principle and not from the opportunist standpoint. Whether it is desirable that women should lose all nationality rights by marriage is one question. Whether women should have special safeguards as industrial workers is quite another. In the first case, certainly, none but a negative answer is possible.

Veterans' Relief.

The legislative program of the American Legion is not in harmony with the sound principles of the economy law enacted last March at the behest of President Roosevelt. A considerable part of the savings effected by the act would be wiped out, and many inequities of the old haphazard system of veterans' relief would be restored if the Legion's program should be accepted by Congress and the President.

One of the most vulnerable spots in the whole labyrinth of veterans' legislation in effect prior to the economy act was the legal presumption that various diseases manifested in World War veterans before January 1, 1925, had their origin in the war. Congress altered this provision last March, with a large saving to the Treasury. Some veterans complained that the denial of benefits in all "presumptive cases" was too harsh. It was provided, therefore, that special boards should pass upon the merits of every presumptive case. About 40 per cent of the awards in this category are said to have been reinstated. In view of this thorough examination of all presumptive cases and the careful adjustments that have been made, there seems to be no good reason for a drive to restore the legal fiction on which a majority of the awards in such cases was based.

Federal protection for all widows and dependent children of World War veterans is another important point in the Legion's program. This request serves to emphasize the wide gulf between the Legion's viewpoint and that of the administratiton. At their last convention the legionnaires were told by President Roosevelt that "no person, because he wore a uniform, must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens."

The obligation of Congress to care for veterans disabled in the service of their country, and for the dependents of those who made the supreme sacrifice, has never been seriously questioned. But that is not and never has been the issue in a program which has already resulted in the expenditure of about seven billion dollars for the relief of World War veterans alone. The issue is whether benefits not designed for an emergency, but of a permanent character, should be reestablished for a favored class of citizens. It is an issue which should be kept clearly in mind, regardless of the spendthrift nature of much of the Government's current expenditure.

A Traffic Court.

Organization of a special court to handle traffic cases in the District of Columbia is recommended by the local division of the American Automobile Association. At present traffic cases are handled by a branch of the police court, known as the Traffic Court, with all the justices taking turns on the bench. Sponsors of the A. A. A. plan believe that this method of trial and passing of judgment in traffic violation cases is unsatisfactory and that this weakness indicates that "the set-up itself is fundamentally wrong." The objective sought is a single traffic court with presiding judges who are specialists in traffic matters.

There seems to be a tendency for all groups interested in law enforcement within a particular field to urge the establishment of specialized courts in that field. The plan of the Wickersham Commission to provide a special procedure for prohibition cases in the Federal courts is not forgotten. A vigorous storm of protest wrecked this scheme to give preference to a law which is now off the statute books. Similar objections arise every time an attempt is made to establish special courts or provide a unique procedure for any type of cases. Unique arrangements in the prosecution of law violators may not be conducive to a uniform administration of justice.

Perhaps enforcement of the traffic laws could be improved through a special court, but that is also true in many other legal categories. In considering changes of this nature the larger problems of meting out justice through the courts ought to be kept in mind. It should first be asked whether it is impossible to achieve the desired improvements in handling traffic cases by facilitating the general procedure of the police courts.

More Research on Starlings.

Some friend has been kind enough to send The Post a copy of the Oban Times, the county organ of Argyllshire, in the Scottish highlands. Neatly ringed is a piece that tells what a fine bird is the starling.

One Prof. B. J. Marples, of Manchester University, the Oban newspaper says, sent a questionnaire to all parts of the British Isles to obtain information on starlings. Back has come highly favorable evidence in the defendant's behalf.

"The bird, in the past has been shot on sight by farmers on a charge of uprooting growing wheat," says the Times, "but there is evidence that far from doing this out of a sense of mischief, the starling is merely searching for insect pests in the soil. One East Anglian beet grower has informed Mr. Marples that but for the insect-destroying starlings his crop would have been completely ruined." Altogether, the evidence is so favorable that the Times is led to conclude that "starlings may be acquitted of the charge of being pests when the results of the census have been thoroughly examined."

It is, of course, entirely possible that our own starlings were merely looking for boll weevils when they ate up all the grapes on the Government's experimental farm across the river. But before Prof. Marples closes the case and whitewashes starlings, he might properly come to Washington, park his automobile on Pennsylvania avenue, and await additional evidence. Further this deponent sayeth not.

Monetary Conditions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To one who watched the Senate Committee on Agriculture buck the New Dealers last spring and wisely try to insist that agricultural adjustment is impossible without monetary reform to dispel deflation and check the inflated value of the dollar, the present squabble in the New Deal is highly entertaining.

There is no danger that the profit system can ever be abrogated, nor will it be even disturbed as long as an adequate medium of exchange is available to maintain commerce and trade.

On the other hand, no allotment system can ever maintain a maximum of social wealth, for the value of things is more a matter of time and place than of substance. Only the perfected liquidity of goods created by a fully adequate medium of exchange can bring into play that precise distribution, based upon mutual profits in exchange, that represents a maximum value in the products of industry.

It is, however, one thing to attack the profit system, and quite another to question some particular system of profiting. In the latter case it is wholly erroneous to speak of our present system as one of "laissez faire," for it is crowded with legal artifacts, and if these artifacts, as of corporation law or of our banking and currency institutions, need to be freely altered and a different and nationalized system of capital organization arranged, this is in the interest of saving the profit system, not of destroying it, even though a degree of public ownership be involved.

Few people seem to realize that the use of money can not be divorced from profits. Once this were generally acknowledged, profits would not be questioned as long as they were based upon the actual equality of opportunity that a stable commodity dollar would afford. But the opportunity to profit in prices rather than values, so that profits represent speculation in prices rather than the creation of wealth, is the kind of a profit system that arouses this dangerous popular clamor against "profits."

Money is the I. O. U. of society, and when it can be legally obtained without serving society, and hence at the expense of some one else's store of worldly goods, a completely laissez faire policy is, indeed, a poor one. This, however, justifies only the correction of monetary conditions, not abrogation of the use of money in distribution.

Money systems have changed as the evolution of society has proceeded. They need to be changed now. Their correction is, indeed, imperative, and for that reason the attempt to evade the task of solving the modern money problem by resorting to direct action in controlling (?) overproduction or underconsumption is not only a fatuous futility but a dangerous and expensive one. It bespeaks the very real dangers of uncontrolled inflation, for treating the symptoms is no cure for a disease, and when the New Deal splits on an issue of whether it is production or consumption that should be treated the argument is simply one of Tweedle Dum against Tweedle Dee.

If Mr. Peek's Chicago address suggested some issue involving Socialism one is constrained to infer that he is but fabricating an alibi in his exit from the New Deal. He seeks merely to avoid appearing in the role of a pot calling the kettle black, for it is impossible for anyone who listened to the radio discussion of the social philosophy of the New Deal, between Dr. Tugwell and Harry W. Laidler, of the socialistic League for Industrial Democracy, to charge the Assistant Secretary with being a Socialist, even though one might feel that Dr. Laidler bested him in the argument. MONEY CHANGER.

A Toast to Mr. Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following toasts are from a Franklin Almanac of December, 1833. When Andrew Jackson was President of the United States and long after George Washington's victories over the French and English had made his name familiar to all Europe, Franklin chanced to dine with the English and French ambassadors when the following toasts were drunk:

By the British ambassador: "England, the sun, whose bright beams enlighten and fructify the remotest corners of the earth."

The French ambassador glowing with national pride, but too polite to dispute the previous toast, drank: "France, the moon, whose mild, steady and cheering rays are the delight of all nations, consoling them in darkness and making their dreariness beautiful."

Franklin then arose and with his usual dignified simplicity said: "George Washington, the Joshua who commanded the sun and moon to stand still; and they obeyed him."

My toast today, 100 years later: "Franklin D. Roosevelt, friend among men, radioing the sun, moon and stars to shine on; that we are in the heroic age and have found the crisis to try our edge. And they so shone that every ray was an incentive, an inspiration and a standard."

The Government and Muscle Shoals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many of us believe that President Roosevelt is being wrongly advised in his attitude toward public utilities and the whole Muscle Shoals project. The principal sponsor for Muscle Shoals was Senator Norris, who would retire all outstanding Liberty bonds with newly engraved dollar bills. Lilienthal states there is now a 50 per cent excess of generating capacity in the Shoals area, and when this Government plant is fully established it will also be equipped to generate 50 per cent more electricity than will be required in that region.

Taxes received by the Government from utilities are paid out at Muscle Shoals to compete with utilities. No private taxpaying corporation can compete with nontaxpaying Government projects. The St. Lawrence River project is even worse. Here the Government will spend millions which will result in competition with utilities and railroads. This waterway will be frozen up four months of the year. The Government helps the railroads on the one hand and takes freight away from them on the other by the proposed St. Lawrence Canal system. Every dollar spent by the Government at Muscle Shoals and on the St. Lawrence project will be wasted, and the taxpayer suffers. Government competition with private corporations is unfair and unjust. If He Were King.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "If I were king" there would be three things done for the relief of a long-suffering citizenship of the District.

First, I would throw overboard as unworthy of consideration 95 per cent of the so-called liquor "control" plans submitted by the same type of reformer that gave the country the eighteenth amendment.

I would make the selling and drinking of liquors respectable.

I would take the "adventure" and "smartness" out of drinking.

I would permit any respectable merchant to sell it in any location in which it was permissible to operate any kind of business.

I would permit its sale at any time, Sunday included.

Second, I would give the starling pest the "hot roost" if not the "hot seat" on all buildings they have fancied as roosting places. High-tension electric current sent through wires would send them all to bird heaven and do away with the problem in short and merciful order.

Third, I would have no left-hand turns in downtown sections of the city. A car can drive around three or four blocks in about the time it now takes to make a left-hand turn, and keep all traffic moving at all times.

All these things I would do if I were king and Washington would bless me. FRANCOIS VILLON.

A Californian Does Not Like "Rectified" Whisky.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is astonishing to find Mr. Choate approving the old pre-Volstead racket of "rectifying" or "blending" whisky. One wonders what Mr. Choate would say (and do) if his grocer began to "rectify" or "blend" his breakfast eggs; say, supplying him with a dozen composed (or "rectified") of 4 fresh ones; 3 not so fresh and 2 of the Coolidge vintage? It seems hopeless to expect common sense to be used by the new Booze Brain Boys and so protect the consumer and not boost the profits of the heavy watered Whisky Trust.

A Letter That May Be of Service to a Friend

By Robert Quillen.

This is offered as a rough model for those who may wish to write this kind of letter.

I am writing to you, Bill (you will begin), because good friends can't talk about these things without embarrassment.

There were a few people at my house yesterday afternoon and one of them told a story about one of your pranks.

It was a good story and got a laugh, but I glanced at Betty and she wasn't laughing very successfully. The look in her eyes reminded me of something I saw years ago.

A doctor had shot a bird dog because she wouldn't come back when he called her, and he had her at his office, picking the shot out. The look in her eyes wasn't easy to forget. I thought of it when I looked at Betty.

I wonder if you know how much you hurt her—or enable other people to hurt her.

You call her a good sport, but that isn't what makes her act as she does.

When you drink too much she helps you get to bed and then does what she can to ease your suffering next morning. That isn't good sportsmanship. She just helps you because you need her.

And she doesn't scold you because she is afraid you would pout and maybe get drunk to show that no woman can boss you.

The thing we call good sportsmanship usually takes two people—one to be a good sport and suffer in silence, and one to be a bad sport and cause the suffering. As a rule the one called on to be a good sport is the wife.

Betty walks the floor when you go downtown at night. She isn't afraid you'll get hurt. She's afraid you will meet somebody and drink too much and she'll have more shame to hide.

You aren't a sot, Bill. But you drink enough to seem a little silly almost every night, and Betty deserves something better than that. She's a wonderful woman.

You wouldn't hurt her with a billard cue, as that oil man hurt his wife, but there isn't much choice if the hurts are equally deep.

It is no business of mine (this is the way you end the letter), but a good friend should tell you when people begin to feel sorry for your wife.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

WE ARE thinking very deeply and profoundly here in the Nation's Capital these days that the current discussion on how the Republicans will conduct themselves in the forthcoming Congress comes as a welcome relief. They will not, the commentators unanimously report them as saying, attack the Administration from purely partisan motives. Of course, they may say something about those matters which are harmful to the country.

BARGERON.

What amazing news this is! In all my long life I have never heard a politician admit that he was inspired by anything but love for country for whatever he did.

• • • •

THE discussion is revealing, though, in that it reflects the utter bewilderment of the Republicans as to a program, their fear of launching an attack inspired either by political considerations or by their sincere convictions. Regardless of how they may feel, and this applies also to a number of Democrats, the suggestion that they forcefully express themselves gives them a sickening feeling in their stomachs.

They know that a people being doled out money by the millions, unemployed, farmers and home-owners alike—the unemployed for not working and the farmers for not planting—are not easily a people to be persuaded against a policy which supplies such benefits. They see the Government gradually getting control of every bank in the country through its purchase of preferred stock and other weapons; they see it extending its hold over all the country's business down to the dry cleaning and pressing men; they see it moving the financial district from Wall street to Washington, and conclude that, inasmuch as they themselves draw their pay from the Government they had better keep quiet.

AND the hardest blow to them yet, the Administration's ten strike, which if successful will leave anything they might say utterly futile, is the proposed superindustrial recovery council just announced. The full import of this is just beginning to dawn upon the Republicans and it leaves them more breathless than they were before.

According to the Administration publicity it is the answer to the complaints against centralization and bureaucracy in Washington, a very plain and definite showing that Mr. Roosevelt never contemplated any such. The complainants and critics must now feel very silly, indeed!

• • • •

THIS super-council, it appears, is to supplant all of the many recovery agencies, the NRA, the PWA, the CWA, the AAA, and all the rest of the agencies of the alphabetical soup. Insofar as Washington is concerned they will be maintained as branches or bureaus of the council. But in the various States all the agencies now having to do with these activities will go, the compliance boards of the NRA, the local boards of the PWA and so on. In their place will be set up a State director with pay who in turn will appoint a State board and county agencies. They will be the autocrats of recovery, whether in the NRA, the AAA, the PWA or the CWA line.

Now these local agencies at present are made up of Republicans and Democrats. Much has been made of their lack of political color. Just public-spirited citizens they are. The new State directors will be Democrats appointed directly by Mr. Roosevelt, or rather Democrats and Roosevelt Republicans.

Apparently, the Administration has decided that having got its program through on a nonpartisan basis, it is now time to consolidate its gains. This utterly floors the Republicans.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Paul Cohen-Portheim.

This young author, whose recent death was such a terrible loss to modern literature and to international understanding, was an Austrian by birth. He was brought up by his mother to speak all the languages of modern Europe, so that he felt at home anywhere and everywhere. By profession he was an artist, and fortunately for him he happened to be painting in Devonshire, England, when the World War broke out in 1914. He was, of course, immediately interned for the whole duration of the struggle; this gave him an opportunity to think and read about England and the English people.

A few years ago he published his first book, "England—the Unknown Isle," which had instant success. It is probably the best book ever written about the English people by a man of alien language and breeding. It is most sympathetic; and its observations are both acute and profound. He shows the reasons why the Russians and the Germans, both lovers of theory, have failed to understand the English, who care nothing for theory at all. Mr. Cohen-Portheim stated that the English gentleman is the finest flower of evolution, and that if England goes down, the white race will go down also. He then wrote another book, "Time Stood Still," describing the horrors of internment. He hated two things—Russian Communism and mass production.

CWA Officials Study Lorton Building Plan

Two Plans Considered in Efforts to Complete Prison Projects.

The District civil works committee is scheduled to consider a suggestion from District welfare officials that the Civil Works Administration be asked to advance funds for construction of temporary buildings at the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va.

Commissioner George E. Allen said yesterday it was his opinion much construction should come under the allotment of the Virginia civil works board and that a request probably would be forwarded to Virginia officials after the District committee has passed on the needs.

The Commissioners also plan to urge Congress to appropriate money to complete the walled group of buildings under construction at Lorton for several years. These buildings are expected to relieve the overcrowding.

Congestion at the reformatory has long disturbed District welfare officials, but it is said to have reached a dangerous condition lately as 1,187 prisoners are housed in a building intended for 720.

Penal officials believe, however, that repeal of prohibition and the legalizing of liquor sales in the District will cut immediately the number of persons sentenced to the reformatory.

Funds for construction of the walled group of buildings, reduced in the District act from $1,500,000 to $94,000, will last until early spring. By that time the Commissioners hope to have obtained the 1935 appropriation.

ArmyFloodControl Gives 314,000 Jobs

Dern Says Program Has Been Pushed.

The river and harbors and flood control work already accomplished by the Army Corps of Engineers under the public works program has put 44,697 men to work, Secretary of War Dern said yesterday.

"To sum up," he stated, "the present program involving a total cost of $314,000,000, will provide employment for 314,000 men for one year, or 628,000 men for six months.

"The effect of the work will be to advance by many years the progressive development of our national waterways in the interests of economical transportation."

4-Car Collision Costs Dr. W. D. Scott $5,000

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Schuller, of Chicago, today was awarded $5,000 damages against Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, by a jury, for injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

She sought $10,000, claiming she received severe bruises when the car which Dr. Scott was driving crashed into another car, which was pushed into a third car, which in turn struck the Schuller automobile.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE LINDBERGHS RETURN.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are at home. That's news!

* * * *

After covering 30,000 miles, four continents and 21 nations, the colonel and his wife are back in New Jersey for a change of scenery.

* * * *

The colonel came through the trip with high honors, but in the eyes of all married people Mrs. Lindbergh wins the orchids for this expedition.

* * * *

Last summer Charlie dropped his Sunday papers suddenly and asked the wife to go for a little ride. It was five months before she got back.

* * * *

And you know what a fuss most wives make if they go for a trip with their husbands and are two hours late getting home.

* * * *

The next time the colonel pops a question like, "How about a little trip for some fresh air and sunshine?" Anne probably will hide in the barn.

* * * *

It is all right for a man to take his wife for a ride, but from July to Christmas is too long to keep any normal woman from hearing the neighborhood gossip.

* * * *

An odd fellow, the colonel. When he yawns and says, "Feel like going outdoors for a little while, honey?" his wife is apt to wind up in Tibet.

* * * *

The average husband thinks he is making a sacrifice when he gets around to taking his wife downtown to see a movie. Lindy thinks he is skimping on his domestic obligations when he flies her over 21 countries.

* * * *

Lindy believes that a woman's place is in the stratosphere. And his wall motto reads, "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like 10,000 miles from home."

* * * *

Most people would assume that the colonel and his wife had been through quite an ordeal. But the important thing to remember is that they escaped those radio renditions of "Git along little doggie," the Yale-Princeton football game and all the arguments over the Blue Eagle.

* * * *

The argosy was of great value scientifically. It demonstrated that a man and wife can take a long journey together and return on good terms, provided there are no guide signs to be misinterpreted, no stop lights and no red ants in the lunch.

A SURE BET.

"What the immediate future plans of Col. and Mrs. Lndbergh are they did not say."—Newspaper item. It's a 50 to 1 bet that Mrs. Lindbergh will get into a kimono and relax, and that Lindy will go down to the airport to see the planes come in.

You've got to say this for Lindy: He knows a swell way to get out of wheeling the baby.

The New York Board of Health finds the repeal whisky so badly adulterated that it will insist on new and honest labels. It is also considering suggesting that the distillers apologize to the prohibition era bootleggers.

Emergency Council Is Seen As Huge Democrat Machine

opinion as to whether Senators had been asked to make recommendations or whether they simply saw an opportunity and seized it.

The trail from the Senate Office Building led, as so many political trails lead, to the Postoffice Department. Postmaster General Farley, grand master of political patronage, is in Europe, but he has able assistants. One of these is Harllee Branch, executive assistant to the Postmaster General. One of Mr. Branch's duties is to see that persons recommended for appointment are in complete sympathy with the recovery program before the appointments go through.

Yes, said Mr. Branch, the names of prospective appointees to jobs as State director of the National Emergency Council had been turned over to him. Yes, he was doing a lot of telephoning to check up on the character and abilities of the prospects.

Care Needed, Says Mr. Branch.

But, no, said Mr. Branch, it had never even occurred to him that the National Emergency Council might be looked upon by anyone as a huge political machine. Politics, of course, might be taken into consideration in making the appointments, but the Administration could not be too careful in selecting men capable of heading big organizations, formed strictly for the purpose of pulling America out of the depression.

An exact estimate of the size of the organizations the State directors are expected to head could not be determined. At the new office of the National Executive Council, just opened on the third floor of the Commercial National Bank Building, it was said that the form of local organizations had not been definitely determined.

Frank C. Walker, treasurer of the Democratic National committee, is the National director of the Emergency Council. It was explained at the Emergency Council office that the job of State director necessarily would be a full-time job and that it was imperative that men in sympathy with the Administration relief policies be appointed.

Scope Is Broad.

An idea of the scope of the organization is contained in the President's executive order creating it. He stated that the Emergency Council was being created for the purpose of coordinating the activities of the NRA, the A.A.A. and the Relief Administration.

In addition, he said: "All volunteer field agencies established under, and for the purpose of effectuating, the provisions of the aforesaid legislation are hereby abolished, this provision to become effective 30 days from the date of this order, and thereafter all functions heretofore performed by said agencies and considered necessary by the executive director for carrying out the purposes of this order shall be assumed and performed by the council."

The volunteer field agencies include county directors and committees and city directors and committees and regional directors and committees in charge of about 35 separate recovery activities.

It will be the duty of the emergency council director in each State to coordinate the activities of all these agencies. It will be his job to appoint, with the benefit of capable advice, directors and committees in each city, county or region, as the case may be.

25,000 Active Members.

Whether some of the minor jobs are to be salaried jobs has not yet been determined. Many of them probably will not be. But all of them will be closely knit together in the great organization. It may not be an exaggeration to estimate that this organization will have as many as 25,000 active members. There are more than 3,000 counties in the United States.

Among the activities the State directors and their assistants will supervise will be Civil Works, giving jobs to at least 4,000,000; Public Works, giving jobs to many millions more; NRA, creating employment and wage increases; AAA, loaning and giving billions of dollars to farmers who plow up every third row, or who dispose of sows and pigs, or who wish to borrow money on their corn or cotton.

Beneficiaries of these activities include a huge percentage of the voting population of the United States. It is reasonable to suppose that Democratic candidates for Congress next year will not be reticent about informing C. W. A. workers, P. W. A. workers and farmers to whom they are indebted for their checks.

Some Names Leak Out.

The names of persons who have been recommended and approved for jobs as State directors are being closely guarded. But some of them have leaked out. For instance, the State director of Ohio is expected to be Herbert Jones, Democratic county chairman, at Zanesville. Mr. Jones is said to be in complete sympathy with the recovery program.

As another instance, the Indiana State director is expected to be Richard Werneke. Mr. Werneke used to be prosecuting attorney at Terre Haute. He is a local political boss of some magnitude. His sympathy with the recovery program has been attested by Senator Frederick VanNuys, Gov. Paul V. McNutt, Dr. Carleton B. McCulloch, Democratic State chairman of Indiana; the chairman of the Vigo County Democratic committee, and the chairman of the Sixth Indiana district Democratic committee.

Other State directors are expected to come similarly well recommended.

Cosmopolitan Club Distributes Food

100 Baskets Distributed to Needy Families.

Approximately 100 baskets of food were distributed to destitute Washington families yesterday by members of the Cosmopolitan Club following the annual pre-Christmas meeting. Trucks were furnished by Lester B. Powell and Edmund O. Carl.

The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, chaplain of the club, delivered the Christmas address, stressing the spirit of the occasion and the dividends in self-satisfaction paid those who have a real interest in the less fortunate at this season.

He complimented James E. Divver, chairman of the relief committee, for his work in obtaining the baskets for distribution. Toys and clothes also were distributed.

Injured Man Saves Train From Crash

Hurt in Landslide, Flags Down Flyer.

Oakdale, Tenn., Dec. 21 (AP).—The Florida-bound Ponce de Leon, Southern Railway passenger train, was saved from a possible wreck today by an injured signalman.

W. D. Waters and R. C. Kelly, out before dawn inspecting the electric block system, were thrown from their rail motor car when it crashed into a landslide 10 miles north of here.

Waters, although suffering a possible fracture of the skull, stumbled down the track, pulled the block system's wires so that the signal showed red, and began waving a red fusee. The train came into view and stopped at the edge of the landslide.

Mr. Clinchy was stricken while visiting friends Tuesday. He was first taken to his home, 1841 Irving street northwest.

Bishop Places Youth Group In Nazi Ranks

Retaliates for Their Threat to Withdraw Public Recognition.

Berlin, Dec. 21 (AP).—The dissolution of the Evangelical Youth Organization and the turning over of its membership to Baldur von Schirach, chief of the Hitler youth movement, were decreed today by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller.

The action—the bishop's answer to an ultimatum of Evangelical youth leaders that they would lose confidence in him if he did not reform the Protestant Church cabinet—apparently met with little enthusiasm among Nazis and non-Nazis alike.

An opposition spokesman asserted the placing of the church young people under the jurisdiction of the Hitler youth leaders neutralizes the hold of the church upon the growing generation.

"This is what happened in Danzig, where a similar arrangement prevails," he said. "On one night there are midweek services at the church and at the same time a lecture to Hitler youths. The Hitler youth leader announces that those who insist upon going to church will be excused from the lecture.

"As the boys know their career depends upon advancement in the Hitler group, only a few will have enough backbone to say they will not go to the lecture."

According to the agreement between Von Schirach and Bishop Mueller, no youth under 19 can join the Evangelical youth societies unless he is a member of the Hitler group.

Roosevelt Grants Appeal of U. S. Workers.

Extension to field workers of an Executive order making the Saturdays before Christmas and New Year's Day holidays, was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt. The order originally applied to Washington Government employes only.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Man.

So far as I can understand
Man is the only creature planned
To worry and to fret.
All other living things appear
Quite satisfied from year to year
To take what food they get
And crawl or swim or nest in holes
With no concern about their souls.

'Tis only man who seems to dream
And feel the urge to plan and scheme
And strive for wealth and fame.
Of all the creatures he alone
Is moved to make his presence known
Or value much his name.
He, only, makes his life seem worse
By wanting something in a purse.

'Tis only man who reads and writes,
Builds motor cars electric lights,
And homes of brick and stone;
Plants gardens, puts up Christmas trees;
Struggles to overcome disease
And makes laws of his own.
All other creatures run life out
Not caring what it's all about.

Now I confess I do not know
Why this condition should be so,
An thought belong to man.
Since he so eager is to rise
I think there must be something wise
And good behind the plan;
Some reason why we so are swayed,
Or earth a jungle still had stayed.

Clark Favors Broader Gold Standard Use

Crusader Chief Pleads for Country Not to Use Inflation.

St. Louis, Dec. 21 (AP).—Fred C. Clark, commander of the Crusaders, declared at a mass meeting here tonight "the practical thing to do today is to improve the use of the gold standard, not to attempt to abolish it."

Clark, who came here from New York, was one of several speakers appearing on a program sponsored by the Crusaders, a prohibition repeal group which embraced the anti-inflation movement.

"Country after country has at one time or another tried the costly experiment of inflated paper money, only to have it collapse and bring general ruin," he asserted.

Clark said that "to attribute bad loans and bad banking practices to a gold standard currency is to be untrue to the facts."

"To believe that because our fantastic debt structure collapsed and some of our banks became insolvent, the gold standard did not work and is unworkable, is equally absurd.

"The gold standard had nothing to do with bad domestic loans, with bond issues to improvident foreign countries, with discreditable financial records, with syndicated speculations in pyramided public utilities, with graft in high finance, with installment sales and high-pressure salesmanship, with advances in science and overproduction in farms and factories, with technological unemployment."

Dr. Harry J. O'Neill, of St. Louis University, said currency inflation is based on the erroneous theory that there is a shortage of money.

"The volume of currency outstanding in March of this year," he said, "was actually $2,700,000,000 greater than that outstanding in October, 1932."

Kidnap Plot Alleged, Man Arrested in S. C.

Hartsville, S. C., Dec. 21 (AP).—Henry F. Adkinson, employe of a local oil company, was arrested today by officers who charged him with plotting to kidnap a member of the prominent Coker family.

Department of Justice agents from Charlotte arrested the suspect at his rooming house where, they said, they had overheard him describe his plans to a companion who turned out to be a friend of the Coker family.

Spain to Request U.S. Action in Cuba fury only abated when the report was authoritatively denied.

Havana, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Spanish Embassy in Havana was without information tonight regarding a reported decision of the Spanish government to ask the United States to intervene in Cuba for the protection of Spanish citizens.

President Grau San Martin, asked about the attitude of Spaniards in Cuba toward the government, said "the Spanish Ambassador called on me today at the palace and congratulated me on the nationalization program this government is carrying out."

President Martin's efforts to unite Cuba bore fruit in a 40,000-person demonstration in which were carried hundreds of banners urging "American recognition, complete Cuban freedom and independence or death."

A motley throng jammed the vicinity of the presidential palace for nearly four hours and steadily cheered Jefferson Caffery, who recently arrived as President Roosevelt's representative.

While no disorders attended this afternoon's demonstration the city's quiet was broken tonight with the explosion of four bombs in quick succession in the center of Havana.

One exploded under a bench on the prado in front of the American Club and a second in front of the Spanish Casino. Windows in both the American and Spanish Clubs were broken by the force of the concussion.

Mr. Caffery appeared twice on a balcony of the American Embassy and waved to the marchers.

President Grau San Martin, Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the Cuban army, and other governmental officials spoke from the rear palace balcony.

Meanwhile, soldiers, sailors, policemen and members of the student army patrolled the streets and were stationed on housetops.

Two passenger trains bringing excursionists to the capital were derailed in Matanzas Province. Two trainmen were killed and several persons injured.

A bomb exploded in Santa Clara coincident with the departure of one of the excursion trains, while bombs also exploded during the night and early morning at Cardenas and Santiago.

Alma Mater said eight Rightest members of the cabinet were prepared to resign if Grau continued heeding the advice of two Leftist members. Partial substantiation was given the report by the fact that President Grau yesterday received the two groups of cabinet members separately.

A breach opened between students and the army with the killing this week of Mario Cadenas, 19-year-old student, and widened as some 200 high school youths paraded to the palace, crying "Down with Batista!"

Sand bags guarded all ground-floor windows of the palace and machine guns and rifles commanded the plaza. A military order kept all Havana residents from the roof tops, whence much sniping has been done in past weeks.

Text of Silver Proclamation

Edict Issued by President Roosevelt, Under Authority Vested in Him by Act of Congress, Approved May 12, 1933, Concerning Coinage.

The text of President Roosevelt's silver proclamation follows:

Whereas, by paragraph (2) of section 43, Title III, of the act of Congress, approved May 12, 1933 (Public, No. 10), the President is authorized "by proclamation to fix the weight of the gold dollar in grains nine-tenths fine and also to fix the weight of the silver dollar in grains nine-tenths fine, at a definite fixed ratio in relation to the gold dollar, at such amounts as he finds necessary from his investigation to stabilize domestic prices or to protect the foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies, and to provide for the unlimited coinage of such gold and silver at the ratio so fixed, * * *," and

Whereas, from investigations made by me, I find it necessary, in aid of the stabilization of domestic prices and in accordance with the policy and program authorized by Congress, which are now being administered, and to protect our foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies, that the price of silver be enhanced and stabilized; and Cites London Resolution.

Whereas, A resolution presented by the delegation of the United States of America was unanimously adopted at the World Economic and Monetary Conference in London, July 20, 1933, by the representatives of 66 governments, which in substance provided that said governments will abandon the policy and practice of melting up or debasing silver coins; that low-valued silver currency be replaced with silver coins and that no legislation should be enacted that will depreciate the value of silver; and

Whereas, a separate and supplemental agreement was entered into, at the instance of representatives of th United States, between China, India and Spain, the holders and users of large quantities of silver, on the one hand, and Australia, Canada, Mexico, Peru and the United States, on the other hand, as the chief producers of silver, wherein China agreed not to dispose of any silver derived from the melting up or debasement of silver coins, and India agreed not to dispose of over 35,000,000 ounces of silver per annum during a period of four years commencing January 1, 1934, and Spain agreed not to dispose of over 5,000,000 ounces of silver annually during said period, and both of said governments agreed that at the end of said period of four years they would then subject themselves to the general resolution adopted at the London Conference, and in consideration of such limitation it was agreed that the governments of the five producing countries would each absorb from the mines in their respective countries a certain amount of silver, the total amount to be absorbed by said producing countries being 35,000,000 ounces per annum during the four years commencing the first day of January, 1934; that such silver so absorbed would be retained in each of said respective countries for said period of four years, to be used for coinage purposes or as reserves for currency, or to otherwise be retained and kept off the world market during such period of time, it being understood that, of the 35,000,000 ounces the United States was to absorb annually at least 24,421,410 ounces of the silver produced in the United States during such period of time.

Vital to Stabilization.

Now, therefore, finding it proper to cooperate with other governments and necessary to assist in increasing and stabilizing domestic prices, to augment the purchasing power of peoples in silver-using countries, to protect our foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies, and to carry out the understanding between the 66 governments that adopted the resolution hereinbefore referred to; by virtue of the power in me vested by the act of Congress above cited, the other legislation designed for national recovery, and by virtue of all other authority in me vested;

I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do proclaim and direct that each United States coinage mint shall receive for coinage into standard silver dollars any silver which such mint, subject to regulations prescribed hereunder by the Secretary of the Treasury, is satisfied has been mined, subsequently to the date of this proclamation, from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof. The Director of the Mint, with the voluntary consent of the owner, shall deduct and retain of such silver so received 50 per cent as seigniorage and for services performed by the Government of the United States relative to the coinage and delivery of silver dollars. The balance of such silver so received, that is, 50 per cent thereof, shall be coined into standard silver dollars and the same, or an equal number of other standard silver dollars, shall be delivered to the owner or depositor of such silver. The 50 per cent of such silver so deducted shall be retained as bullion by the Treasury and shall not be disposed of prior to the thirty-first day of December, 1937, except for coining into United States coins.

Secretary Authorized.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe regulations to carry out the purposes of this proclamation. Such regulations shall contain provisions substantially similar to the provisions contained in the regulations made pursuant to the act of Congress, approved April 23, 1918 (40 Statutes at Large, page 535), known as the Pittman act, with such changes as he shall determine, prescribing how silver mined, subsequently to the date of this proclamation, from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, shall be identified.

This proclamation shall remain in force and effect until the thirty-first day of December, 1937, unless repealed or modified by act of Congress or by subsequent proclamation.

The present ratio in weight and fineness of the silver dollar to the gold dollar shall, for the purposes of this proclamation, be maintained until changed by further orders or proclamation.

Notice is hereby given that I reserve the right by virtue of the authority vested in me to revoke or modify this proclamation as the interest of the United States may seem to require.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this twenty-first day of December, in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred thirty-three, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-eighth.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.
By the President:
WILLIAM PHILLIPS,
Acting Secretary of State.

Raise in Metal's Price Believed Primary Object.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—President Roosevelt's action on silver was given the following interpretation tonight by a prominent figure in what Wall street calls the conservative financial group—a banker who has at times advised the Roosevelt Administration.

"The silver action is divided into two parts.

"Part one relates simply to ratification of the international silver agreement reached at London as a result of work at the World Economic Conference. The effect of this agreement, if all signatory countries ratify, is to limit the sales of silver in the world market, thus stabilizing its price.

To Raise Silver Price.

"Part two is designed to raise the price of silver, domestically at least.

"In effect, the President says:

"You bring in your domestic newly mined silver. Its legal price is $1.29 an ounce. In the present market you can't get much more than 40 cents. We'll coin half of the silver and return it to you. We'll keep the other half in bullion, as the Government's.

"This is designed to raise the silver price to half of the legal price of $1.29—or around 64 cents an ounce."

This observer termed the silver action "a limited step toward bimetallism," adding:

"I can not see any real benefit to silver in the limited program. The only real benefit and rise in prices can come in no way except through operations in silver on a world market—not through a program limited to purchase of domestic newly mined, because our proportion of silver produced is only about one-tenth of that in the world.

Mild Purchase Plan.

"This is a mild silver-purchase plan. It might be an indication of something else to come."

The banker said he understood the aim of the Administration in the near future was to boost the market price to at least 75 cents an ounce.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The American says that Charlotte Milburn Pickering, who eloped with Hugh Parker Pickering on Monday, has returned to the home of her mother, Mrs. Hollingsworth Peabody, a social registerite, because of illness. The paper quotes Mrs. Peabody as saying her daughter is under care of a physician and a nurse.

Roosevelt Acts Under Thomas Inflation Amendment.

under the program would range between $15,000,000 and $30,000,000 annually.

Perhaps the most immediate effect of the new silver policy will be to eliminate the threat that Congress in the forthcoming session would order currency inflation of a drastic nature. Mr. Roosevelt apparently has satisfied, for the present at least, the silver bloc in Congress—by far the most militant element favoring inflation.

Meanwhile, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation left untouched the gold price of $34.06 an ounce established Monday. The London price was 8 cents higher. Jesse H. Jones, R. F. C. chairman, however, revealed that the gold-buying fund has been increased from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. This was the second time within a week that $25,000,000 was added to the original $50,000,000 fund.

When the fund was boosted $25,000,000 last week, it was estimated that foreign gold purchases totaled about $35,000,000. Mr. Jones yesterday declined to comment on the extent of gold purchases abroad, other than to say that the $75,000,000 fund which existed prior to yesterday was far from exhausted. He disclosed that 507,485 ounces of domestic gold had been bought at a cost of $16,976,000.

The President's silver action came unexpectedly after a week of falling security and commodity prices. Although there had been reports that action to increase silver prices was under consideration, President Roosevelt and his advisers, meeting daily this week on this question, successfully evaded efforts to confirm these reports.

The final touches were added to the President's proclamation and explanatory announcement at a conference between him, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the latter. Their conference was preceded by a Cabinet meeting, moved up one day on the pretext of freeing these officials from the necessity of being in the city today.

Decree Is Delayed.

Finally with the announcements ready to be issued, they were held up by Stephen T. Early, assistant secretary to the President, until 6 p. m., the Eastern standard closing hour for Pacific Coast security and commodity markets. With the silver price unchanged yesterday, these efforts at secrecy apparently were successful.

Although under the London agreement this government obligated itself to absorb annually 24,421,410 ounces of silver annually until the end of 1937, the President's proclamation placed no limitation on the amount of silver which will be accepted by mints for coinage, subject to the seigniorage condition.

Although production of silver last year coincided with the minimum figure in the London agreement, the former was the lowest for many years. In 1931, silver production reached almost 31,000,000 ounces and the year before was 66,155,000 ounces. The increased price for silver is expected to stimulate silver production, although estimates were lacking last night as to what extent.

Senator Pittman pointed out that since 80 per cent of the country's silver production is a by-product of copper, lead and zinc, any increased production would depend on recovery of these industries. Nevertheless the increased price will contribute to making profitable the operations of all industries producing silver.

Therefore it is reasonably expected that during the next year the volume of silver brought to the mints will exceed 24,000,000 ounces. Only silver produced subsequent to the President's proclamation, however, will be accepted.

Owners of such silver may take it to any United States mint and after agreeing to turn over one-half to the Government as seigniorage—which means the charge made by the Government for coining bullion or the difference between the cost of bullion and its face value when coined—receive in return standard silver dollars for the other half.

Dollar Content Fixed.

Legislation fixes the silver content of a dollar at 385.8 grains nine-tenths fine, and the gold content of a dollar at 25.8 grains nine-tenths fine, which is a ratio of 15.988 to 1. On that basis $5 is equal to about 3.90 ounces of silver, making what is described as the legal price of the latter $1.29 an ounce.

Since the Government, under the silver policy, takes one-half of the silver offered as seigniorage, the net return to the silver owner is 64½ cents an ounce. The only aspect of the plan that the silver bloc dislikes is this high rate of seignorage, which Senator Pittman described as a "tremendous tax."

He predicted that the Government would make a large profit out of the coinage of silver on this basis, adding that the Treasury would receive more than the producer, who must pay costs of production. The Nevadan, incidentally, pointed out that since the free coinage of silver ceased in 1873, the Government has made $250,000,000 through seignorage on silver coinage.

This profit resulted because the mints bought silver needed for coinage at the market price, except immediately after the World War, when a price of $1 an ounce was fixed by legislation. The market price was always less than the monetary value, although the silver when coined had the latter value on its face.

Although free coinage of silver ended in 1873, the mints continued to coin standard silver dollars until 1904, when the stock of such coins was $568,229,000. The stock of silver dollars remained around that figure until 1918, when $250,000,000 worth were melted down to settle a transaction with India.

"The so-called Pittman act, which prescribed regulations that will be adapted to the present silver operation, authorized the use of silver dollars to pay India but also provided that the dollars thus melted down should be restored through the coinage of silver purchased at $1 an ounce.

For this purpose the coinage of standard silver dollars was resumed in 1921 and continued until 1928, although after 1925 such coinage was negligible. At the end of last year the stock of standard silver dollars was $540,008,000.

The silver retained by the mints as seigniorage will be held as bullion by the Treasury and will not be disposed of prior to December 31, 1937, except for coining. Assuming that 24,000,000 ounces of silver annually are offered to the mints, the Government would keep 12,000,000 ounces, which would have a monetary value of $7,300,000.

Since the President in his proclamation provided that the ratio between gold and silver set by statute be maintained, it is proper to say that there will be coinage of American-produced silver at 16 to 1. But from the viewpoint of the silver miner, using the statutory gold content, coinage of his silver would be at a ratio to gold of about 32 to 1.

Gold Price Increased.

Although no change has been made in the statutory gold content of the dollar, the price of gold has increased by R. F. C. purchases from the statutory rate of $20.67 to $34.06 an ounce. Assuming that soon or late the President will reduce the gold content of the dollar in the same or a greater proportion than the increase in its price, the new coinage of silver would be at a ratio to the existing gold price of 52.8 to 1, on the basis of the 62½ cents return to the silver producer.

Senator Pittman contended that the fixing of silver prices at 62½ cents an ounce would have the effect of establishing that price throughout the world, and that thus a step toward stabilization of foreign currencies had been taken. He expressed expectation that Australia, Canada, Peru and Mexico, other silver producing countries, would soon follow the lead of the United States in ratifying the London silver agreement.

It was his contention that the groundwork had been laid for a beginning in the negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties with silver-using countries. He predicted increased exports of American manufactured articles.

Pittman, Silver Pact Author, Sees Export Trade Increase

(Associated Press.)

The man from whose pen came the silver agreement, Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, said last night the approval of the London compact by the President "meant an enormous increase" in the export trade of the United States.

Pittman said that the increased foreign trade would "tend greatly to our recovery."

He declared United States ratification of the treaty would result in a world-wide stabilization of silver price at 64½ cents an ounce, the price fixed by Mr. Roosevelt.

The Senator said ratification for which he had worked was his "Christmas present," and that he "never took part in any legislation that gave me more satisfaction and happiness."

Between frequent interruptions of those who telephoned to congratulate him for success of his efforts, Pittman told what he believed the treaty meant.

"The action of the United States undoubtedly will be followed by Canada, Australia, Mexico and Peru, which constitute the great silver-producing countries of the world," Pittman said.

What Silver Decree Is Expected to Do.

(Associated Press.)

In brief, the silver proclamation by President Roosevelt calls for:

Coinage of half of the newly mined, domestically produced silver, the other half to be held in the Treasury as a charge for coining.

An estimated coinage of 12,000,000 ounces of silver annually for four years.

nually during such period, and Spain agreed not to sell in excess of 5,000,000 ounces of such silver annually during such period. After such sales, these governments are to be bound by the general resolution adopted at the London Conference to which I have heretofore referred.

"As a condition of the agreement by China, India and Spain, however, it was required that Australia, Canada, Mexico, Peru and the United States should take silver from the production of their respective mines to the gross amount of 35,000,000 ounces annually for such period of four years. The United States, by reason of its large population and its large silver production, agreed to take from its mines annually at least 24,421,410 ounces of silver during such period.

"The production of the United States for 1932 was approximately 24,000,000 ounces of silver."

Call to Santa Claus Puts Boy in Hospital

Twickenham, Eng., Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Six-year-old George Osborne was severely burned today when he attempted to shout a mesage to Santa Claus up the chimney at his home. The child will have to spend Christmas in a hospital.

Ship Crew Saved in Wreck.

Castries, St. Lucia, West Indies, Dec. 21 (AP).—Driven aground by a storm, the schooner Marguerite was wrecked today on the southwest coast of St. Lucia. Her crew and two passengers reached shore in dories.

Silver Plan

How Decree Will Effect Metal Producer.

(Associated Press.)

An explanation of how the silver coinage plan would work, as outlined last night, follows:

A silver producer would take his metal—say 100 ounces—to the Mint. Taking the silver at its value as fixed in relation to gold, the Mint would convert his 100 ounces of silver into $64.50 of coins. The full theoretical value of the metal would be $129. Half of this the Government would keep.

At this rate, compared with the present price of about 43 cents an ounce for silver, the producer, despite that the Government took half of his metal for a minting charge, would stand to gain $21.50 on his 100 ounces of metal—the difference between the $64.50 his metal was minted into and the $43 the 100 ounces would bring on the present market.

Silver Dollar Is Due To Appear in Pockets

A return of the silver dollar to the pocket of the average citizen, partially replacing greenbacks, was described last night by the Associated Press as one of the most noticeable immediate effects the average citizen would see from President Roosevelt's silver rehabilitation order.

Advocates of the course went further and predicted, too, that it would prove a stimulus to general recovery by accelerating foreign trade.

Dr. Rasmussen, Famous Arctic Explorer, Dies

"I Feel Better" Are Among Last Words in Illness Contracted in North.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Dec. 21 (AP).—Dr. Knud Rasmussen, known throughout the world for his daring explorations, died today not long after he expressed a belief that he had gained a new lease on life.

The Danish explorer succumbed after a long illness brought on by food poisoning contracted during his last expedition to Greenland. The immediate cause of death was a blood clot which stopped his heart. He was 54.

"I feel better; I am getting courage and life back again," were among his last words.

King Sends Condolences.

He will have a state funeral.

All Denmark mourned his passing and tributes poured in. King Christian sent his condolences to the widow.

Premier Stauning said:

"Denmark has suffered a great loss—so has science."

Daugaard Jensen, Governor of Greenland, said:

"Knud Rasmussen was of bigger dimensions than others; there was nothing small about him."

Dr. Rasmussen was seriously ill when he was brought home November 3. It was announced then that only a blood transfusion aboard ship had saved his life.

Won Greenland for Denmark.

He was born at Jakobshavin, Greenland. His maternal ancestors were Eskimos. Between 1905 and 1924 he visited and studied all the known Eskimo tribes.

Last year he headed an expedition which surveyed 12,500 miles of Greenland's southeast coast and found that Greenland was moving westward 20 yards a year.

In 1926 he was awarded one of the few life memberships in the American Geographical Society.

Executive Office Fire Extinguished

(Associated Press.)

A fire broke out in the waste paper room in the White House Executive office yesterday, but was extinguished quickly without damage.

It is an inside room, without light, in the cellar of the Executive offices, which were gutted by flames several years ago at Christmas time.

A fire detector system started an alarm and a White House policeman put out the blaze without the necessity of calling fire apparatus. Smoke from the fire, however, spread throughout the Executive office. President Roosevelt was not present at the time of the blaze.

Santa Pays Advance Decatur Heights Visit

Appearing in his best Christmas regalia, Saint Nick distributed gifts to the children present at the celebration at Fourteenth and Crittenden streets northwest. It was part of a Christmas tree celebration sponsored by the Decatur Heights Business Men's Association and the community's churches. A tree decorated with lights and tinsel and the Independent Boys Band were there to greet the citizens and Santa.

Suicide?

Dog Leaps Seven Floors to His Death.

A German shepherd puppy leaped seven floors to his death yesterday from the home of a new master, Dr. Thomas L. Miller, in the Park Lane Apartments.

Dr. Miller found the dog shivering in front of his home eight days ago, and adopted him. The animal tested the pillows and the comforts of the apartment during the rainy weather. They were curious luxuries.

Yesterday Dr. Miller went out. The dog wandered about the apartment, barking to be shown an open door, which would lead him to the street. He jumped upon the furniture and overturned the telephone.

Then he saw the screen at the open window. Thrusting his nostrils against it, he pushed. As it gave way he plunged to the street, far below. Dr. Miller found his pet dead when he returned half an hour later.

D. C. Teachers Given Salaries 10 Days Early

$500,000 Disbursed Here, in Time for Yuletide Shopping.

Santa Claus visited the District's more than 2,700 school teachers yesterday when $500,000 was disbursed in checks ten days before due.

The checks, distributed at the Franklin Administration Building, were for a full month's pay. They are usually distributed at the end of each month. The teachers, although gaining the advantage of receiving their money ten days before the end of the month and in time for Christmas shopping, were reminded that six weeks will elapse before they are paid again.

Disbursement at this time was made possible by the fact that teachers completed their work for the month yesterday. School officers, clerks and custodians received a half month's pay on the fifteenth and will receive the other half at the end of the month.

While teachers get a full ten-day holiday, together with pupils, school officers and other employes at the Franklin building will be back at work Tuesday after the regular Government holiday. The President's executive order, declaring a holiday tomorrow and Monday, was sent to Superintendent Frank W. Ballou yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The spirit of Christmas was evidenced at Franklin School yesterday morning when the glee clubs of Elliot Junior High and McKinley High paraded through the building singing carols.

In contrast to this atmosphere of gayety was a steady file of women applying for positions in connection with the nursery classes to be established next year. This led to an announcement by Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, that all applications must be made to Leroy Halbert, director of emergency relief, at his headquarters on Indiana avenue, and that no applications will be considered at the Franklin School.

Father, Son Hurt In Trolley Crash

Truck Collides With Car Filled With Shoppers.

The driver of a truck and his son were reported injured critically late yesterday when their vehicle collided with a Capital Transit Co. street car, filled with Christmas shoppers, at Nichols avenue and S street southeast. None of the passengers was hurt.

John E. Smith, 41, of Fort Foote, Md., truck driver, suffered a possible skull fracture and internal injuries, and his son, Wilbur, 17, suffered a possible skull fracture and bruises. Both were taken to Casualty Hospital.

Hobo "Jungles" Get Placards Advertising Transient Relief

U. S. Seeks to Put Over Aid Campaign for Transients.

With thousands clamoring for jobs, villages, cities and States scrambling for public works projects, and other hundreds standing in line for relief, the Government has taken to advertising to aid in putting over one of its relief measures.

Morris Lewis, director of the Federal Transient Relief plan, yesterday told how the project was being advertised to "sell" transients on the new system. Placards advertising the service are being posted in the Nation's "jungles," flop-houses, missions and gathering places of transients.

The posters all bear warning that railroads on January 1 will ban the time-honored practice of "riding the rods." Names of cities and towns in the area which have established the Federal Transient Relief plan are listed, and the transients urged to get to a station before the railroad campaign starts.

Lewis said the campaign will show whether the drifting of a large unstable population can be successfully controlled. The transient service has been set up in about 32 States, he indicated.

Restaurant to Serve Yule Dinner to Needy

Louis Pappas, proprietor of a restaurant at 511 Ninth street northwest, will serve 200 chicken dinners to the needy on Christmas Day from 10 a. m. to noon.

The tickets have been turned over to Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown and John F. Scott for distribution.

Famous Sourdough, Here on a Bet, Will See the President.

"Out of the night that was 50 below into the din and glare" of Bethesda stumbled "Burning Daylight."

That's mixing Robert W. Service and Jack London a little, but it happened yesterday, and at Bethesda, too.

Burning Daylight, the flesh and blood hero of London's novel of that name, yelled "gee, haw and mush" to his team of malemutes as he brought them in from Copper Center, Alaska.

If you remember London's Burning Daylight, the fastest mushing sourdough who ever carried the mail from Circle City to Dawson, you will appreciate Slim Williams, who came to town yesterday.

He Takes All Bets.

Burning Daylight couldn't take a dare, you know, or leave a bet uncovered if his prowess was the matter in question.

Well, Slim Williams started on his journey because of a bet. A year ago last November he and some sourdoughs were sitting around the stove and he happened to mention that he could drive his dogs to the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago.

Differences of opinion make dog races. His boast was called. Two days later the dogs were pushing southward on the longest dog sledge journey ever made.

Wolves Beset Him.

His team of dogs, eight malemutes, which are of wolf strain, led by a Mackenzie River husky, made the trip successfully. One malemute, running free because of a sore foot, was killed by wolves.

Well, Burning Daylight went to Fairbanks and had himself appointed a semiofficial representative to petition the Interior Department for a highway from Fairbanks to the United States.

Then he pushed off in a wilderness, living on game, through the wild Alaskan and Yukon country. The spring thaw found him in British Columbia, where residents gave him a wheeled sledge.

In Washington Today.

It was with this sledge that he arrived at Bethesda yesterday. He will come into Washington and camp in back of the Interior Building today.

"I've come through 178 degrees of change in temperature in the last 13 months," Daylight said. "It was 60 below just north of Dawson, just before last Christmas, and it was 118 in the shade when I hit Montana last July."

The veteran dog musher, who has lived in Alaska since the 90's, will stay here about a month and appear for the highway project before Secretary Ickes and Congressional committees. He also will visit the President.

It will not be "mush" back to Alaska, he said. He and his brother, Fred Williams, who came with him, and the dogs will travel by plane, boat and train on the journey home.

How much was the bet? We don't know.

Work Will Start On Logan School

Condemnation Case Award Made in D. C. Court.

Construction of the Logan Elementary School for colored children will be ordered immediately, Engineer Commissioner Gotwals stated yesterday, following announcement of an award of $57,375 in a condemnation case in District Supreme Court.

A jury returned a verdict on nine lots and buildings on a tract bounded by G street and Second and Third streets northeast. It was accepted by Walter L. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel, in behalf of the District.

South Capitol Street Bridge Project Listed

Extension of Park Drive to Naval Air Station Also Before CWA.

Construction of the long-advocated bridge over the Anacostia River at South Capitol street and extension of Riverside Drive through Anacostia Park from Eleventh street bridge to the Naval Air Station, were reported in a list of projects before Public Works and Civil Works Administrations yesterday.

The proposals have not been acted upon. With them is a project for running South Capitol street across the foot of Congress Heights past Bolling Field.

Citizens' associations and other groups have been seeking a South Capitol street bridge for many years. They point to inconvenience to Anacostia and Congress Heights districts through lack of a direct bridge.

Portions of the proposed Riverside drive already have been started downstream from the Eleventh street bridge. It would pass through the site of Camp Marks of the Bonus Army.

In addition, the road and bridge would cut three miles from the distance from downtown to Bolling Field. The improvements, it is said, would tie in nicely with recent additions and improvements at Bolling Field and the Anacostia Naval Air Station.

The gift without the giver is bare, they say. And often the giver is bare of gifts until he reads "Holliday Hints" in the Classified Columns of The Post.

Census Supervisors Named For Three Special Surveys

Only Business Study to Be Made Within Capital Area.

LOUIS P. ALLEN.

District supervisors to have charge of forthcoming census activities, in connection with which 28,577 persons are expected to be employed, were named yesterday by William L. Austin, director of the census.

Three District supervisors were named in Maryland. They are John H. Hoffman, Hagerstown; Joseph M. Atkinson, Baltimore, and Fred W. Gore, Cambridge.

Supervisors for Virginia have not been named.

Plan Three Divisions.

The census will be in three divisions: a census of American business, a real property inventory, and an analysis of real estate taxation.

Present plans call only for a business census in the District, to employ from 80 to 90 persons.

All persons employed on the three projects will be hired through the Civil Works Administration.

The real estate inventory and analysis will be conducted in 60 selected cities.

A total of 210 persons will conduct the business census in Maryland. The number to be employed in the real estate inventory in that State has not yet been determined.

The Civil Works Administration has alloted $5,415,120 for expenses of the projects, designed to give work to unemployed men and women as well as to obtain information much needed by the Department of Commerce and other departments.

Seek Full Enumeration.

In Maryland the real estate inventory will be made at Hagerstown and Frederick. In Virginia it will be made in Richmond, and in West Virginia at Wheeling.

The Census Bureau is expected to ask Congress for authorization of a complete enumeration of the population, to start probably next fall. The enumeration usually is made only every 10 years, but the Census Bureau feels that because of shifting of population and changes of conditions since the 1930 census, a new enumeration is now desirable.

D. C. to Feed Needy Pupils

Funds Will Be Sought From U. S. to Give Lunches.

The District Commissioners will ask the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for sufficient funds to provide lunches for undernourished children in the District schools, Commissioner George E. Allen said yesterday afternoon.

The commissioner said he would not know how much will be requested until after the welfare department completes a survey, but he estimated it would be between $25,000 and $30,000. It will be enough, he said, to provide lunches throughout the next school semester.

Administration of the fund will be in the hands of the District Emergency Relief Bureau, headed by Leroy A. Halbert, but advice of the Board of Education and school officials will be sought.

Representative Clarence J. McLeod, former acting chairman of the House District Committee, requested, in a letter to Allen, that the commissioners make the application.

McLeod said that funds for similar purposes had already been granted to other cities.

Bureau Issues Warning Against Candy Peddlers

Merchants were warned yesterday by the Better Business Bureau against persons attempting to sell 2-pound boxes of candy at $5 each, supposedly for the purpose of defraying expenses of the tribute meeting of Victory Post of the American Legion, to be held January 2.

Charities Kept Secret by the Film Notables

Benefactions Known Many; Xmas Functions Start; Amusement Chat.

Hollywood players who don't mind talking about their newest divorces or their latest romances, almost invariably betray a tendency to shut up like Pullman car windows when approached on the topic of their private benefactions at Christmas—or any other, time. In the matter of their charities, as Mr. Robbin Coons points out in a series of dots and dashes over the wires of the Associated Press, the film luminaries assume the attitude that it is none whatever of the left hand's business what the right hand is doing.

Very few of them, however, could be accused of this becoming reticence on the ground that they have nothing to conceal. If the whole truth were known, it would probably turn out that there are no more generous people on earth than those upon whom the gods of the cinema have cast their golden smile.

Subscriptions to the Community Chest and the Motion Picture Relief Fund are but a conventional and superficial part of the donations made from the high salaries that have recently been the bone of so much contention in high places.

Some Private Charities.

As well known as Charlie Chaplin's or Will Rogers' are Marie Dressler's "secret" benefactions.

Marion Davies' Christmas party for the inmates of her privately supported clinic, and other children, draws publicity by its very nature, but it is not a public revelation made at Miss Davies' behest or with her sanction.

There are scores of others whose activities in the direction of a helping hand to the less fortunate and the needy leak out only because intimate friends fail always to perceive the profit in keeping the activities of the right hand a complete secret from the left.

For instance, Genevieve Tobin is known to contribute monthly to the upkeep of a small boys' school in Kentucky.

Eddie Cantor's List.

Mr. Coons also recites Eddie Cantor's well-known, year-round philanthropies directed principally to the N. V. A. and a Jewish welfare fund. His stanch fidelity to the aims, accomplishments and support of the East Side Boys Club, that played so vital a part in his own youth, is one of the highlights of his career and one of the fine sidelights on his character.

Richard Dix goes in for Christmas baskets, and there are stories about two youngsters Joan Crawford is sending through school, although they do not come from Miss Crawford, nor yet from Mr. Eddie de Star Melcher, her inveterate biographer.

And then there is June Knight, of whom it might be least expected, who is reported to have taken the children of three "adopted families" on a personal Christmas shopping tour.

Seasonal reports from many West Coast studios indicate that the elaborate and expensive Christmas cards which the stars used to go in for in such a grand way are conspicuously absent from their plans for the Yuletide this year and that the difference is being expended in useful provision for the Christmas happiness of those who have not "got the breaks" and are, as a result, "down and out"—or at least down. The film colony, if the world but knew it, is not nearly so black as it is painted in the scandal sheets. Unfortunately, there are no tabloids devoted to the Good Samaritans!

A short subject that will enlist eager interest in the National Capital when it is presented at RKO-Keith's Theater in conjunction with "A Man's Castle," opening today, is the new tabloid musical comedy, "Hizzoner," starring Bert Lahr, late star of "Flying High," "Hot-Cha," that celebrated Sabbath evening Mocha and Java hour on the radio and other important assignments.

This gay auxiliary feature of the Christmas bill at Keith's is the first release in a new series being produced by that eminent overlord of the dance orchestras, Maestro Meyer Davis.

At the opening of "The Lake" at the National last Monday night Mr. Davis admonished this department to watch for "Hizzoner" as something that it was hoped would prove to be precisely what the doctor ordered in the way of Yuletide entertainment. Ethel Waters, the queenly Harlemite who tops all of the sepia songstresses, is star of the second of the Davis shorts and it was confided that along about the seventh release in the series, the old baton swisher, Meyer himself, will be the star.

This is the one the boys and girls who have danced to his music since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary will be waiting for!

"Ring Out, Glad Bells!"

In observance of the spirit of the Yule, City Manager Carter Barron, of the Loew interests in Washington, yesterday noon—which is to say between the hours of 12 and an ostensible 2 that extended itself through most of the afternoon—entertained the dramatic desks of the local press and divers and sundry other kindred spirits in the executive offices in the imperial recesses of Loew's Fox Theater, at a buffet luncheon that developed into quite a feast of reason and flow of soul.

Among the revelations that evolved from the latter was the definite statement on the part of Mine Host Barron that Max Baer has been positively signed for a personal appearance on the stage of Loew's Fox in the song and dance skit in which he is now cavorting in the Manhattan area. The only thing left in doubt is the actual date of his appearance. At the present moment it seems that the week of January 5 was just a trifle optimistic and that Fisticuffer Baer may not come along until a week or two after that time. The point is, however, that he really is coming, dimples, smile, dancing shoes and all.

As it was stated here yesterday that they would, Jed Harris, producer of "The Lake," starring Katharine Hepburn at the National Theater, and his company manager, the veteran Joe Glick, returned from a one-day trip to New York last evening. "The Lake" will open in the Martin Beck Theater, New York, on Christmas night under charity auspices that have long since sold out the house and put first-night tickets at the fairly prohibitive price of $100 a pair—or a yard, as the boys down at the corner would say. That, my masters, is quite a price for any two tickets.

The Skies Brighten.

Effectually nullifying yesterday's dreary outlook of no legitimate theater attraction in the Capital for the next three weeks—taking into account Mr. J. J. Shubert's temperamental cancellation of Joe Cook's engagement in "Hold Your Horses" the week of January 8, at the National—came last night the joyful announcement from Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the E street temple of the lively arts that "Ten Minute Alibi," the current New York hit occupying the Bijou Theater, to which it was moved from the Ethel Barrymore Theater, scene of its initial Broadway triumph, will be presented locally the week beginning with a Sunday night performance New Year's Eve.

"Ten Minute Alibi" is an exciting drama by Anthony Armstrong which is being presented in 23 countries, not including Germany, where it has been banned by order of Dictator Adolf Hitler. It is presented by Lee Shubert and Crosby Gaige and was directed by Herman Shumlin, the man who scored what was looked upon as a miracle of staging with the original version of Vicki Baum's "Grand Hotel."

Original Cast.

The play comes to Washington direct from its New York run of six months, with the original cast intact. One of the unique features of this cast, by the way, is that it includes only one feminine character, played by Daphne Warren Wilson, cordially remembered by Capital theatergoers as a former local stock favorite.

The male members of the cast are Bramwell Fletcher, James Spurin-Calleia, Stiano Braggiotti, of the famous family that has contributed a feminine dancer and a male pianist to the directory of American entertainers; Oswald York, Reynolds Denniston and John Williams.

Mr. John Montague, one of the more reliable of the theater's stentors, recently here in celebration of the so-called "Ziegfeld Follies," arrived in town last night to herald the coming of "Ten Minute Alibi," although he had none for not getting here sooner.

Speaking of Yuletide luncheons and one thing and another, Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's has issued summonses for a preview screening of "Flying Down to Reno," his RKO-Radio New Year's attraction, starring Dolores Del Rio and Fred Astaire, in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange on Saturday at 11:30, following which the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the Fourth Estate will be escorted in state to the Keith offices on Fifteenth street and fed with seasonable vittles and plied with 3.2 lemon pop.

Explorer in Letter Tells of Several Aids Receiving Training.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, whose second Antarctic expedition is now approaching the region of the South Pole, is a firm believer in the Boy Scout movement, he writes to Dr. James E. West, the chief Scout executive and editor of Boys' Life.

Linn C. Drake, Scout executive of the District of Columbia Council, received a copy of Admiral Byrd's letter.

"I was very pleased to have your (Dr. West's) letter regarding the acceptance of Paul Siple again as the representative of Boy Scouts of America," Admiral Byrd wrote. "I would have liked to have a national competition again and pick another Boy Scout to go with me, but I was uncertain for so long as to whether we could get away this year or not. When we knew for certain that we could go, it was too late to make a careful selection.

"It is interesting to note that thousands of the applications that have poured in to our personnel officers have been from Scouts or men with scouting experience, and among the ice party that I have picked out there are at least four who are Scouts, three of them eagles, I believe.

"Paul and I will be glad to cooperate with you in any way that we can help you in scouting, for I still am a firm believer that scouting is the greatest boys' movement in the world. I am happy to give it a boost whenever I can.

"Paul's work will be as the biologist of the expedition and I am looking forward to his producing very good results.

"I wish to thank you for sending me greetings and best wishes and may I return the same to you, the Scout officials and the Scout movement?

"You could not possibly have a better or finer representative than Paul."

Paul Siple is the Erie, Pa., Eagle Scout who accompanied the first Byrd Antarctic expedition of 1928-1930 as the representative of the Boy Scouts of America.

Dr. West said 26 of the 60 members of the expedition were or still are active in the Boy Scout movement.

There are four Eagle Scouts in Byrd's party, besides Siple. They are Alton A. Lindsey, instructor of biology at Cornell University and assistant scoutmaster of Troop 2, Ithaca, N. Y., the assistant biologist of the expedition; Olin Stancliff, scoutmaster of Troop 50, Wesleyville, Pa., a dog team driver; Burt Davis, of Troop 1, Hingham, Mass., second mate on the expedition's icebreaker, Bear, of Oakland, and Joseph Hill, Troop 30, Canyon, Tex., a cook aboard the same ship.

Admiral Byrd was elected in 1927, with 21 other famous outdoors men, as an honorary Scout, and in 1929 he was awarded the Silver Buffalo, highest honor of the national council for "distinguished service to boyhood." He is now an honorary member of the national council.

Capt. W. F. Verleger, captain of the Byrd expedition flagship, Jacob Ruppert, is a troop committeeman of Troop 11, New Canaan, Conn., and Dr. T. C. Poulter, of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, head of the scientific work of the expedition, is a merit badge counselor.

Hard Liquors By State Sale, Virginia Plan

Commission Would Allow Liberal Provision on Wine, Beer.

Richmond, Dec. 21 (AP).—Sale of distilled liquors exclusively through State dispensaries in sealed packages for off-premises consumption, and a private license system for the sale of wine and beer, were recommended tonight in a majority report from the legislative commission on liquor control.

Complete control would lie in an alcoholic beverage control board of three full-time members appointed by the governor, at salaries of $7,500 a year each. They would have broad and sweeping powers to enforce the law and combat the bootlegger.

Beverages of less than 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight are not subject to the provisions of the proposed act.

The State would import or purchase from Virginia distillers all alcoholic beverages other than beer, and would dispense liquor through State stores. Location would be determined by the board.

No Permit to Buy.

The individual would not be required to obtain a permit to purchase, nor would he be required to give his name. Not more than one gallon might be purchased by one person at one time.

Hotels, restaurants, clubs, dining cars and boats would be permitted to sell wine and beer by the glass with or without meals. Other private licenses would be restricted to the sale of beer and wine for off-premises consumption.

Local option was preserved, with the proviso that no election might be held within six months after the act should become effective, nor more than once in four years.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board would have authority to issue, deny or revoke licenses for the sale of beer and wine, and there would be no appeal.

It would likewise have full control of the price of liquor, and could vary this to defeat bootlegger competition.

Profit from sales and from licenses would go to the general fund. Localities would be empowered to license distilleries, breweries, wineries and retailers of wine and beer.

Signed by Thirteen.

The report was signed by 13 of the 15 members. Howard S. Zigler, of Harrisonburg, one of the Republican members, declined to sign because he felt permission for hotels and restaurants to serve wine would not "prohibit the saloon."

State Senator Henry T. Wickham, of Hanover, prepared a minority report assailing the recommendations as in violation of the bill of rights and an infringement on both legislative and judicial functions.

Three other separate statements were made. Chairman John W. Eggleston, of Norfolk; Maitland H. Bustard, of Danville; James S. Barron, of Norfolk; A. P. Staples, of Roanoke, and Charles W. Moss, of Richmond, signed a statement advocating that the revenue be divided one-third to the general fund and two-thirds to the counties and cities in proportion to population, or on some other equitable basis.

Former State Senator C. O'Connor Goolrick, of Fredericksburg, prominent wet, urged distribution of the revenue to localities for the specific purpose of helping defray the cost of education.

G. Walter Mapp, of Accomac, long a dry leader, signed with the statement that he favored the dispensary plan, but that the bill included provisions and details he did not approve.

The majority and minority recommendations will be placed before the General Assembly January 10.

D. C. Will Study Costs of Paving

Street Railway Merger Brings Problems.

A committee was named yesterday by the District Commissioners to solve numerous problems which have arisen since the street railway merger became effective, as it relates to street paving costs. The committee consists of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel, and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

The merger Decmeber 1 transferred much of the burden of paving casts adjacent to street railway tracks from the Capital Transit Co. to the District. While the amount depends on numerous factors, District officials estimate that it will cost the city between $300,000 and $400,000 a year extra.

The merger act states that the transit company shall bear the cost of paving and repairs whenever track repairs are made at a time when the adjacent street is not being paved, and that it shall bear half the cost of other paving or maintenance "between its track and for two feet outside the outer rails."

30 Back to Work On Heating Plant

Pittsburgh Agreement Ends Two Weeks' Strike.

The central heating plant, a huge Government unit on which every Federal Building will depend for warmth, moved more rapidly toward completion yesterday when approximately 30 ironworkers ended a two weeks' strike and returned to their jobs.

The walkout was called by the union's international headquarters in St. Louis in protest against the Rust Engineering Co., contractors, allegedly employing nonunion ironworkers on a distillery job near Pittsburgh.

Settlement of that controversy was effected Wednesday by signed agreement but delay in receiving orders from St. Louis prevented the strikers here from returning to work until noon yesterday.

Would Oust Two Commissioners

Suit Challenges 2 Montgomery Commissioners

Posts Illegal, Lawyer Says, Because They Helped Raise Salary.

Less than six hours after she had taken office, Miss Lavinia Engle, of Forest Glen, was challenged as a member of the Montgomery County Commissioners in an ouster suit filed in circuit court at Rockville by John Oxley, Rockville attorney.

The suit also challenged Dr. George L. Edmonds' membership on the board.

Oxley claims that as Miss Engle and Dr. Edmonds were members of the Maryland Legislature which increased the salaries of county commissioners from $1,200 to $1,800 a year, it is unconstitutional for them to serve.

Miss Engle was sworn in yesterday at 11 a. m. to take the vacancy created by the appointment of Lacy Shaw as county park commissioner.

Commissioner Shaw sat last night for the first time with the planning commission, of which he also became a member.

Mystery Cloaks Brutal Slaying

Boston, Dec. 21 (AP).—The apparently motiveless slaying of Ethel Zuckerman, 18-year-old South End bakeshop clerk, tonight had police mystified.

Her body was found last night by customers of the store. She had been brutally beaten, her skull crushed, her nose and jaw fractured and a large carving knife had been driven through her throat, pinning her to the bakeshop floor.

Wheldon admitted, police said, he had been in the store shortly before, but insisted he had nothing to do with the killing. Ten loaves of bread which he purchased for his brother and over which Wheldon and the girl had a discussion were found in Wheldon's home, police said.

Jail Holds Two, 16 Post Bonds In Oyster War

Virginians Held, Maryland Men Released After Hearing.

Two Virginians arrested in the Potomac oyster war were held by failure to post bond of $300 each by a Virginia court yesterday, as 18 Maryland men arrested at the same time gained their release by posting that amount.

The two Virginia men are Ralph Williams and John Lewis, both of Onancock. They were taken to King George, Va., courthouse by Bruce Wilmer, deputy sheriff of Charles County, and turned over to local authorities. Wilmer also swore out warrants for seven other Virginians accused of dredging oysters.

Bond for the Maryland prisoners was furnished by John C. Marshall, R. Elwood Dize and Archie H. Marsh, who live in Somerset County on the Eastern Shore.

The nine boats in which the Marylanders are accused of dredging oysters are still held by Charles County authorities. They can not be released until appraised and bond for their value has been furnished.

Original plans for bailing the Maryland men called for Harry W. Phoebus, of Princess Anne, candidate for Republican gubernatorial nomination, to furnish the bond.

Mother Wins Child's Custody, Then Loses Again by Decree

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—Master Jimmy Coleman, jr., of South Bend, Ind., occupied the attention of the two Chicago courts today and then went home with his father, notwithstanding the promise of Judge Alfred O. Erickson, to the weeping mother that she should have her boy.

Within the space of an hour the municipal and circuit courts had juggled the 6-year-old tot between the divorced parents, and for the second time in a week a habeas corpus writ in a higher court thwarted the sympathy extended a defendant by Judge Erickson in City Court. Last week he promised to help a Florida chain gang fugitive defeat extradition, but changed his mind and the circuit court took jurisdiction.

Lost Child Two Years Ago.

Mrs. Ilo Blumenthal, 26, lost custody of Jimmy two years ago, when James Coleman, sr., obtained a divorce in Indiana, charging her with adultery. She went after him in South Bend last Friday, brought him here and was charged with child stealing by her former husband, now living with his fourth wife.

Judge Erickson summarily brushed away objections of the State and dismissed the fugitive warrant against Mrs. Blumenthal today.

"Maybe the woman was guilty of indiscretions in the past," he said, "but her former husband is now remarried to his fourth wife, who is an expectant mother. There is evidence that there is no room for little Jimmy in his home. Mrs. Blumenthal has a good home and is a good provider. She may keep the boy."

Mrs. Bluementhal burst into tears as she explained to the youngster what the judge meant. Then she was notified of a habeas corpus writ Coleman had obtained. The father had not attended the municipal court session.

Made Legal Question.

She took Jimmy into circuit court. There the matter of a proper home for the child was not considered. Judge Klarkowski said the whole thing simmered down to a question whether his court should recognize jurisdiction of Indiana courts which wrote the divorce decree. He awarded Jimmy to his father.

The mother's attorney said he would seek an amendment of the divorce decree at South Bend next week.

According to Philippine newspapers Osias will become a candidate for senator in his district in the coming Philippine election.

Osias was the first Filipino division superintendent of schools and at present is president of the National University at Manila.

Workers Must Pay for Jobs, Senators Told

"Kick-Back" Plan Appalls Investigators of Racketeering.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The U. S. Senate committee investigating racketeering was told at a hearing today that the "kick back" racket, under which workers are required to return part of their wages, is virtually universal on construction jobs throughout the country.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, chairman of the committee, professed amazement at the testimony of George J. Atwell, president of the George J. Atwell Foundation Corporation, that 25 per cent of all wages paid under prevailing rate of wages agreements was returned by the workers.

Adolph Dzik, attorney for the racketeering committee of the American Federation of Labor building trades unions in New York, told the committee his life had been threatened because of his investigation.

He said the "kick back" racket is usually the result of connivance between contractors and union leaders.

Senator Copeland said he would urge an immediate investigation by the United States Attorney General.

"How far up in Government circles does this go?" he asked. "Does it go up into Washington? Is there any one there who profits from this?

"I don't know," replied Dzik. "I think it is purely a local racket."

Atwell declared that unless the situation was corrected millions of dollars to be spent on the Federal public works program and intended for labor would find its way into the hands of racketeers and unfair contractors.

"If you were to call a meeting at Madison Square Garden of all the people who are 'kicking back' to their employers, you would fill the Garden ten times over," he said.

Dzik said one from which the racket takes requires laborers to send back part of their wages through the mails.

'Bleeding Hand' Holdup Suspect Under Arrest

A youth with an injured hand was held at the Fifth Precinct Station last night in connection with the "bleeding hand" robbery of the Pioneer Laundry at 910 Rhode Island avenue northeast Wednesday night.

The young man, who said he was Anthony M. Ferri, 18, living at 4214 Thirteenth street northeast, was arrested yesterday on the street. He was identified by a lookout sent soon after the robbery, which described the injured hand. Ferri said he hurt his hand in a door. The man who held up the laundry held Manager Daniel Barrett at bay while he took $60 from the cash register.

Polite Bandits Seize Shotguns And Store Cash

Bryan, Ohio, Dec. 21 (AP).—Four men held up the Williams County hardware store here tonight, obtaining $200 from the cash register and seized a dozen shotguns after locking 15 clerks and customers in a cellar.

The customers were treated with courtesy. As two of the bandits ushered them toward the cellar, they warned the patrons the steps were in bad condition.

Cancer Salve Doctors Freed In Death Trial

Directed Verdict Follows State's Admission of Inadequate Case.

The trial of two physicians in Montgomery County's "cancer cure" case ended dramatically in Rockville Circuit Court yesterday with a surprise announcement by the prosecution that charges would be dropped.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott told the court he "was unable to obtain sufficient evidence for conviction." By direction of the court, the jury returned not guilty verdicts, freeing Dr. Harry R. Street, of Washington and Dr. Sherwood Ferris, of Chevy Chase, Md.

The two doctors were indicted on manslaughter charges in connection with the death last May of Mrs. Cora Britton, wife of a Mays Landing, N. J., physician. Mrs. Britton, while a patient of Drs. Street and Ferris, submitted to a salve treatment for cancer.

"The testimony of the State has not shown sufficient negligence to substantiate the charge of manslaughter and I do not feel like asking a verdict of guilty," Prescott told the court.

He later declared he had been impressed by the testimony of over 30 former patients of Dr. Street, who said they had been cured of various "growths" through treatment with his cancer salve.

The State has contended that Mrs. Britton died as the result of a "powerful corrosive" in the salve.

A LEGEND of St. NICHOLAS

ONE night many years ago in the city of Patras, in Greece, a father and mother were awaiting the birth of a child. Suddenly an angel appeared and said to them: "Name him . . . Nicholas."

Now the name of Nicholas meant "victory of the people" and the parents were overjoyed . . . for they knew their son was destined to live among the immortals. For many days the father went about the city bestowing lavish gifts in honor of little Nicholas and his generosity came to be associated with the child's name.

Nicholas in manhood became the Bishop of Smyrna . . . and he, too, was known for his generosity . . . and for the miracles he performed. The sick were healed . . . and once, it is told, he brought back the breath of life to one who had died.

One day he learned of a poor nobleman who had three daughters . . . and though they were attractive they could not marry, for the impoverished father had no money for dowries.

Knowing of the father's pride . . . the good Nicholas puzzled over a means of helping him. Then one night . . . using the friendly darkness to cloak his action . . . he climbed to a grating over a room in the nobleman's house and dropped a purse of gold upon the floor. A second and third purse he secretly bestowed on following nights . . . and soon the three daughters were happily married.

Sixteen hundred years have passed since St. Nicholas under the cover of night gave the purses of gold to the nobleman . . . since he healed the sick and became beloved of all the people for his generous gifts.

But he lives today in every land where the Christmas festival is known . . . the children's patron saint . . . the personification of unselfish giving.

BELOVED of all the people . . . so lived Nicholas, Bishop of Smyrna, who healed the sick and befriended man . . . And because of his unselfish generosity . . . living on as St. Nicholas—the children's patron saint.

The Washington Post

In appearance, the Santa Claus of today with twinkling eye and merry manner . . . flowing white hair and beard . . . perhaps personifies the patrons of a festival dating back far beyond the Christian era.

Many years before the birth of the Christ child, the ancients of Greece and Rome and the Northern countries celebrated the period of the shortest days of the year with feasting . . . believing it would insure the return of the sun and of the long warm days.

The patron gods were the Greeks' Silenium, chief of the Satyrs . . . the Romans' Saturn and the Teutons' Thor. They were venerable gods, so the legends say, with flowing white hair and beards.

Many of the harmless features of the pagan Saturnalian festivals were adopted by the early Christians to reconcile heathen converts. Christ-mass replaced the festival of the returning sun . . . and as the centuries passed the winter solstice festival changed entirely to one of observance of the birth of Christ.

Some believe the festival of the ancients lives on . . . in the personification of the convivial, venerable Silenium and Saturn and Thor . . . in the form of a "jolly old fellow" known to every boy and girl in Washington as Santa Claus.

No End of Books

Christmas Gifts for the Young Gentleman Who Doesn't Know What Haut Brion Is or the Old Gentleman Who Does, and for the Antipacifist.

Just last fortnight the towering structure of the eighteenth amendment dissolved away, and suddenly we found ourselves able to drive out to Bethesda and Silver Spring and purchase, in broad daylight over a neat counter, certain bottles labeled port and sherry.

I do not want to exaggerate. But I must affirm that to any American born in this century—there must be forty million of us—that is one of the most astonishing facts in a generally astonishing lifetime. What is wine? we ask, and now we can stay for an answer.

To be sure we have tasted sherry and port, in some simple-minded fashion. A few families no doubt kept the flavors familiar and habitual throughout those 14 years. But nevertheless confront the rest of us with the terms Tio Pepe and Cockburn '96, and we do not know what is meant. Vaguely, we know sherry comes first at dinner and port last. All the rest had joined the dust of forgotten cultures. What did an eighth century Greek know of Aristotle? Less than 20 years in our time had accomplished a like vanishing.

Then all the publishers rushed to our rescue. Journalists sailed for France and mailed back detailed lists of the French vintages. Mr. Julian Street, who had kept up with the subject, came out with hearty advices. Books in rhyme, books dry and technical as works on mineralogy, books as gay as a copy of "Vanity Fair," came from the presses in a flood. But all that they said could have been found in the little yellow-printed leaflet of the Quebec Liquor Dispensaries. Tilt this bottle, let that one stand, this with fish, that with the entree, this at room temperature, that slightly chilled—you see I can not even remember clearly these heretofore theoretical rules.

But there was a culture, a vast one of delicate enthusiasm and refined tastes. And there was one man, out of thousands who were acquainted with it, who had studied it for a lifetime and, more important, had set it down with the most graceful charm in the world. His book comes to the younger of us now with a surprise differing in degree only from that which the fourteenth century Italian felt when the Greek manuscripts were discovered. In its field, it constitutes a renaissance.

The late George Saintsbury was 75 when he wrote "Notes on a Cellar Book" (MacMillan, $2.50). All his life, but very modestly as he explains, he had bought wines, tasted them, compared them, above all enjoyed them with that informed kind of pleasure possible only to a "gentleman of the old school." One of the widest read and soundest of English literary critics, he applied the same voyaging spirit to wine. "I have never yet," he writes, "given a second-hand opinion of any thing, or book, or person."

The book is a record of the wines and liquors he found good and bad also. He treats of every variety from sherry to absinthe. Most of the vintages are in the nineteenth century. We are not likely to meet them. But the connoiseurship must and will be contagious.

Yet one should not think his lines a mere guidebook to a dispensary counter. He writes in a way we do not often see nowadays, with allusions to books he has enjoyed, with glinting references in Latin and quotations from all literature. We can not disremember that he was a scholar. But a hearty one, with humor and gusto and stingo, puncturing the "Pussyfoots," as he calls those who have not found an appreciative delight where he found it. Every page is full of the ripe flavor of a rare personality, and the book is in itself a work of literature.

For those under 30 there could be no better means of suggesting respect for "one of the three great joys of life." Yet perhaps it is the old, or reasonably old gentleman who will like it most, he who once knew very well how good was the Romanee Conti '58.

* * * *

The legendary belief that the court jester concealed sharp eyes, a canny brain and deep wisdom beneath his motley is, like most legends, based on fact.

Stretching the simile, Washingtonians have an example within 10 miles of town. For who are our "court jesters" these days but the columnist and the comic cartoonist? And Percy Crosby, creator of the pert and ragged "Skippy," known to millions of newspaper and magazine readers, in his house between Langley and McLean, Va., sits down and draws his comic strip with one hand and with the other defends his ideas of America and the world.

That is a curious combination. "Skippy" is the humor of boyhood, only once—in the famous case of "Skippy's" Memorial Day prayer—stepping over onto a serious adult topic. But under that role of giving the public such normal, natural and innocent delight, Mr. Crosby is a passionately thinking person. Two beliefs he holds with spirited candor—that prohibition was an invasion of private life and the source of immense public and private evil, and that pacifism is treachery to America.

In "Always Belittlin'" (published by the author at McLean, $2), he presents, in text and drawings, a frontal attack upon his opponents in these two fields. The drawings are almost brutally direct at times: Uncle Sam lies on his face with a dagger stuck in him called "Army and Navy Economy Cut." The caption reads: "Why not call the cut by its proper name—the knife in the back!" Others are equally smashing. Mr. Crosby believes in preparedness with unabashed fervor.

Because no newspaper would accept his double-barreled work as a contribution, he had to buy space like an advertiser. Readers will remember his dialogue between the President and the Director of the Budget, which was printed as an "ad" in The Post of May 17 this year. "Always Belittlin'" collects this material within covers.

One may not agree with what he says, but one must, in the words of Voltaire, "defend his right to say it." He is a modern pamphleteer, an intense propagandist. He minces no words. You will be infuriated at what the book contains, or you will swear eternally by Mr. Crosby. There is no half-way mark.

If you use tact in bestowing the book, and choose a preparedness partisan, nothing would please a friend more than Mr. Crosby's crashing fulminations.

Hip Basques And Godets Are Paris Favorites

Skirts Are Flared With Princess Gores and Ruches.

The sheath-like silhouette is undergoing subtle changes in the form of bustle bows with long streamer ends, or slight cascades of the gown's material down the back of the skirt. Another variation played upon the familiar sheath theme consists of quaint little hip basques. These were introduced by Chanel and Patou with great success although only the very slender waisted figure looks well in them.

According to fashion leaders in Paris, the most striking evening gowns are created on simple lines and of lavish materials. Mainbocher and Chanel are using tulle for a few of their models but the majority of the first rank designers are clinging for dear life to cire, lame, paillettes, and velvet. Panne sauvage, a crumpled panne velvet, has been the sensation of the season. There are also heavy Lyons velvets, crinkled dull velvets, and the omnipresent transparent velvets.

Accessories for these luxurious costumes naturally include jewels. Diamond bracelets and pins have been seen much more frequently in smart Parisian restaurants this season than necklaces. Diadems and tiaras are popular but do not adorn practically every feminine head, as they do in this country. Most of the necklaces seen on chic Parisiennes have been single strands of pearls. Pearls and black velvet are always picturesque.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If December 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12 noon, from 3:30 to 4 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:40 to 9:40 a. m., from 2:20 to 2:50 p. m. and from 6 to 6:45 p. m.

You may find yourself in a bad hole on this date and inclined to become panicky. The situation will undoubtedly require calm and composure, so get yourself firmly in hand and you will come out with flying colors. Be careful what you say to acquaintances. There is danger in repeating what you hear.

The child born on this December 22 will be a tricky little one and one not to be trusted. He will be out for all he can get and will not care how he gets it. His parents will have to watch him, for this little one will have many erroneous ways which will cause him trouble later on unless immediately overcome. A likable little one withal and possessed of a very disarming manner.

If you were born on December 22, more than likely your greatest indoor sport is engaging in argument. You will argue with anybody, on any subject, at any time of the day or night, and you will take either side of the question. This characteristic of yours may stand you in good stead at times, but it will cost you many friends too. You enjoy antagonizing people, and it must be said of you that you are a past master of the art. You have a ready flow of words and you keep up on most of the general topics of daily interest. You contradict people flatly, whether you know what you are talking about or not; to say you are opinionated is to put it mildly.

If December 22 is the date of your birth, you are down deep a really kind-hearted person and you wouldn't think of hurting a fly. You often find yourself faced with the task of tackling some big problem or else backing down on what you have been saying. Without having any idea of what the results will be, you generally plunge right in, offering up at the same time a prayer for the best. You usually get away with "murder." You are inclined to do a good bit of crying about when things go wrong and exhibit a tendency to push the blame on the other fellow. In your home you are inclined to be noisy and blustering, but you are a loving mate withal.

Successful people born on December 22:

John S. Newberry, paleontologist.

Husband's Repartee.

The erstwhile husband of a famous stage star was seated at a dinner table the other night next to a gossipy dowager who had just returned from a fortnight of lolling upon the sands of the south of France.

"Oh, I've news for you," she chattered to the former husband. "I ran into your former wife at Juan-les-Pins. She was seen everywhere with one of those Balkan princes, and seemed quite enamored of him."

"I'm not surprised," dryly retorted the bored fellow. "Ilsa never could resist a ne'er-do-well."

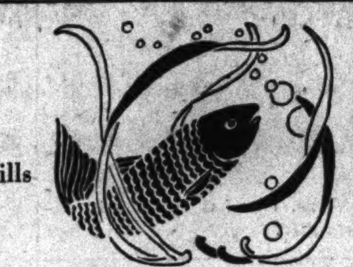
The Family Marketer



Marketer Finds Big Thrills and Big Bargains in Market Stalls.

"Nope, no excitement on the Chesapeake," said the fisherman in answer to the Marketer's question.

"Don't you ever have any?" the Marketer's voice was despairing.

"Wall, I did come close to the finish once." He tipped his battered hat on the back of his tousled head.

"It was one winter that the bay was frozen. There was six of us bringin' oysters up in a couple of little boats. We was goin' up a lane where the ice had parted, when the ice closed in, and the boat, she began to settle. We all jumped out, scratched our heads and wondered what to do. The oldest of us fishermen looked up and said, 'There's a nor'easter comin' up, there'l be snow an' wind and the ice'll break up and we'll all be blubbering in a little while.'"

The Marketer gasped.

"Wall we waited about a couple of hours. We couldn't walk the ice 'cause we was about five miles off shore and the ice wasn't solid. Pretty soon, I'll never forget it, we saw the lane opening. It started in shore and crept toward us like a big snake, twistin' an' windin'—creepin' nearer and nearer—an' crept past us by about 20 yards. Did we work! We got the boats into that lane an' the ol' motor was chug-chuggin' for all it was worth 'till we got to shore."

"I guess you're pretty glad you're having good weather now" she said, as she turned to look over the fisherman's wares.

Flounders, 10 and 15 cents a pound. Large channel bass is only 6 cents a pound if you buy in a large quantity, otherwise three pounds for 25 cents.

Quamquats, 10 cents a quart: tangerines, extra large, 15 cents a dozen; grapefruit, four and six for 25 cents; oranges, 15 and 25 cents a dozen; pears, for eating, 30 cents a dozen; delicious apples, six for 25 cents; lemons, 15 cents a dozen, and limes, 30 cents a dozen.

Lettuce sells at two heads for 15 cents; celery, two stalks for 15 cents; radishes, two bunches for 5 cents; endive for salads, 25 cents a pound; cucumbers, three for 10 cents; green peppers, four for 5 cents; tomatoes, 10 cents a pound; water cress 5 cents a bunch; mint, 10 cents a bunch.

Okra is 15 cents a box, new cabbage, 5 cents a pound; artichokes, 4 for 25 cents; eggplants, 3 for 25 cents; spinach, 5 cents a pound; string beans, 2 pounds for 15 cents; lima beans, 2 pounds for 25 cents; peas, 10 cents a pound; summer squash, 2 pounds for 15 cents; hubbard squash, 3 pounds for 10 cents; carrots and turnips, 5 cents a bunch. Chestnuts are 2 pounds for 25 cents, avacados, 15 cents each or 2 for 25 cents.

One market man puts up fancy baskets of fancy fruits as gifts for $2.50. He sells Christmas trees for 50 cents and $1, holly at 10 and 15 cents a bunch, and laurel at 5 cents a bunch.

Poultry at a waterfront stall is freshly killed and drawn for you. Turkeys are 28 cents a pound, ducks and geese are 20 cents a pound; chickens, stewing, 20 cents; baking, 25 cents; frying, 23 cents.

Daughter of Baron To Star in Own Play

She came here during the war as the daughter of Baron Silvercruys, president of the Belgian supreme court. Went off on a lecture tour for war relief and then rushed right back to finish the five-year course in three at the Yale School of Fine Arts.

Her career as a sculptor began meteorically with a one-man show under the patronage of Princess de Ligne, and since then she has made portrait busts of scores of celebrities from Queen Elizabeth of Belgium to the seven most famous athletes chosen at the 1932 Olympic games.

She raised the money for a Belgian-American orphanage, went to Chicago as a Republican delegate from Connecticut, played the lead in a junior league show and now has written a play of her own, "There Is No Death," in which she will have the role when it comes to Broadway.

How to Keep Well

The removal of superfluous hair is best done by the electric needle in those cases to which the method is suited. Unfortunately, there are a great many persons who wish to have such hair removed and who find this method unavailable or unsuited for some reason. There may be no expert on hand, or, if there is one, the expense may put the service out of reach. If many hairs are to be removed the method is too tedious, too painful, and too expensive to be practical.

Many make use of X-ray treatments because the service is less expensive as well as less tedious and uncomfortable. This method is a very unsatisfactory one. The hairs return promptly unless the skin is burned right up to the danger line.

Some make use of depilatory creams. These are composed of barium salts or allied compounds. They are unsatisfactory in that the hairs return promptly.

Modern Medicine quotes a German physician, Moncorps, as preferring a modified pumice stone method. The hairs are first bleached and made hard, stiff, and brittle by the use of a peroxide compound. The one he uses is composed of peroxide of hydrogen, 10 parts; benzol, 13 parts; dilute alcohol, 13 parts, and water, 13 parts. This mixture he applies to the hairs and keeps them moistened with it for one hour or more. Some skins are tough enough to stand this combination for 12 hours.

Two fine pumice stones are rubbed together until the rubbing surfaces are extra-smooth. The hairy areas are rubbed with a smooth surface pumice stone until the hairs are worn off smooth with the skin. The rubbing should be in the direction the hairs point. This generally requires five minutes' rubbing. A rubbing is done every day or twice daily. It is not necessary to reapply the peroxide bleach unless a new crop of hair is allowed to come out.

Pineapple Good In Salads at Christmas Time

Piquant Flavor Acceptable Among so Many Sweets.

"Here's richness!" said the famous Fat-Boy of Pickwick Papers, ushering in the 12 days of Christmas. The holiday meal of Merrie Old England properly claimed his ecstasy—and present-day America is not far behind in the exploitation of the "sugar, and spice, and everything nice"—which go toward making the holiday meal so important a part of the season's festivity. Christmas comes in with a flourish of plum puddings and pastries and sweets! Each more alluring than the last!

Lest the world be surfeited with too much "richness"—the holiday salad—which lends the relieving touch of piquancy to any holiday meal—is one of the most important of considerations in the season's menus! The ideal Christmas salad is not too sweet—nor too sour—neither too heavy nor too light.

Most highly recommended as the basis for the most healthful and festive holiday salads is pineapple in any of its diverse, adaptable forms—sliced, crushed or in tidbits, which lend themselves so agreeably to decoration. Pineapple has a piquant delicacy of flavor, a bland way of mingling with many combinations of food flavors, which commend it highly to the cook who seeks holiday variety.

Enlisting the Enemy's Cooperation.

Quite frequently, soundly bid hands are wrecked on the rocks of distribution. Despite the bad break, however, Declarer may still have a play to make the hand, provided he can get the opponents to slip ever so slightly. Today's hand was played in the semfinal round of the recent Vanderbilt Cup Tournament. North and South's overbidding is accounted for by the fact that they were slightly behind and felt desperate efforts were needed to regain lost ground. How well they succeeded is seen below:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

South	North
1♠	3♠(1)
6♠(2)	Pass

1—The North hand is actually a shade too weak to bid three spades. Despite the very fine trump support and the two outside Aces, the distribution is most indifferent.

2—Only a slight overbid. South decides not to show his diamonds, as a diamond lead would be more than welcome. He is gambling chiefly on the club situation.

West's opening lead was the King of hearts. Naturally West had no way of telling that a club lead would defeat the contract quite speedily. As a matter of fact, the West player, with his trump holding, did not expect to have much trouble defeating the opponents, no matter what he led. South naturally won this lead with the Ace in his own hand and realized that the hand would now be cold with any three-one trump division by merely conceding a trick to the King of spades and discarding two clubs in Dummy on the two long diamonds, eventually ruffing the losing club with Dummy's last trump.

South accordingly laid down the Ace of spades, and the bad news became apparent. He naturally continued with the nine of spades, and at this point West made a distinctly bad play. He went up with the King of spades and led his Queen of hearts. It might still look to the average player as though a club trick must be lost, but South knew differently. He ruffed the heart lead, led a spade and won in Dummy, and then ruffed Dummy's last heart with his own last trump. A club was led to Dummy, the Ace winning; and the Queen of spades was led, drawing West's last trump, South discarding the losing club in his own hand. Declarer now won the last five tricks by running his diamond suit.

Once West won the second spade trick with his King, he had no lead which would enable him to defeat the contract. However, the play of a low spade would have rendered South's cause hopeless. If South now continued with a third round of the suit, West would win with the King and return his last spade, stopping Declarer from using two trumps in his own hand, and eventually forcing him to lose a club trick. Although South did not run up against expert defense, he is still to be congratulated for his very fine play.

Tomorrow's Hand.

With the Opening lead of the nine of spades, how should South play the hand below to make six no-trump?

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

What's in Fashion?

Ties and Handkerchiefs Join The Last-Minute Gift Parade

Directed by Amos Parrish

New York, Dec. 22.—New deal or old deal, the great majority of men will be dealt a variety of ties and handkerchiefs on Monday morning. And with more men dressing more carefully, more neatly, and tastefully and individually, those ties and handkerchiefs had better be chosen with care.

The hints which follow give you a clew to the kind of tie the average better-dressed man really wants . . . and will wear . . . and the handkerchief that makes a respectable addition to it.

Pick his necktie neat, above all things. The neater the better. If you're uncertain when it comes to paterns, play safe with a plain tie . . . or a tie whose pattern is of the small, neat, all-over kind.

Neat Stripes Good.

If he's youngish, or a man who likes zip in his clothes, you're safe, and it's smart—to choose a stripe. A neat fine stripe. Not bold, nor wild, nor gaudy. Colorful, if you like. But colors that harmonize with themselves. If they don't you can be certain they'll clash with his suit, or his shirt, or both.

You can't go far wrong with a polka dot. Nobody ever has since President Polk first made them favorites back in 1845.

Checks, Spaced Figures Safe.

But go easy with splashy patterns. Even plaids are risky. But checks of course are smart. So are spaced figures. And if you see a Spitalfield or a Vacclesfield tie, count on its rightness. Because these British-woven silks are always interesting variations on the same always-wearable pattern theme.

A younger man or an outdoors man will look for a knitted or a crocheted tie. Either plain or neat-striped. And a rich-woven outdoors-looking wool pattern is a strong bet for almost any man this side of 40.

Blues, Wine, Maroon, Favorites.

Color is your next . . . and biggest . . . problem. Just remember that blue—either dark or medium—gets a safe, sure welcome. And that wine and maroon are nearly as well liked. After that, be careful, remembering that brown and green are smart if—he's got a brown suit. And remembering that the rest of the clan—the bright reds, the yellows, the oranges and the what-have-you's all have their place. But you've got to know the place.

You can show your taste—and generosity—in a handkerchief to go with the tie. After plain white (where you're safest), striped borders, solid all-over effects, bar-and-stripe combinations and self-woven embroidery effects all belong in the average man's breast pocket.

Silk Handkerchief Combinations.

And, of course, hook up the color of the handkerchief with the tie. Blue tie, blue handkerchief . . . or one whose border, pattern or stripe is blue. The same for maroon. The same for brown. And in any kind of linen. If you decide on silk (with a matching tie, a flattering gift to any man) a quiet, wearable pattern is more than ever important.

So, at the last minute, the handkerchief-and-tie combination can be at once the easiest, the safest and the happiest all-round gift solution to the man problem in your life.

"Cinderella" Attracts Many Young People

Play by Children's Theater of New York Excites Wide Interest.

Society will turn out early Thursday morning of Christmas week for the single performance at the National Theater this week, when the Children's Theater of New York will present "Cinderella" as the third of its season's productions in Washington, under the sponsorship of the Women's International League.

This, perhaps the oldest and most familiar of fairy tales, is attracting a distinguished audience of both young and old. Grown-ups, grandparents, mothers, fathers, uncles, aunts, teachers—even the youngsters themselves—are entertaining theater parties.

It is expected that the White House children, "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, will occupy their box with some of their young friends, as they did at the last play, "Curdie." Mrs. William Howard Taft, who seldom misses a performance of the Children's Theater in Washington, has engaged a box for her grandchildren, who are with her for the holidays. Mme. Sze, wife of the Chinese Minister, and her small daughter, Alice, who are also regular atetndants at the plays, are taking several guests. Many season subscribers are begging for extra seats to accomodate young sons and daughters home from school for the season's festivities. The Friends School, Holton-Arms, Gunston Hall, the Maret School and the Children's Studio will all be well represented in spite of the closing of the schools until the New Year.

Turtle Oil Is Latest Lotion For Skin Care

Leathery Hide of Turtle Supplies Remarkable Beautifier.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Modern cosmeticians have found a bond in common between the leathery hide of the turtle and the rose-petal skin of beautiful women.

And the bond is "turtle oil," the newest aid-to-beauty.

"If concentrated oil in a turtle's glands can keep him going for 400 years or more, it's bound to add a little vim, vigor and vitality to sluggish human skins," argues one authority, who offers a diluted solution of turtle oil for soothing and freshening the skin. It is recommended as particularly excellent for dry and undernourished complexions. Moreover, this turtle oil has a most pleasing fragrance.

Whenever anything in the way of new traveling equipment appears on the scene it's always to be found in a certain F street shop. Recently, they received a shipment of shoe bags, the best things yet to put the old clodhoppers in before they're packed away. They're elastic enough to fit any pair from the old man's boots to dainty pumps.

It's a terrific let-down to arrive at the end of a trip and find the wardrobe a mass of soils from dirty soles. Use of these flexible bags automatically safeguards other contents of a valise. They come four in a package, blue, rose, green and lavender.

Fancy headdress being the favorite it is, we must seek far and wide for the newest and most becoming. Girls with sleek black hair do well to cling to the conservative rhinestone tiaras, but those with a crown of curls, titian, brown or blonde, an annex, another degree of charm with some of the flower bandeaux.

A large downtown store has a variety of styles to offer. One with silver-crusted leaves and small, pink rosebuds will surely make some one look like a goddess of spring, tra-la!

Shoppers who prefer plodding long drenched sidewalks in soaking shoes to suffering the incumbrance of heavy goloshes have welcome tidings from a large department store. They're featuring in the notions department several types of rubber slip-ons which fit tightly to the shoe and keep the rain outside. These are so light and soft that it's hard to tell when they're on.

One type somewhat resembles ordinary galoshes except there's merely an opening where the heel would be. Then there are the toe-ttes. These fit only over the front of the shoe, and fasten either by a strap over the ankle, or one extending to the back. They're priced at 29 cents and 59 cents.

In a recent picture Richard Dix kept his audience in guffaws of laughter with a little contraption resembling both a flute and a soap-bubble pipe. He would blow through one end of it and a little ball resting in a niche at the other end would float upward on the current of air. A hook suspended above it is supposed to catch hold of the ball, but unless the "blower" is fairly skillful, the hitching arrangement fails to take place. Dix seemed to know the trick!

This game—if one can call it that—is being featured by a store on G street. We'll wager it will prove the source of as much amusement in the home as it did in the show.

The soft crepe scarfs in an F street store are lovely backgrounds for the metal cloth flowers which bedeck them from end to end. A satin lining is added thickness to make them warm enough for evening wear.

Oriental colors flaunt themselves in flower petals, leaves and stems, ranging from deep purple to light gold. One very lovely scarf is a maze of black and gold threads fantastically interwoven.

A sweater combining the rich shades of fall tinged with the glow of spring colors is the bright spot in an Eleventh street store.

If the ideal gloves for horseback riding are rainproof, coldproof and snapproof then surely these are they. The heavy, tightly knitted material of which they're made is thick enough to keep away the cold of its own accord, but an angora lining is double assurance that rain, snow or sleet fail to penetrate.

Luggage, sporting equipment, saddlery, boots, shoes, bookbindings and even upholstery is liable to become brittle and dry if allowed to go too long without treatment. In nearly all instances goods of this type represents a considerable investment. Letting them deteriorate without taking measures to preserve them is nothing short of rank extravagance.

Doll Hospital Mends Heads —And Hearts

These are busy days at Mollie Mattingly's doll hospital, which for 30 years has been mending broken possessions and broken childish hearts.

"You should see the faces of the people when they come in and find their broken dolls as good as new," Mollie told a Post reporter yesterday, her spectacled face beaming with kindliness.

"The parents are as pleased as the children. And the children go into ecstacies. It does me good, after seeing their grief. Little girls are just like little mothers. There was one little one I recall, only 3. She begged and pleaded with me to let her stay until I fixed her broken dolly. She was afraid to leave it, like a mother might have been with her baby. 'Oh, doctor, please don't kill my doll,' she said. Well, I had to let everything go, fix it right then and put it back in her arms.

Christmas Rush.

"I like my work to go peacefully and orderly, but there's something about the month of December—all Christmas rush and bustle — that sort of keys me up to such emergencies. After December, I don't care if I don't look at a doll for months."

As she talked, her needle flew skillfully in and out, mending a big doll's broken shoulder. She reached for a brush, and with a few deft strokes, gave bloom to doll cheeks, more laughter to lips, an impish quirk to high arched brows.

Nearly 200 dolls have been mended and restored to eager arms by Mrs. Mattingly and her husband during the past three weeks. All day long, a never ending procession finds its way up the three flights of wooden stairs to the quaint little dusty rooms at 907 G street northwest. Mr. Mattingly was formerly in real estate, but today he's an expert at grafting doll limbs, mending broken heads, exchanging new eyes for old, making mute dolls say "Mama," and reinforcing limber necks.

Inherited Hospital.

The Doll Hospital, however, was an inheritance of Mrs. Mattingly's. It still has her father's name—the Cooke Doll Hospital. Since she was a girl, Mrs. Mattingly has been doing the "artistic" part of doll repairing, supplying and fluffing-up blonde and brunette locks, painting pale cheeks, giving flesh tones to mended fingers and toes.

"The children used to call my father 'Santa Claus,'" she said. "He had light hair and a long white mustache. He had been an artist, and had traveled all over the world. Nothing pleased him so much as the gratitude of children when he had fixed their dolls.

"Look here. Here's a wig we ordered 30 years ago for a doll for a little girl." She smoothed its blonde curls. "It was brought back the other day by the little girl—now a woman—to be recurled for a doll for her own little girl. There's another doll that we've been fixing over from time to time for three generations of little girls in the same family."

Quaint Styles Make Tomboy Out of Fashion

Pinafores of Dimity Replace Hoyden Caps and Sweaters.

Sweet, girlish fashions are coming back. The hoyden who has been wearing a stocking cap on one ear, and a turtle-neck sweater over a tight-fitting tweed skirt, will soon exchange these casual garments for quaint dimity frocks with pinafores. Two motion pictures, "Little Women" and "Alice in Wonderland" are receiving most of the credit—or is it blame?—for this right-about face in feminine styles.

Fresh, crisp cottons are especially adaptable to dresses with fitted bodices and full, gathered skirts. Dainty floral patterns are extremely good, although plaid tissue ginghams are also used effectively for garments of the "Little Women" type. Most of these plaids are in pale, dusty shades.

Plain blue lawn makes a demure Alice frock with white organdy pinafore. Organdy is used as well for separate collars for other dresses in place of the pique that adorned practically every pair of shoulders last spring and summer. The new collars are much less tailored and are often trimmed with ruffles, Venise insertion, or val lace. Some of the larger ones are cut square, suggesting the sailor style. This square outline is confined to the back, however, as the front is narrow and rounded.

Taffeta is the favored material for party frocks in the new mode. This stiff, rustling material lends itself beautifully to basques, bouffant skirts and old-fashioned fichus. For the very young girl, there are ruffled capelets and flounces. Big sister usually prefers a dress that depends upon a certain simplicity for its quaintness.

Marilyn Makes Good.

One of the triumphs of the current stage season is the comeback of Marilyn Miller. No longer does she depend entirely on her graceful dancing and pretty face. In her new show she proves herself to be a capable actress as well.

As Clifton Webb says, "she is definitely out of the pink and white baby-faced class."

It seems extraordinarily fitting that Fannie Ward should have made her first appearance on the stage in the role of Cupid. That was in 1890 in the play "Peppino."

Junior League Social Workers Follow Sick Children From Hospitals to Homes of Poverty

They See That Parents Are Able to Provide Care and Food.

The house is empty and still except for a small boy on crutches, who looks eagerly out the window. Several hours earlier his mother has hurried off to work, leaving the 5-year-old child by himself. This has happened to the boy so often that he is no longer afraid—at least, not much afraid. He knows that after so long a time a jolly young woman will call for him and take him to Children's Hospital, where gentle nurses will massage his crippled legs. Promptly at 9 the jolly young woman comes. She is a member of the Junior League and her name is Miss Agnes Shands.

At least three mornings a week are spent at the hospital by Miss Shands. She has under her direction 25 members of the Junior League who work in conjunction with the social service office. This office is maintained at the hospital by the Washington Junior League. The maintenance includes two paid social workers, a paid secretary, and an automobile. The car is used by the league girls when they bring children to the clinics and when they go to investigate the homes of the little patients.

Visit Homes.

"Whenever a child is to be discharged from a ward, our office is notified and we send a girl to find out the condition of the home before the youngster is returned to his family." said Miss Shands yesterday morning at the hospital. She was showing a little boy how to weave so that he would regain the use of an arm that had been fractured at the elbow.

"If the child was suffering from malnutrition when he was brought to the hospital it would be foolish to send him back to a home where he would not receive proper food." she explained. "If the family can not provide the right food—or, as in some cases, any food—then the investigator calls upon some charitable organization for assistance.

"In case the home conditions can not be improved, arrangements are made through the league's social service office at the hospital to send the child to the Children's Country Home. Very young children are sent there. Older ones are sent to the Christ Child Fresh Air Farm at Rockville, Md.

"The members of my committee assist the doctors by taking notes and by doing occupational therapy. We have much more time than the nurses to teach little hands twisted by paralysis how to model clay and how to use a hammer or bright colored blocks. The more the crippled child uses his injured member, the sooner he will regain its use, or at least a part of its use. That's why the weaving, molding and hammering are so important. We also massage small bodies that have been warped by infantile paralysis. Sometimes when braces are needed and the parents are too poor to buy them outright, we arrange for them to pay as little as 50 cents a week. If they are unable to pay anything we see that they get the necessary braces through charity organization."

Three Little Pigs.

As Miss Shands talked, adoring children swarmed about her, and whenever she paused to help the boy with his weaving, another small chap insisted upon telling her the story of "The Three Little Pigs" —with gestures.

"Aren't they darlings?" asked the Junior Leaguer. "I love them all. I've been coming to the hospital for three years now and every day the work grows more fascinating. It's interesting to go into the homes, too.

"Once I went to ask a family to let us keep their little boy in the ward until he had completely recovered from a terrible burn. The father had brought him to the hospital to have the wound dressed, but insisted upon taking the child home as soon as he was the least bit improved. I worried and worried about that youngster. I knew the father was a drunkard and that the mother was thoughtless and flighty. So I went out to their poor little house to ask them to return the child to the hospital.

"I coaxed and pleaded for them to let me have the little boy. I knew his wound would become infected if he did not receive proper care. Finally I said to the stubborn parents, 'All right. Keep your little boy, but if he dies it will be your fault.' Then I left.

"The next day the father came to the hospital with the boy and put him in a ward. The man wept as he said good-by to his son and said to a nurse, 'I wouldn't have brought him, but a wild policewoman came to our house and said I had to.' But I didn't mind being called a policewoman," laughed the Junior Leaguer. "I'll fight for these youngsters any day."

Mrs. Roosevelt Good Fairy to Poor Children

Attends Christmas Party in New York Trade Union Center.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—In the finery in which she had just come from a wedding, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt played Lady Bountiful at a Christmas party for 40 poor children today.

Yesterday she had hung the tree with baubles of silver in the headquarters of the Women's Trade Union League, and some time in the interval she had procured the presents.

Today, tall and gracious in a long blue velvet gown, she stood in a crowded room and handed out sweaters, toys, candy and apples to rows of scrubbed and fresh-faced children. The children were all very good and scarcely any of them opened the boxes they had been told to keep intact until they got home.

Mrs. Roosevelt laughed as she presented to one of the tiniest boys a box that was bigger than he was. "You're very small," she said gently. Since spectators were curious, this little boy did open his box, to show a workmanlike tool chest.

Crowded in the back room of the old-fashioned house where the league has its headquarters were unemployed girls from the clubroom which Mrs. Roosevelt has established for them on the ground floor of the building.

After she had handed out the presents, Mrs. Roosevelt went downstairs to look at the clubroom. She left to shouts of "Merry Christmas to you all!" from 40 childish throats. For many years it has been Mrs. Roosevelt's custom to preside at a Christmas party at the league.

Tomorrow Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Hyde Park for the Christmas festival at the Val-Kill Furniture Shop for all the neighbors and employes. If possible she will go by automobile and will get back to New York in time to take a late train to Washington.

How Much Cake May A Housewife Bake?

Not Too Much, It Seems, Unless She Pays for a License.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 21 (Spl.). Are women who bake cakes in their own homes for others than their own families bakers? And if so, how many cakes can they bake a day before they are classified as bakers and hence subject to the city license fee of $25?

That is what Commissioner of Revenue J. F. Fowler has asked the city council to decide. He said his queries were induced by complaints of local bakers that some of the city's batter spoon artists were giving them quite a run for their money without having to pay any license fee. At its weekly meeting the council threshed over the question and finally decided that it was a much more difficult one to decide than the budget. It was handed back to the commissioner of revenue, who will have to draw his own definition.

It seemed to be the general opinion that any woman who baked 10 to 20 cakes a day certainly ought to be classified as a baker. And then there seemed to be a difference between those who solicited orders and those who only baked cakes on request. But it was admitted that it would be pretty difficult for the city to check up on such matters.

Smithsonian Gets First Lady's Gown

Second Velvet Inaugural Dress in Collection.

The Eleanor blue velvet costume, which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt wore for the inauguration, has now been placed in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C., along with the inaugural gowns of the wives of Presidents who preceded her.

Mary Todd Lincoln was the only other President's wife to wear a velvet inaugural dress. It was considered a most extravagant and expensive costume at that time—the height of elegance and the last word in luxury.

Representative Jenckes Calls It Great Forward Step

Senator Caraway and Alice Paul Also Declare That American Women's Victory Presages New Rights for Women of Whole World.

By Frances Mangum.

There was one fictitious man without a country. There have been thousands of real American women who married foreigners and lost their nationality. They used to lose it merely for marrying an alien in this country. More recently they lost it for remaining too long in the foreign land of which their husband was a citizen.

In the future every woman in this hemisphere will have equal nationality rights with men, when the treaty signed yesterday at Montevideo is ratified by Congress. It reads: "The contracting States agree that from the going into effect of this convention there shall be no distinctions based on sex in their law and practice relating to nationality."

Yesterday a number of prominent women of the Capital told The Post reporter that our signing of this treaty marked one of the greatest victories of all time for women. They recalled the heartbreaking stories of thousands of women of this country who have pleaded in vain to retain their nationality after they had married in foreign countries.

Such women, they pointed out, have often been subjected to the humiliation of returning home as "immigrants" when they did return. Meanwhile, the more fortunate American man married whom he would, lived abroad his whole life if he chose, and never risked the danger of losing his right to remain an American.

Praises Treaty.

Representative Virginia Jenckes of Indiana, who has strongly supported the Montevideo treaty, said yesterday that she was delighted with the outcome.

"God created man and woman on an equal plane," she said. Men have sometimes failed to recognize this, failed to give woman her natural rights. It is with real pleasure that I have heard that the equal nationality treaty has been endorsed by our country.

"It means another great forward step.

"For the first time in history we find a very efficient woman as member of our President's Cabinet; for the first time in history we find a wife of an American President using the air plane to travel. We find women rendering a very helpful service in every endeavor for public or common welfare. Certainly women should be accorded equal nationality rights.

"It is up to each individual woman to accept it if she wants to. But this equality should be accorded her!"

When the United States, along with 19 other Pan-American countries, signed this treaty, every vestige of inequality was removed. An American woman was granted the right to marry a foreigner, live in any country she chooses and still remain a citizen of the United States.

Child's Nationality.

Most important of all, she may transmit her nationality to her child, born abroad in the same way in which an American man can transmit his nationality.

Previous to the Cable act, in 1922, she lost her citizenship when she married a man of another nation and went abroad to live. Her children became subjects of their father's government without qualification.

The Cable act granted women rights to retain their citizenship, but gave them no power to transmit their nationality to their children. In 1930 and in 1931 amendments to this act were made which further removed discrimination against women in the nationality laws of the United States.

Gradually steps were leading up to the grand climax which has taken place in Montevideo. The granting of equal rights to Pan-American women is regarded as an Herculean step toward internationality rights for women.

Step in Right Direction.

"The convention in Montevideo and the subsequent unanimous signing of the nationality treaty is a step in the right direction. I feel sure that the future will see a general recognition of nationality rights!"

Senator Caraway expressed her pleasure that the United States had signed. Some time ago she had sent a cable to Secretary Hull reading:

"Secretary Cordell Hull
"Monteviedo, Uruguay
"Earnestly wish to indorse the treaty to establish equality in nationality which now under consideration at the conference stop feel that in justice to women this should be done.
"HATTIE W CARAWAY"

Alice Paul, chairman of the nationality committee of the Inter-American Commission of Women, declared yesterday that the action at Montevideo is the beginning of the final stage in women's long struggle for justice and freedom.

Raises Woman's Status.

"The hardest step is over now," she said. Twenty governments have been persuadel to lift the position of women through an international agreement. The status of women over a great section of the world has been raised by a single stroke.

"Since 1922 we have been struggling to win equal nationality rights point by point. Now, for the Western Hemisphere, this is done.

"In a similar way it will be possible, in a very short time through international agreements, to wipe out every remaining inequality in every part of the world."

Miss Anita Politzer, vice chairman of the National Woman's party was enthusiastic over the worldwide effect of the signing of the treaty.

Soon To Be World-Wide.

"Similar conventions, similar treaties, action toward equality always going on, will soon bring about equal nationality rights for women in all countries.

She pointed out that previous to the signing of the treatey only five countries had equal nationality rights,—Argentina, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay, and Russia.

There were 64 countries in the world where a father's right to transmit nationality to a child was superior to the mother's—and the United States was one of these. There were only 13 countries where a mother had equal rights to bestow nationality on her offspring, and all but two of these were in Latin America.

The Equal Nationality Treaty signed at Montevideo only awaits the ratification of Congress to go into effect. Both Senator Caraway, and Representative Jenckes said they did not doubt the action of either legislative body, inasmuch as a bill granting equal rights to transmit nationality had been approved unanimously by the Senate in the past Congress.

Christmas Heals Marital Woes, Jurist Finds

So He Makes Domestic Hay While Yule Bells Ring.

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—Judge Joseph Sabath, who heard 40,000 divorce pleas, a world's record as far as anyone knows, is ringing reconcilation peals on Christmas bells these days.

So far this week, he has reconsiled 25 couples who came to him to have their marriages sundered. His method is use of a bit of Yuletide psychology.

"I'm making hay while the Christmas bells ring," said his honor, his blue eyes twinkling. He is chubby, and he can be very jolly, and if his judicial robes were red, he could pinch-hit for Santa Claus.

"For the past few months," he confided from the bench during an interlude in today's court routine, "I have been holding over until this magic week of Christmas all divorce cases, especially where there are children, that looked hopeful of reconciliation."

Then, he explained, when the couple come in, he takes them into his chamber "for a little talk."

And that's where the psychology comes in—atmospherically.

For the inner chamber of this noted jurist, who for 13 of his 24 years on the bench has been hearing marital woes, is not just a formal legal office. At one end is an imitation fireplace with electric logs warmly glowing. On the mantel is a peaceful ticking clock, vases and a big plush teddy bear. There's a rug in front of the hearth. Add a little holly, a ball and a doll, and some colorfully tied up packages, and it is a homey Christmas fireside.

"And does it work?" grinned his honor, who likes to talk of reconciliations. He has participated in an estimated 2,000.

Said the judge:

"There is something about Christmas—the holiness of the season, the spirit of giving, of thinking of others—that awakens people to themselves, hushes the voices of bitterness and rekindles love if it isn't dead."

Friend to Sick Children

Little crippled legs are massaged at Children's Hospital by Miss Agnes Shands, member of the Junior League, who spends three mornings a week at the clinics and in the wards, helping doctors and nurses lead children back to health. She also goes into the young patients' homes, to make sure that the children will receive the right care when they leave the hospital.

Radio Waves and Ripples

COLUMBIA discontinues its news service with tomorrow's broadcasts.

This means that publishers and broadcasters have come to an understanding on news microphoning after a controversy that began almost before commercial broadcasting outgrew swaddling clothes.

Henceforth broadcasters will take news from press associations, which is what they always have wanted to do, but under restrictions designed to eliminate all possibility of news programs reducing circulation figures for the dailies.

The most important restriction would prevent broadcasting of news until publishers have papers on the street. The number of words in each news item is understood to be limited to 30, length of broadcasts to 5 minutes.

In return, newspapers generally will continue publication of radio programs, studio comment.

And thus the LeRoy Mark station moves in another direction to get in on the business of selling radio programs in Washington. Power impresses advertisers. Show them 100 watts and they turn up their noses. Tell them you have 250 and they begin to listen. From the listener's standpoint, there is very little difference between 100 and 250 watts.

Putting Ted Doolittle on the early morning Musical Clock show was another move of the same kind. WOL would like a few of the 10,000 listeners who signed cards for membership in Arthur Godfrey's WMAL Breakfast Club.

You will be able to buy Elder Michaux on a phonograph record before very long. RCA recorded his last network broadcast. Arrangements are being made for lineage from RCA's Camden (N. J.) plant to WJSV to take one of the Church of God leader's local morning programs.

Dog-catching production in Washington is running far behind demand. WJSV's Dog Pound broadcasting is accredited with boosting requests for dogs to 25 a day. The best the District dog catchers can do is five or six a day. The pound master, Walton Smith, will take your name and phone you when a specimen of the breed you want arrives.

James Melton, now tenoring at the Earle, has been signed by a baking company for a series on C. B. S. to start in January. Melton has a spot on N. B. C. currently.

Strickland Gillilan, humorist, lecturer, returns to broadcasting on WJSV Saturday, January 6. The studio hands are preparing invitations. Gillilan refuses to go on the air without a studio audience.

Commissioner George Allen has the Community Forum program on WMAL at 7:15 tomorrow night for a talk on the Civil Works Administration.

Gay Hesse, Washington child actress, has been cast for the role of Fanny in WOL's broadcast of the Dickens "Christmas Carol" tonight at 7:30. Gay gives her age as 7.

Estelle Wentworth, Washington musical director, is bringing tabloid versions of Gilbert and Sullivan to the General Broadcasting System outlet here, opening with "Pinafore" Tuesday night. A cast of more than 45 Washingtonians, including Ira Meyer, Eugene Stevens, J. Raymond Raine, Alma Harris, Elliott Button, Mildred Sherman, Margaret Harn, Harry Yeide and Thomas Zepp, is now in rehearsal.

Invitations will be issued for subsequent broadcasts, the Wentworth company appearing in the studios in full costume.

Johnny Weismuller, Gene Sarazen, Denny Shute, Howard Jones, Charles Paddock and Jack Dempsey are some of the sports people to whom Columbia is turning over a microphone in an effort to improve our athletic appreciation from 11:30 to midnight tomorrow.

Col. Stoopnagle and Budd are the Byrd expedition entertainers tomorrow night on C. B. S. During the broadcast, which starts at 10 o'clock, Charmaine Peterson, 7, will say "Merry Christmas" to her dad, Carl Peterson, and other members of the expedition, 10,000 miles away.

George M. Cohan's broadcast Sunday has been advertised as something new in the way of advertising blurbs. We were told to warn you.

Alexandria's Needy Children Get Lunch

Association Appeals For Xmas Seal Sales

With only one more business day before Christmas, the Tuberculosis Association is urging the use of seals before the holiday even if they are not paid for until later. The urgent need of funds to carry on the association's work was cited by the group.

A check for $500 from an anonymous subscriber and a report of seals sold at the Friends School, 1809 I street northwest, helped raise the total so far received.

Carol Singing Here to Mark Yule Arrival

Christmas Tree Lighted by Decatur Heights Association.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Help Distribute Gifts to Needy Children.

With tree-lighting and carol-singing festivals in nearly every section of the city, and with the First Lady of the Land to help distribute packages of clothing, candy and toys to children of needy families, the Capital yesterday began to celebrate Christmas.

One of the first Christmas tree lightings occured last night at Fourteenth and Crittenden streets northwest, under auspices of the Decatur Heights Business Men's Association. A holiday pageant was staged and the Boys Independent Band and a mixed chorus of singers from churches in the section presented a program of music. Cooperating in the celebration was the Piney Branch Citizens Association.

In the Public Library at Seventh and K streets northwest, a chorus of colored children yesterday afternoon sang the first of two Christmas carol programs planned by the recreation committee of the Council of Social Agencies. Alfred Johnson of the District public schools, directed the concert.

Program at Library.

The same carol program will be sung by a group of white children under direction of Mary M. Burnett and accompanied by a Marine Band string quartet, in the Library of Congress and the Southeastern Branch of the Public Library this afternoon. The program includes a French carol, "Bring a Torch, eannette Isabella" and "The Christmas Rose." The colored group will sing tonight at 8 o'clock in Deanwood Community Center.

The Christmas season for Capital birds begins tonight when Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Parks, lights a tree for them at the Sylvan Theater. It has been decorated with Girl Scout pagentry and with rasins, sunflower seeds, suet and rolled oats.

Sixteen hundred children selected by the Central Union Mission, will assemble in the Fox Theater tomorrow morning for their annual Christmas party. There they will meet Santa Claus and be entertained by movies and a concert until Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt comes, at 9:15 o'clock, to hand them bags filled with clothing, toys and candy.

Similar parties are being staged by many civic and fraternal organizations in the city. Commodore W. A. W. Longfellow will play Santa Claus to orphans from the Episcopal Home for Children at a Christmas party to be given by the Young People's Society of St. Margaret's Church at 4:30 p. m. today. Toys and candy will be distributed and a program of entertainment presented. A party for the children of former service men will be given by the District Department of the American Legion in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at 2 p. m.

Roosevelt to Officiate.

Christmas throughout the Nation begins officially Sunday afternoon, when, at 5:08 o'clock, President Roosevelt will touch a button that will illuminate the National Community Christmas tree in Sherman Square. The Presidential tree lighting will be proclaimed in the city by Boy Scout buglers stationed at the Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol, and other sections of the city, and by the ringing of bells in churches. Nation-wide broadcasting hook-ups will also proclaim it and will carry to the country the President's greetings.

Three troops of Capital Boy Scouts will serve as honor guard to the President. Mrs. Roosevelt will be guarded by Troop 57, D. C. Girl Scouts, one girl representing each State in the Union, headed by uzanne Mellichampe. Scout Karl Krumke, Troop 38, will sound "roll call." Scout buglers will be James Hayes, Bronson Smith and Spencer ussell.

Guests on the President's stand will be seated by Mrs. Lucretia Walker Hardy, general secretary of the Community Center Department; ames G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Curtis Hodges, of the Greater National Capital Committee.

Millions in the English-speaking world will hear selections of Christmas carols sung by the National Capital Choir tomorrow afternoon, during the fifth Christmas carol party of the National Press Club. The program will be carried by the National Broadcasting Co., Columbia Broadcasting System and by British and Canadian hook-ups.

Rabbi Will Preach On Peace Tonight

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz will speak on "Peace That Passeth All Understanding" at Adas Israel Synagogue tonight. Cantor Louis Novick will assist in the services.

Archives Building, With Stately Colonnades, Rises in Ghostly Echo of Old Market Clamor

Home of Federal Records Will Bring Dignity to Seventh St.

Dignity is coming to Seventh street, to the very spot where Bermuda onions once flourished and they grated horseradish while you waited.

Where only a few short years ago there stood old Center Market, there is rising rapidly an architectural masterpiece which, say its admirers, will be the Capital's most distinctive creation of stone and steel.

It is the Archives Building.

The importance of it as a work of art was emphasized when complaints filtered through to President Roosevelt that plans for the Apex Building, directly opposite, do not harmonize with the Archives Building.

Designed to contain the National Government's permanent records, the Archives Building will be the tallest in the Federal triangle, 168 feet. Its location, between Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues and Seventh and Ninth streets, is midway between White House and Capitol.

Arranged in Tiers.

Tiers, rather than floors, are the Archives Building's unit of space division, and there will be 22 of them for records. John Russell Pope, the architect, remembered administrative offices were necessary so seven floors have been provided in addition.

The offices will be on the Pennsylvania avenue side and they alone will have windows. Sunlight is injurious to aging records. The building will be ventilated by an air-conditioning system.

Below the foundation still flows Washington's own Tiber, and at first it was thought this subterranean creek might supply water for heating and air conditioning, but the plan was abandoned.

The Archives Building will be rectangular, with a Corinthian colonnade 52 feet high. The center of the colonnade, viewed from the Mall, will be accented by a pediment and portico of eight columns in width and four columns deep.

Hall 75 Feet High.

The public exhibition hall is semicircular and its ceiling will be a half dome, 75 feet above the floor. Here will be displayed documents which have popular interest.

A public information room will be flanked by rooms with a capacity of 40,000 volumes.

The structure has been built to allow for accommodations over present needs of 130 per cent. It will have 2,431,000 cubic feet of stack space, and provisions have been made for 3,142,000 more in future additions.

A half-million cubic feet of granite and limestone will go into the exterior. Forty per cent is already set. Ground was broken in September, 1931, erection of steel was started ten months ago and the building probably will be completed late next year or early in 1935. Slightly more than 500 men are now employed on the job. The limit of cost was set at $8,750,000.

Cars, a Dime

Four automobiles sold for 10 cents each in the District yesterday.

The cars were included in the 150 abandoned, unclaimed and confiscated automobiles auctioned off by police in the parking lot at South Capitol and G streets northwest.

The District was richer $650 after all the automobiles were sold. This made the average price of an automobile purchased at the auction $4.35.

2 of 4 Captured In Hotel Linked With Holdups

One Identified in $2,500 Robbery and Other in Theft of $400.

Two of the four alleged racketeers captured in a downtown hotel room Wednesday night have been identified in connectoin with major robberies here recently, police said last night.

Herbert Glassman, president of the City Cab Co., pointed out Leslie Weldon, alias Williams, as one of the two men who held him up in a hotel room here. Weldon came here early this month from Oklahoma, according to police. They said he had served sentences there for both armed robbery and narcotic transactions. Glassman lost $700 in cash and an $1,800 stickpin in the robbery here. Weldon gave his local address as 1320 Thirteenth street northwest.

The other man who police say was linked with the holdup here is James E. Davis, alias Neal, who said he lived at 2701 Fourteenth street northwest. "Reds" Mitchell, proprietor of a Sixth street establishment, identified Davis as the man who held up his place of business several weeks ago. Mitchell said he was robbed of about $150 in cash and jewelry valued at $250.

Although the other two men were not identified by a horde of witnesses at the line-up last night, another attempt to link them with Washington crime will be made today, Chief of Detectives F. S. W. Burke said. He is "positive" one of them was in the gang which held up the Heurich Brewery and escaped with about $1,800.

Nothing to It

Winter's arrival at 1:58 a. m. today will have little effect on the warm weather Washington and vicinity is enjoying at present, Weather Bureau officials are inclined to believe.

Although there is no telling what tricks Old Man Winter has up his sleeve, it is believed he will behave until after the Christmas holidays, at least, for he has until March 21, at 2:28 a. m., to hold sway. Then he must give way to spring.

The forecast for today is fair and cooler, with the minimum temperature reaching 30.

Better Spirit Boosts Trade, Stores Say

Best Year Since 1930, Is Opinion of Many Capital Firms.

Riding on a wave of renewed optimism, engendered, merchants believe, by the Civil Works Administration and cheerful prospect for the future, the people of Washington will enter into a final spurt of Christmas shopping today.

Conservative, steady buying will make the season the best since 1930, a survey of leading stores revealed. Stores will be working against the handicap of one less business day because of the intervention of Sunday directly before Christmas.

"The C. W. A.," said Frank Jelleff, "is putting a new spirit into the old town. People who are benefiting may not be spending much because they haven't much to spend, but the psychological effect of having hundreds of people back on a pay roll is bolstering hopes for the future. Every department in our store is holding up splendidly."

Buying Range Wide.

The head of one of the city's most prominent stores, who asked that his name be withheld, declared activities during the past ten days have satisfied him this Yuletide is to be a most satisfactory one.

Although many stores reported that shoppers are confining their purchasing to practical articles in the medium price class, others stated that buying is general in every line of goods.

"The season has been beyond our highest expectations," said Ralph Goldsmith, manager of Lansburgh's. "Everyone seems determined to do Christmas shopping in the old-fashioned style. We are having the biggest season since 1930."

Harold H. Levi, vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co., said the store is already ahead of last year's sales.

"Last year at this time," he said, "there was chaos in our wrapping and mailing departments. Through scintific planning we have eliminated our mistakes and have a smooth-running store. I find that we have transacted an astounding volume of business at the end of each day.

Sales Well Ahead.

Greater medium price purchasing was reported by A. C. Case, general manager of the Palais Royal. The higher priced goods, he said, are not selling, but the general volume of business is ahead of last year.

Demand for popular priced merchandise also was reported by Harry King, of King's Palace.

"We are well ahead this year," said Bernard B. Burgunder, general manager of S. Kann Sons' Co. "Conditions are very satisfactory."

I. Goldenberg, of the store in his name at Seventh and K streets northwest, said Christmas buyers are favoring practical gifts.

E. D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said the shopping season undoubtedly is better than last year.

Ailing Clocks of White House Must Have Their Tonics, Too

Expert Checks 'Em Over Thrice a Week for Faulty Ticks.

Clocks upon which Presidents have looked during more than a century find their way, sooner or later, to a little room in the basement of the old Southern Railway Building.

There, ailing springs and perverse wheels are set aright. The work is done by William J. Pruneau, with whom rests the responsibility of preventing timepieces at the White House from telling falsehoods.

Three or four times each week Pruneau goes from his cubicle of a workship to the Executive Mansion, makes his rounds and does his winding, upstairs and down. Always there is an ear for the faulty tick and an eye for the lagging pair of hands. Such discoveries call for removal to the little clock hospital.

A visit to Pruneau's bench this week found the slightly concaved dial of a delicately numeraled French clock, which came from across the seas many decades ago as the gift of an ambassador. Beside it were dissembled bits of metal turned and cut by some craftsman long ago.

Included among recent "patients" under Pruneau's care is the "Lincoln clock," which began to measure time in the President's study during the troubled days of the early '60s. It holds the record for protracted treatment, having been pitched through a window to the White House lawn when fire beset the Executive offices a few years ago.

Man Drowned In River When Dinghy Upsets

Victim and 2 Companions Rowing Craft to Side of Cabin Launch.

Hurled into the icy waters of the Anacostia River when a dinghy in which he and two companions were rowing to a cabin launch capsized, William L. McCarthy, 29, of 1218 Perry street northeast, was drowned late yesterday.

Harbor police dragged the river for McCarthy's body for an hour before they retrieved it.

McCarthy's wife, who is said to work at the Government Printing Office, was downtown shopping for their two children when her husband was drowned. Police experienced great difficulty in locating her to inform her of the tragedy.

McCarthy's companions, Watson F. Shepherd, of 414 Tenth street northeast, and Steward William Tebbs, of 1209 F street northeast, attempted to rescue the drowning man. When they became exhausted, they clung to the side of the boat until they were saved.

McCarthy was on his way to the launch to repair the engine, it was said.

Harbor police said the launch toward which the three started their ill-fated adventure was the "Gypsy Jane," owned by J. E. Marson. They asserted the dinghy was upset when one of the men stood up.

An autopsy was held last night, which revealed that death was due to drowning. A certificate of accidental death was issued.

Excepted Wet Area Sought By Business

Commissioners to Take Zone Protest Under Advisement.

A delegation from the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association yesterday asked the District Commissioners to accord merchants on upper Fourteenth street and Eleventh and Mount Pleasant streets the same treatment as the downtown business area so far as regulation of liquor sales is concerned.

The business men expressed fear particularly that the proposed plan of the Commissioners to bar liquor sales wherever owners of 51 per cent of the property within a radius of 700 or 1,000 feet objected might prove detrimental to their trade chances because of the proximity of large residential strips to the commercial zones.

Narrow Business Strips.

Columbia Heights covers more than a mile of continuous business establishments along upper Fourteenth street as well as areas on Eleventh and Mount Pleasant streets, they explained. The business strip on Fourteenth street particularly is very slim, yet "business is more intensive than in many equivalent downtown sections," they said in a petition.

The 51 per cent restriction, they said, "would discriminate against business here in favor of the business downtown" and in favor of other areas of the city where the commercial zones are wider.

"Any undue restrictions here would create a largely dry area of a great size," the petition read, which would tend to become a special stamping ground for bootleggers and for illicit handling of liquor."

The delegation also charged that a liquor ban in their community would divert trade to Maryland and that the proposed property restriction "would open the door to prejudice, coercion and improper influences favoring or opposing signatures to petitions."

Exceptions Authorized.

The Commissioners took the protest under advisement, but they gave no indication of an intention to change the property restriction clause. It is their view that the law as now drafted will give them ample authority to make exceptions wherever they are considered justified.

The District liquor control bill is expected to be completed by the end of this week and will be forwarded to the Congressional committees next week.

Just as soon as the bill is out of the way the Commissioners will turn their attention to the drafting of regulations in accordance with the legislation so as to prevent delay in issuance of licenses once the bill becomes a law.

'Tod' Sloan, Called Greatest Jockey of All Time, Dies in Poverty at 59

King's Rider Once Toast Of World

Was Credited With Being First Man to Adopt Crouching Style.

He Thought Nothing of Losing $6,000 Hour at Gaming Table.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—James Todhunter (Tod) Sloan, known to the sporting world as the greatest jockey of all time, died here today.

The diminutive 59-year-old turf figure died almost penniless, in ironic contrast to the wealth he won and spent in the bright years of his heyday.

Like many another sport celebrity of a bygone ere, there was tragedy in Sloan's end. Ill for years and in poverty, his condition grew serious a few weeks ago. He entered the county hospital, a charity patient.

Rallied Slightly.

Physicians said he had cirrhosis of the liver. For a time he rallied slightly, and was removed to the home of Mrs. Jack Cudahy, member of the Chicago packing family. The jockey and his 10-year-old daughter had lived with the Cudahys many years.

Today he suffered a relapse and in a few hours he was dead.

One of the gamest little men who ever lined up at a starting gate, Sloan knew wealth, great popularity—and obscurity. He knew the plaudits of a victory-mad race crowd. When he pushed Balleyhoo Bey down in front in a stirring drive, the delighted owner cried, "Sloan, as long as I live you'll never know want!"

But Sloan, who thought nothing of owning 150 suits and losing $6,000 an hour at the gaming table, died with the bitter knowledge that he was "broke."

Started at 16.

He started his career when 16, and in his early twenties he was a world figure.

Sloan was the son of a Kokomo, Ind., barber. As a boy he frequented local racing stables, where his uncanny riding skill was developed.

The "monkey ride" he attributed to an ancient plater named Hominy Bill. Tod found it easier to sit up on the horse's neck, supporting himself by crouching in the stirrups, than sitting upright in the saddle "gentleman fashion."

When he appeared at the old Southside track at Chicago in 1888 his mode of riding was a sensation. It was obvious that a tiny rider, perched above the horse's neck gave the racer more freedom of movement, and more speed.

Won 45 Out of 98.

In 1897 he went to England and in a short time he was a celebrity. Prince Edward of Wales made Sloan his first jockey and he won 45 out of 98 races for the royal patron. Tod was the toast of the town, the central figure at gay parties that cost him much more than the $50,000 or so a year he earned.

Sloan always believed that signing with the Prince was his undoing. When Edward retained a foreigner in the sport, the press and public turned against Sloan, and finally he was refused a license. It was hinted that he bet on horses he rode. He went to Paris, and his great success at Longchamps resulted in charges that the horses were stimulated. He was barred from the jockey room.

Returning to America, Sloan's ill luck pursued relentlessly. He lost $150,000 in the automobile business, $40,000 in the show business.

His marital life was another source of unhappiness. In 1907 Sloan married Julia Sanderson, musical comedy queen. She divorced him a year later. He married Elizabeth Saxon Malone, another actress, in 1920. She obtained a divorce in 1926, alleging cruelty.

G.W. Is Seeking Third in Row Tonight

Faces Strong Geneva Five With Four Players on Injured List.

WITH four players, all Washingtonians, on the injured list George Washington is not in the best of health for tonight's game with Geneva, which will be staged in the Colonial's gym, starting at 8 o'clock.

Calvin Griffith is the newest addition to the G. W. casualty squad. He fell yesterday morning in practice, badly injuring his hip, and will be lost for an indefinite period. Bill Noonan, Dallas Shirley and Barney Kane, the remaining patients, are expected to perform tonight, though Kane's weak knee may prevent him from going the entire route.

George Washington already has two victories to its credit, a 66-28 decision over Shenandoah, and a 47-30 win over Baltimore. Making it three straight may be a slightly more difficult problem for Coach Ted O'Leary's men, for Geneva appears to have another good team on its hands. John Marshall College, of Trenton, succumbed to the Pennsylvanians, 33-28, Wednesday.

Pin Hopes on Pair.

The Colonials are pinning their hopes for victory tonight on Jimmy Howell, a keen-eyed forward, and Sammy Stein, who has taken unto himself the role of floor general. Howell scored 12 field goals and 7 fouls, a total of 34 points, in the first two games and is leading his mates in this respect. Noonan, with 22, and Stein, with 24, have been prominent in the scoring column.

In Hymie Ginsberg, a southpaw, Geneva will present one of the outstanding court performers of Western Pennsylvania. Ginsberg was selected on the All-Scholastic quintet by Pittsburgh sports writers his senior year in high school, and has been setting a fast pace in college ranks. Against St. Thomas three days ago he dropped 5 field goals and a foul for 11 points, and in every game this season has topped his mates in point-getting. Littell is another the Colonials must keep covered, for he has evidenced signs of following in Ginsberg's footsteps.

"Hunk" Anderson Won't Go to N. C.

Possibility Out, He States After Conference.

Durham, N. C., Dec. 21 (AP).—Heartly "Hunk" Anderson, the man who led the Irish teams of Notre Dame during the past three seasons, said here today that the possibility of his coaching at the University of North Carolina next year is definitely "out of the picture."

The Irish mentor came to Durham late last night in order to confer with Dr. Foy Roberson, member of the athletic council of the Tarheel school, about the vacancy now existing there.

"There was little to say, however, and there is nothing to reports except that it is out," Hunk said today.

Anderson, who described himself as "on tour," has been dickering with North Carolina officials in Raleigh, but whether he will be the next head football coach there probably will not be known until after the holidays.

Walker Cup, British Amateur Dates Reset

St. Andrews, Scotland, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews today announced that in response to several requests it was changing the dates of the biannual Walker Cup series with the United States from June 14-15 to May 11-12 and moving up the British amateur from May 28 to May 21.

The Walker Cup matches will be played at St. Andrews.

Mat Verdict Awarded to Garibaldi

Masked Marvel Victor; Christy, Romano Win Before Small Crowd.

BETWEEN squawks, crying Jim Clinstock, the big Italian, last night managed to insert enough deadly kneeing to knock out Gino Garibaldi in the scheduled rassle bout on the Auditorium card. Referee Bennie Bortnick, however, is one of those fellows who is a close student of the theory of "cause and effect." He admitted that the effect of Clinstock's kneeing was a K. O., but also admitted that the cause was not what might be termed ethical, even in a rassle match, and so awarded the verdict to Garibaldi.

The end came after about 20 minutes of rough and tough rassling. Then the Indian kneed Garibaldi three times, twice in the head, and the fiery New York Italian did not know what it was all about when he was declared the winner. As a matter of fact, he started roughing the good referee while Bortnick was huting around for his hand to raise as a token of victory.

A percentage of the money laid on the line for ducats was donated to the District Playground Department's Santa Claus Fund, but, sad to relate, great numbers of rassle addicts stayed home to wrap up Xmas gifts and the smallest crowd in the history of Turner's indoor shows turned out.

Midget Manager Missing.

As far as the Clinstock-Garibaldi bout went, it was quite interesting. It started as a battle between the Indian's kneeing and the Italian's slugging and, strange as it seems, Garibaldi had the better of it until Clinstock began taking his kneeing more seriously. The Indian, by the way, evidently has decided that two, even if one is only half-size, can not live as cheaply as one, for his midget manager was missing last night.

Managers, it might be mentioned, do not seem to be popular in the rassle game. The Masked Marvel had his false-faced masterminder with him last night and the cash customers enjoyed themselves razzing him almost as much as they did the match, which saw the Marvel throw Scotty McDougal in the semifinal. The masked one's pilot had his playing cards with him, flashed them all as signals in the first 15 minutes, then put them away and started rooting just as though he had paid to get in.

Shows Foes the Ropes.

McDougal had been doing very well with the Marvel for 35½ minutes. Then he tried to lock his foe's head between the two top ropes, managed to get his tummy in the way of the Marvel's flying hoofs and landed on his back, with his head hitting the floor with a resounding thud. While he was counting the stars, the Marvel flopped on him and it was all over.

Youthful Vic Christy won a decision over Sid Nabor, a newcomer, in an interesting, though clean, curtain-raiser, while grunting Mike Romano tossed handsome Benny Ginsberg for the only other decision of the night. In the other bout, George Manich and George Hagen rassled to a heated draw.

Baby of Vean Gregg Weighs Near 2 Pounds

Hoquiam, Wash., Dec. 21 (AP).—A "doll baby" born to the wife of Vean Gregg, former Cleveland and Washington pitcher, has gained five ounces in the 19 days of her life and now weighs one pound, 15 ounces, Dr. J. F. MacDonald reported today.

At birth, December 2, at the Hoquiam General Hospital, she weighed one pound, 10 ounces.

"She's growing now," Dr. MacDonald said, "and I have every hope that she will live."

The infant is so small the doctor slips a ring from his finger over the child's hand and up its arm to the elbow. She has not been named.

Butterworth Is Sued By Wife; Wed in '99

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 21 (AP).—An application for divorce has been filed in superior court here by Mrs. Esther Stoddard Butterworth, whose husband is Frank S. Butterworth, sportsman and former Yale football star.

Mrs. Butterworth alleges desertion since June 1, 1928. She is the daughter of the late Ezekiel Stoddard and sister of Maj. Louis E. Stoddard, former international polo player.

Butterworth, through counsel, has filed a reply to the complaint, denying the allegation. Mrs. Butterworth asks alimony, but the sum is not specifically stated. The Butterworths were married in 1899.

Buck Jones Winner.

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (AP).—Buck Jones, 146, Philadelphia, won on a technical knockout over Tony Stetz, 155½, of Wilkesbarre, in the seventh round of the main bout at a boxing show tonight.

Stetz, who substituted for Pat Igo, of Shenandoah, Pa., went down for no count in the third round. Igo could not fight because of an injury to his right hand received in training.

Post Mortems . . .

J. E. Lovelock, of Oxford, holder of the world's record at the mile, may not run again . . . as the result of a recent operation on a cartilage in his leg . . . he was operated upon before the last university cross-country run . . . Joseph P. Skladany, of Pitt, has been declared by many as the greatest end of the generation . . . his collective opponents were thrown for a net loss of 5 yards during the past season . . . of the 70 colleges that have elected captains for the next season 16 will be ends . . . tackles are second with 14 . . . 12 captains-elect are guards . . . 11 centers . . . 8 full backs . . . 5 quarter backs . . . and 4 half backs.

The Nats are scheduled to play the Pirates in exhibition games Saturday and Sunday, April 14 and 15 . . . Clark Griffith wanted the Saturday game played here . . . and the Sunday game in Pittsburgh . . . but the Pirates insisted on the Sunday game being played here because if they played in Pittsburgh, it would be the first Sunday game of pro ball since the repeal of the Pennsylvania blue laws . . . and they wish that game to be played with a team in their own league . . . Dave "Reds" Allshouse played 4 years of football and 4 years of basket ball at George Washington . . . before the one-year rule . . . he was the last man to achieve that distinction at George Washington.

Grove Keeps 1st Honors On Slab

Record of 24 Wins and 8 Losses Best for 1933 Hurlers.

Whitehill and Russell Outstanding Nats; Crowder Trails.

DESPITE the frequent wails heard that baseball's rule-makers are taking the game away from the pitchers and giving it to the batters, the fact remains that the American League moundmen are becoming more and more effective each year. According to the 1933 official pitching averages just released, three teams—the Indians, Nats and Tigers—held opponents to an average of less than four earned runs per game, while the average for the entire eight clubs was 4.28. In 1932, the Yanks alone held foes to less than four runs, while the league average was 18 points higher.

Washington's mound staff ranked second to the Cleveland Indians in effectiveness while, individually, its members ranked close to the top. Monte Pearson, of the Tribe, showed the way in effectiveness, with Jack Russell third, Bobby Burke eighth, Monte Weaver ninth, Earl Whitehill eleventh, Walter Stewart nineteenth and Gen. Al Crowder twenty-fifth. Russell, playing in parts of 50 games, had an average of but 2.69 runs scored against him. Burke's average was 3.23, Weaver's 3.26, Whitehill's 3.29, Stewart's 3.82 and Crowder's 3.97.

Whitehill Second in Wins.

Whitehill's record of 22 victories as against 8 losses ranked him second to Lefty Bob Grove, now of the Red Sox, in percentages. Crowder tied Grove for most triumphs registered, 24, and led the league for most games participated in. Grove pitched the most complete games, 21, with Whitehill and Irving Hadley, of the Browns, tying for second with 19 each. Although taking part in less games than did Crowder, Hadley pitched the most innings.

Oral Hildebrand, of the Indians, led in shutouts, 6, with Whitehill being one of a dozen tying for fourth honors with two each. Hildebrand, Hadley and Stewart each worked in four overtime contests.

There were no no-hit games in the league last season, Weaver and Crowder figuring in the only low-hit ones credited to Nat fingers. Weaver hurled one three-hit game, while he and the General also pitched a four-hit one.

As may be gleaned from the above, it was another great year for Lefty Grove. He appeared in 45 games, 8 of them in 11 days, and completed 21 of the 28 he started. This is his sixth season in succession that he has won 20 or more games, hurled 250 or more innings and allowed less than 100 earned runs and is the seventh year in a row that he has pitched 20 or more complete games.

Grove Ended Yankee Streak.

The tall southpaw also has the distinction of stopping the Yankees' continuous scoring streak. He blanked them on August 3 after they had scored one or more runs in 308 consecutive games.

Vernon Gomez, the Yankees' ace southpaw, led the league in strikeouts, with 163, while Crowder issued the most passes, 141. Ted Lyons, Chisox veteran; Johnny Allen, Yank youngster, and Lloyd Brown, former Nat, uncorked the most wild pitches, 10, while Gomez, Bob Kline, of the Red Sox, and Walter Miller, of the Chisox, hit the most rival batsmen, 6.

"Ringer" Believed At Charles Town

Police Hold Hustle Over; Owner Disappears.

Charlestown, W. Va., Dec. 21.—A plot to enter a "ringer" in a race at the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club is believed to have been thwarted today when West Virginia State troops took possession of a horse listed under the name of Hustle Over. Track stewards were tipped off that a killing was about to be made with the horse, and conducted an investigation. The horse is said to have been shipped from New Jersey to be sold at the sale at Berryville, Va., last Saturday. The sale failed to materialize and the 2-year-old was transferred here and was sold to H. Hock, said to be from New Jersey. He disappeared during the investigation yesterday. Hock recently claimed Fair Crest, which in turn was claimed from him. Later he purchased Axenby at a private sale.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

PITY the poor rookie who goes South with the Washington Ball Club. The 1934 cast of the Nats is not scheduled to vary in any particular from the 1933 campaigners except in right field, where Jonathan Thomas Stone will be holding forth in place of Goose Goslin. A rookie's chance of breaking into the Washington line-up in 1934 is no better than the proverbial Chinaman's chance.

The only menace to the regular 1933 line-up is confined to the person of Cecil Travis, the Chattanooga third base graduate who is being groomed for Ossie Bluege's job, but Travis is still a rookie and Bluege still a full-fledged big leaguer.

Washington fans discerned the handwriting on the wall fo Bluege as a result of the late lamented world series, in which Ossie failed to hit the size of hi chapeau, but they are prone t forget the valuable performance of Bluege during the regular season, when he was fielding lik Bluege of old and hitting a respectable .280.

Not Solid Socks.

Young Travis captured th fancy of Washington fandom i his brief spells at the third sac last summer, when he was hittin a nobby .400, but Clark Griffith and Joe Cronin, the men wh have the say in such matters, d not see eye to eye with the fan who predict that Travis will displace Bluege in the Washingto line-up of 1934.

Too many of Travis' hits wer handle affairs, short caroms t right field. On the day that h smacked five for five, only on was a solid sock. If Travis ha a weakness, the big league pitchers had no opportunity to discover it.

In the minors, a hitter ma face big league pitching once o twice a week. In the majors h faces big league hurling every day. That's the difference. Blueg still can hit 20 points under Travi and be a more valuable man t the Nats. His is the poetry o motion, the pinnacle of art, an if there's a better fielding thir baseman in the league, it's William Kamm, the peer of 'em all.

Boken Best Diamond.

The department considers Bo Boken as the Nats' best diamon in the rough. Boken, lean an lanky and awkward as they come is the Ichabod Crane of big league infields. How he gets to groun balls defies description. But h gets to 'em and throws 'em lik a big leaguer to the manner born. But Boken's is an unhappy lot.

A second baseman and shortstop by trade, Boken faces th mountainous task of displacin either Buddy Myer or Joe Cronin if he is to gain a regular job. I seems that Boken is fated to remai a utility man with the Nats. Infielders better than Cronin an Myer do not materializ: in tw seasons in the big leagues.

Boken was bought by Griffith a a result of his remarkable record for driving in runs, whic towered high above a mediocr .280 average. And hitting wit men on bases was Boken's fort Last season at one period ou West, after Myer had been beane in Detroit, Boken drove in th winning runs in four of five successive games while the Nat were staving off a challenge b the Yankees.

But Boken is no Myer. Ask Cronin.

Third Trial with Nats.

The rookie with the best chance of supplanting a regular on th Washington team is bottle-legge Cliff Bolton, who is rapidly bein known as the superannuated recruit, inasmuch as this is his third trial with the Nats in a perio covering six years.

Only the fact that Luke Sewell was doing such a swell job with the Nats' catching last season kep Bolton out of the regular line-up for if there was ever a natura hitter, Bolton is he. A bit more polish behind the bat, a steadie throwing arm and Bolton wil step in to relieve Sewell of th bulk of the catching duties. Bolton is one of the few that Griffith will not consider as tradin material.

Bolton, Boken and Travis, tha sums up the Washington rookie who hold a Chinaman's chanc to break into the line-up. Th other rookies who go to Biloxi i February are foredoomed to grac the bench or be farmed out fo more seasoning in the mino leagues.

Jockey Westrope Suspended 5 Day

Houston, Tex., Dec. 21 (AP).—Jackie Westrope, regarded as th Nation's premier jockey, today wa suspended for five days by officia at Epsom Downs for rough-ridin yesterday on Miss Tulsa.

Track stewards said the suspension would become effective tomorrow. That meant the Montana bo would have to wait until the middle of next week to try again t reach his goal for the year, 30 winners.

He already has ridden 299 winners, a better record than an other jockey of recent years h made in a 12 months period. H failed to score a victory today.

Lieb Leads Eastern Alumni to Hard-Fought 30-28 Victory Over Tech Stars

C. U. Player Registers 12 Points

Is Only Man to Play All of Game and Keeps Crowd on Edge.

Werber, Now of Red Sox, Added Treat; Russell Stars for Losers.

BERNIE LIEB, former Eastern High School center and at present varsity tip-off man for Catholic University, returned to the scene of his high school triumphs last night and was the head man in the Eastern alumni victory over the Tech alumni, 30-28.

Lieb, tall, gaunt, curley-haired, and all legs, was just about the whole show. When not flipping two-ply baskets through the hoop, he was running up and down the backs of the Tech graduates to the delight of a packed house. Playing the entire game, the only player to do so, Lieb counted a quintet of field goals and a brace of charity throws.

For Tech, the presence of Bill Werber, Washington's playing representative in big league base ball, who gallavants around the hot corner for the rejuvenating Boston Red Sox, was an added treat to the cage fans. Werber played the first and third period and accounted for a single basket. However, the big spark plug in the Technicians' line-up was Ev Russell, G. W. Frosh star, who looped four field goals and a single foul.

Hard Fought Contest.

The game was hard fought from the start, and this, coupled with wild shooting and knee-skidding along the floor, kept the crowd continually off its chairs and benches. At the end of the quarter, Eastern had a 7-4 margin, which blended into an 18-12 count at the half. The Lincoln Park School graduates managed to hold their lead in the third quarter, going into the fourth period 26-20. Tech showed a last minute flurry as the score shows, but not enough to overhaul the Eastern five.

The Eastern High varsity team added another victory to its fast growing string by trouncing Gonzaga Prep, 28-13, in the other game. Bassan was the high point getter of the evening scoring five field goals for 10 points.

BOB WILSON, former Western High and Maryland U. star, who succumbed yesterday afternoon from injuries received in an auto accident.

Philadelphians Bid District Golf Stars

AN invitation to have the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association first team play against the Philadelphia stars in the Quaker City on May 12-13 of next year has been received by Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, of Chevy Chase, District's first team captain.

Philadelphia has been sending teams here to compete against the District women for the past two years. Washington, although making a brave stand, lost both matches.

Some of the country's most notable feminine players are in the Philadelphia line-up. Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, four times former national women's champion; Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, three times a former national title-holder; Mrs. Clarence Vanderbeck, Miss Edith Quier, Frances Williams and Jane McCullough, are members of the Quaker City team, all except Mrs. Vare, having appeared here last season.

Miss Elizabeth C. Harris, president of the District Women's Association, stated last night that the invitation could not be accepted until after a meeting of the executive committee in January.

Hurt in Crash, Bob Wilson Expires

Former Western High and Maryland Star Was 24 Years Old.

BOB WILSON, former University of Maryland athlete and a product of Western High School, died yesterday in Montgomery County Hospital from injuries sustained in an automobile accident early Sunday near Glendale, Md. Death was caused by a fractured skull and internal injuries.

With him at the end were his mother and wife. In a nearby room lay his father, injured in the same crash, but reported out of danger by hospital authorities. Young Wilson was 24 years old.

At Western young Wilson earned his letters in football, basket ball and baseball, and was regarded as one of the most promising youths ever developed in the local high schools. He was graduated in 1928.

Suffered Bad Injury.

In his freshman year at Maryland the youth suffered an injury to his shoulder that almost ended his athletic career. However, an operation performed at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore made it possible for him to continue. He played guard on the football team, forward in basket ball and in the outfield of the baseball team. He was a member of the 1931 quintet which won the Southern Conference championship at Atlanta.

He was associated with the playground department at the time of his death and well known in Washington sports circles. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Baltimore Is Seeking '34 Army-Navy Game

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 21 (Spl.). Baltimore is making a strong bid to be host city for the 1934 Army-Navy football game.

Navy has the choice of site by virtue of agreement between the military and naval academies for selection in alternate years. Definite announcement may be forthcoming within a few days.

Other cities said to have a chance of landing the big service classic are Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Cleveland, and in the event Baltimore should be eventually eliminated, chances are it would go to Philadelphia.

Brute Strength Not All

By Paul Gallico.

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 21 (Spl.).—Dr. Louis Little, the eminent Italian football pedagogue who is bound westward with a class of pupils to test out some of his theories in a laboratory known as the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., looks a little like a perturbed parrot while in the act of coaching his football players. He sucks his lower lip, tucks his wings in at his side with his hands in his sweater pockets and glares. But when he opens his mouth in anger or even mildly corrective admonitions, then be bellows like the seven bulls of Bashan. He yells, he bawls and roars, he whoops and thunders and his calldowns reverberate from the steep sides of the empty stadia, reecho and reecho, and catch the unfortunate recipient of his wrath going, coming and going again.

I thought at one time he would blast an unfortunate tackle who didn't go to the right hole right out of the stadium. He marched over to him, a truly terrifying figure and let out a yell that lifted the student's helmet right off his skull. He reminds me a lot of my old man. I guess all Eyetalians are excitable. He cools out quick and sweet.

I am glad that I was born to late for modern football. In my time of youth, I did little mucking about on the line. I was never very bright, figures always distressed me and signals were a great travail. But I had but one member to listen to. We charged but three ways, to the right, to the left and straight ahead. Now the line has become a fluid, seething pot. I watched amazed at practice yesterday and intricate formations, the precision and the memory required of line and backfield men today and wondered what on earth ever would have happened to me had I had to learn such drills and where to go at what time.

This morning at the breakfast table on the diner, I heard Dr. Little order Sam Cordovano, one of his assistants, forward to tender line and backfield men a written quiz. Every player was required as a morning exercise to write out on paper exactly where he was to go on every play, and what his assignment was. That sort of thing would have taken all the pleasure out of it for me. Why, great Jehosophat, these boys have to be intelligent, nimble-wits as well as physicial heroes. I guess the crew was the place for me after all.

One night, two summers ago during the Olympics I was driving down Wiltshire boulevard in Los Angeles and had to stop because of the traffic crowd that had gathered at a spot where a man in a top hat was making a speech. Great studio spotlights played upon the scene. There was a band and flags. And red fire, and excitement.

It locked like a good runner-up to some of the celebrations they used to put on for Lindbergh around the country. I pulled up to see who or what was being thus imposingly feted. And so help me they were unveiling a billboard advertising a motion picture.

I cite this incident merely to prepare you for some of the amazing things that will be done to celebrate the appearance of Columbia on the coast. A few years back, Columbia thought it would like to become identified with some animal that should be significant of and symbolic of all the virtues of Columbia athletes, and selected the lion. They will live to rue the day.

In all seriousness, there is a movement on foot by M. M. G. to have Capt. Cliff Montgomery ride a live studio lion in the Tournament of Roses parade on a float on which I believe a lady yclept, Peggy Hamilton, who is being plugged for the job of official Columbia hostess, but who won't host without letters of marque from the university authorities, will pose as alma mammy, the gilt lady who sits in front of the library at 116th street. I believe that she is to do this surrounded on all sides by more loose lions.

I think that Miss Hamilton is a very smart young lady to demand a letter of patent from the university, because something tells me that Hollywood is going to be simply pediculous with ladies of high and low degree who will appear as self-appointed hostesses to the Columbia team. The competition is going to be terrific.

I think, if the M. G. M. officials are smart, they will get a similar note frcm the university officials authorizing their lions as the only official lions because it is not like Fox and Paramount and Columbia (pictures) to let M. G. M. have the exclusive lion concession. If Deke Aylesworth is anywhere around California when this happens, he will corner every lion on the coast, including several mountain lions from the neighboring States and turn them loose. Between hostesses and lions there are some amusing times ahead. You may rely on me to keep you posted.

Rockne Plan Used On Jaunt to Coast

Salem High Gridmen Race Train to Keep in Shape.

Denver, Dec. 21 (AP).—A training plan devised by the late Knute Rockne is being followed by the Salem, Mass., High School football squad on its trip to Los Angeles for the intersectional game there Sunday with Urban Military Academy.

Several times a day, a mile out from various railroad stations, the train carrying the New Englanders stops, the Salem lads jump off and race the "iron horse" into town.

The players, of course, lose every heat, but the plan thus far has served its purpose in eliminating "train legs."

Broderick said the plan was outlined to him by Rockne, who told how Irish teams would make the West Coast trips in the future. The Notre Dame coach died before he could give the plan a trial.

Salem has won the Massachusetts State high school football championship seven years out of the last ten.

Mack, 71 Tomorrow, Will Ride in Airplane

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (AP).—Connie Mack, veteran pilot of the Philadelphia Athletics, plans his first airplane flight as part of his celebration of his seventy-first birthday.

With high hopes and many plans for the future, Mack winds up his first "extra inning year" Saturday, and his family intends to make it a red-letter day.

Bailey Improves; Has 60-40 Chance

Moves His Body of Own Accord, Waves Arm.

Boston, Dec. 21 (AP).—Irvin (Ace) Bailey, injured Toronto hockey player, today enjoyed the best day he has had since his skull was fractured in a collision with Eddie Shore, of the Boston Bruins, at the Boston Garden on December 12.

An official statement, issued by Dr. Donald Monro, who performed two operations on the hockey player's brain, stated he now had "a 60-40 chance to recover."

Bailey moved his body of his own accord this afternoon for the first time since the accident, and continued taking solid food. He now is taking all nourishment and medicine normally and injection methods have been stopped. Although unable to speak, he managed to wave his arm in recognition to his wife, Mrs. Gladys Bailey, and his father, Charles Bailey, who arrived here yesterday from Bracebridge Ontario, when they entered the sickroom.

4-City Duckpin Match Opens January 5

Washington Will Be Host for First Games and Baltimore, Second.

THE National Duck Pin Bowling Congress officially announced the completion of arrangements for a quadrangular intercity duckpin match between all-star teams representing Boston, Mass.; Willmantic, Conn.; Baltimore and Washington.

Washington will be the scene of the opening of the match, a total of ten games, on January 5. The last five games will be rolled at the Recreation Center alleys in Baltimore on January 7.

Fred Buchholz's Occidental Restaurant Team is picked to represent the District and will be opposed by the Blue Ribbon aggregation from Connecticut. The Boston and Baltimore representatives have not as yet been chosen.

A return match is being arranged in the New England States when the Baltimore and Washington teams journey North to attend the Eastern Sweepstakes in February.

Ralph Fraser, popular Arcadia Bowling Alley manager, will present one silver dollar to the man or woman rolling the high score between the hours of 10 and 1 on Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

Capt. Irene Scott, Marines, turned out to be the money roller of the Ladies Federal League at Arcadia last night, collecting a $2 prize for the highest game, a 143, which tied the former individual game mark. Doris Doodall, president of the league, annexed high set for Agriculture Juniors with 345. Reconstruction Finance shared team honors with Agriculture with a 546 game and 1,541, respectively. The latter score is the second high team set for the season.

Ed Blakeney, Lucky Strike star, after starting with a 113 game, followed with 120 and 168 for a set of 401, to aid his team in upsetting the King Pin crew, leaders of the District League, by taking the odd game. Ed pulled a triple-header strike and three spares for his high game.

Occidental, led by Capt. Joe Harfison's 382 set, went into second place by winning the odd game from Columbia, while Hyattsville came through with the biggest surprise, taking all three games from Beacon Sign Co., bringing the latter down to third place. Jack Whalen (Columbia), took individual honors, annexing both high game and set with 169 and 424, respectively.

Paulie Harrison dropped 2 points from his 130 average, turning in a low 321 set for the Arcadians. Georgetown, rolling its first two games over 600, won two from the Arcadians. Russell Spilman (Georgetown), had a 392 set.

One of the closest races of the season is being staged in the Takoma-Silver Spring League on the Takoma alleys. Southern Railway, by sweeping its match with Kimble Lacey Co., went into first place, leading by one game. That the last shall sometimes be first was proven by the last-place Stewart Bros. team when it won its match from the formerly leading Lohr Real Estate five. Five teams are now tied for second place and the seventh place team is but two games behind the leaders.

After leading the War Department League since the opening of the season, the Engineers lost two games to Finance No. 1 and dropped to the third position. Lithos replaced the Engineers at the top by sweeping their match with Headquarters. C. C. C., by taking the odd game from Firing Squad, eased into the runner-up position.

Dennehy (Finance No. 1), with a 368 set, and Matson (Barbettes), rolling a 144 game, shared high individual honors. Barbettes' 608 game and 1,612 set led the team scoring.

Master Printers carried away the laurels in the Daylight League at Convention Hall last night. Aided by Lawn's 338 set, the team rolled a game of 531 and had a total pinfall of 1,544. Beaver (Occidental Hotel), chucked in a 130 game, which was not exceeded.

Pasadena Open Led by Smith With a 67

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 21 (AP).—The veteran Carnoustie Scot, MacDonald Smith, blazed his way into the lead among the qualifiers for the $4,000 Pasadena open golf championship today with a scintillating 67, 4 strokes under par for the Brookside Municipal Course.

Close behind him, in second place in spite of the fact that he 3-putted three greens, was Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., with a 69, a score that came after unusually strong iron play to offset his putting weaknesses.

Oliver Sleppy, of Long Beach, Calif., recently turned professional, finished even with par, 71, in third place, where he was tied with Pete Lamb, of San Bernardino.

Cards Five Birdies.

Smith's card included five birdies and he was over par only on the seventh. The majority of his putts for birdies needed only a stroke of a foot or so. Runyan, not nearly so steady, ran down a 25-footer for his birdie 3 on the fourth and sank one 12 feet away at the short thirteenth. He missed a mashie niblick on the fifteenth and had to be content with a 6 and, with a par 4 needed at the eighteenth for a 68, he blew a 2-foot putt.

The cards of the two leaders:

Smith	444 344 524—35
Runyan	343 445 445—36
Par in	444 345 434—35—36—71
Smith	443 335 334—32—35—67

Half of Field Starts.

Only one-half the field of approximately 200 competitors for prize money in the first of California's winter tournaments was playing today, but based on the difficulties many of the outstanding professions had with the firm and fast course, a score of 76 looked good enough to qualify for Saturday's second round. The other qualifying section will start away tomorrow and the 100 low scorers will fight it out for the 57 places in Sunday's 36-hole final.

Today's scores:

MacDonald Smith, Nashville	35	32—67
Paul Runyan, White Plains	36	33—69
Pete Lamb, San Bernardino	36	35—71
Olive Sleppy, Long Beach, Calif	36	35—71

New York, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Both squads of the North-South football teams that meet here Sunday held workouts today. The entire North team was on hand for practice, but the South's line-up is still incomplete. The remaining players were due tonight and will work out tomorrow.

Pocket-Billiard Title Won by Rudolph

CHICAGO, Dec. 21 (AP).—Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, tonight regained the world pocket billiards championship, defeating the Philadelphia star, Andrew Ponzi, 125 to 113, in 18 innings. Rudolph last won the title in 1931.

The Cleveland veteran, who will celebrate his thirty-ninth birthday the last day of this month, got away to a fast start, and threatened for a time to better his own tournament mark of six innings for best game. At the end of the fifth inning he led, 101 to 65. However, he slowed up and in the tenth suffered a setback of 15 points for three consecutive scratches.

Rudolph in Big Lead.

Ponzi failed to take advantage and Rudolph worked up an advantage of 105 to 60, in the sixteenth. Ponzi rallied in his half of the eighteenth, but his run of 46 was halted by a scratch. Rudolph went out with an unfinished string of 20, for his seventh victory in nine scheduled games.

Rudolph took the $1,600 in prize money, a diamond medal, and will receive a substantial share of the receipts at the end of the tournament. Ponzi dropped into a tie for second place honors with two other Philadelphians, William Mosconi and George Kelly, and James Caras, of Wilmington, Del.

Caras and Mosconi will meet in the first match of the second place playoff series, and will be followed by Kelly and Ponzi tomorrow afternoon.

New York, Dec. 21 (U.P.).—Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, today was seeded No. 1 in the annual national junior singles tournament which begins here December 26. Parker, ranked nationally at No. 8 in the senior division, is a heavy favorite to win the championship.

Ohio State Cagesters Suffer Loss of Hosket

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 21 (AP). Ohio State University's basket ball team is knee-deep in the blues.

Big Bill Hosket, a Big Ten center and one of the leading scorers in the conference last year, will be absent this season. He failed to survive the midterm examinations, the results of which were announced today. His ineligibility literally wrecks all the plans formulated by Coach Harold G. Olsen. He had constructed his 1933-34 model around the playing of big Bill.

Grayback Wins in Feature Race as Spills Again Mar Charles Town Program

Four Horses Figure in Mishaps

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 21.—Humpty Dumpty had a great fall and that was all there was to it. Just one fall and all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put Humpty together again. If the jockeys riding at this mountain race track could be assured that they would take only one fall and that the gods who have charge of those things would then let them do a little riding, the jocks' room down behind the clubhouse would be a much merrier place these days.

Of course, the boys are not sitting around asking each other who will be next, but a cross section of their minds would certainly show words like "fall, tumble, accident, stumble, hospital and undertaker." Never in the history of racing in this section have horses been called upon to run on anything like the track that has been offered them for the past several days. There is hardly a horse in any race that does not stumble at some stage. Each day has brought its quota of falls and the miracle of it all is that the jockeys are still alive and that most of them are still kicking strongly.

Novelty, at Least.

Today's four spills were all singles, but they provided at least one distinct novelty. It was the juvenile Whirry which brought a new angle to the game of stumble, stumble, who's going to stumble? Whirry, with Jockey Beecroft up, was trying to make up ground at the last turn in the fifth race when the colt's front legs buckled and both horse and rider slid several yards, much in the manner of a ball player barely beating the throw to a base. Beecroft immediately gained his feet, but Whirry laid on his side dead still. However, he jumped up a minute later, looking like a mud image of a horse but apparently sound.

Jockey J. O'Malley would have had the mount on Whirry had he not fallen with Maybar in the third and just to show that luck was with him, Tuffy G, which he was programmed to ride in the sixth race, threw and injured Jockey Jelly a few strides from the finish.

Another Loses Rider.

Of the mishap that marked the final, those of us in the press box were not witnesses. Behind the stone pile at the first turn, Beckville became detached from Jockey Pat Sage. The horse went behind the rocks with rider and came out on the other side without one. Beckville then jumped the fence and was last seen making for the downtown section of Charles Town.

At present, nothing can be done about this situation unless it is to close down the track. Mother Nature tried to lend a helping hand by sending a warm sun over the mountain but it made little impression on the muddy course.

Danger Ahead.

If, after this meeting closes on Christmas Day, one of these jockeys visits his lady friend and she switches on the radio, let's all hope and pray that a saccharine voice doesn't start crooning, "By a Water Fall." If this happens somebody is going to get crowned.

But to get into routine of the winners and the losers and the odds and the prices, Grayback, a colt with the heart of a Mack truck placed in a racing chassis, came from back in the field to take the fifth race—the day's feature engagement—from Forceful and Monastic to pay a $16.60 mutuel.

Tody West Comes From Rear.

Tody West joined the small group of horses that have come from far back in fields to win at this track. The daughter of Westrick was up in the final strides to take a nose decision from Nancy Khan, a longshot, with Baby Chink third. The last named stumbled with every other stride throughout the running of the 5 furlong sprint. Tody West, coupled with Big Dipper, paid a $10.60 mutuel.

Another close finish marked the second race when Nora's Grace won by a head from Eyota. Clear Knight was third. The last named outran Nora's Grace at the start to draw out to a two-length lead but tripped at the sixteenth pole and Jockey Roderick barely stayed in the saddle. The winner supplied an $8.40 pay-off.

The Bard Shows Class.

The Bard, which Jockey Byrne is accused of pulling here last week, did not help the cause of the boy today. The elderly Jelly had the mount and the son of On Watch ran a powerful race in front of the field to win by a neck. However, Jelly's overconfidence almost cost him the purse. Water Lad, second from the start, made a closing rush while Jelly was pulling up nearing the finish and the veteran plater was only a head away at the wire. The win mutuel was $7.

December 22 is not, as usually claimed, the shortest day in the year—it is the longest. Measured from sun noon to sun noon, that is by apparent time, the day runs over the 24-hour mark by about half a minute. It is the shortest daylight day of the year, just as June 22 was the longest daylight day of the year. June 22, however, was really the shortest day in the year—it took not quite 24 hours for the earth to complete its revolution that day.

Strange as it seems, the great Russian experiment has produced, among other things, a musical prodigy. She is 9-year-old Margaret Heifetz, accomplished pianist and leader, on occasion, of the Soviet Philharmonic Orchestra. She has won international fame by conducting the 200-piece orchestra through difficult compositions. Margaret is allowed by the government to appear in public only twice a year, but the government gives her a regular allowance so that she may continue her musical education, which was begun at the age of 6 under her father, who is a cellist at the Leningrad Little Opera House.

Lift Jackson Bar, Ed Barrow Says

Yankee Official Feels Joe Has Suffered Enough.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The World-Telegram today quotes Ed Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, as favoring the reinstatement of Joe Jackson, who was banned from organized baseball for his part in the world series scandal of 1919.

Jackson, now a resident of Greenville, S. C., recently applied to Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis for reinstatement so he might play in an industrial league at Greenville. The World-Telegram canvassed various baseball leaders, but only Barnow responded, the paper said.

"I believe he has done a long and sufficient penance," Barrow said, "and that it would be the human thing to lift the bars and let him run that club in Greenville."

Richmond May Stage State, S. A. Ring Events

Richmond, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—The possibility that Richmond will entertain both the State and South Atlantic Boxing tournaments during the winter and spring months arose today with the announcement by Dr. W. H. Parker, A. A. U. commissioner for Virginia, that he would sanction the plan.

He said he had been assured of warm support from all sections and had been assured by South Atlantic officials that the South Atlantic tourney would be held here again if desired.

A. A. U. Mat Turney Set.

Ames, Iowa, Dec. 21 (AP).—The National A. A. U. wrestling tournament will be held here April 13 and 14, Hugo Otopalik, manager of the tournament and mat coach at Iowa State College, said today.

Joe McLennan, Race Leader, Succumbs

Served as Secretary for Many Tracks, Including Those in Maryland.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 21 (AP). Joseph "Sandy" McLennan, who came to the United States when a child "as a sort of a stowaway," and became racing secretary for the country's greatest tracks, died here today.

McLennan, known to thousands of race followers as either "Sandy" or "Joe," passed away in his sleep. He had been suffering from influenza. His exact age was not known, but he was thought to be about 56.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, "Sandy" McLennan spent his early days romping about the great rooms of Arbroath Abbey, in Forfarshire, and in the heather fields that surrounded it.

His playmate was his cousin, Harry McLennan Lauder, who later became the world famous singer of Scotch ballads.

Was Sent to America.

When "Sandy" was 8, his parents died, and the remainder of the McLennan clan decided little Joseph should come to the United States. "So they put a tag on me," McLennan would recall, "and they gave me a ticket. At least, they said they did.

"But when the officers came around to check up I was tagged but not ticketed. We never did find that ticket. Well, they couldn't very well turn me back, so I came to America as a sort of stowaway."

He went to Chicago and entered school there—but never permitted "larnin'" to interfere with watching the races at Garfield Park, Washington Park and Harlem, the Chicago tracks of the period.

McLennan worked himself into a job as messenger boy at the tracks and later became a telegraph operator, clicking a race track wire key in poolrooms when the Illinois tracks were not operating.

Handled Nation's Best.

In a few years he had graduated into a manager of jockeys and for years handled the Nation's best.

In 1917, McLennan took charge of Sam Hildreth's stable, and it was at Worth course, near Chicago, that "Sandy" and Hildreth saddled six winners in the day's card of seven races.

That and following successes determined McLennan to own a stable and when Hildreth moved east "Sandy" resolutely drew his two years' savings from the bank and bought a horse.

"The week after I bought him he broke down," McLennan used to relate.

Moved to Camden.

He moved to Camden and it was in that country he became convinced he had no business owning a stable. So he became an entry clerk and from that graduated into the position of racing secretary.

His first job at that was in Florida, at the old Tampa Bay track, about 22 years ago. Then, in rapid succession, he was secretary in Kentucky, Charleston, S. C., New Orleans, Havana, Chicago, Maryland—at Pimlico for 10 years, leaving there to open Laurel. When Bowie opened, he took that, too.

When he died he was racing secretary for Arlington and Hawthorne, at Chicago, the new course at Detroit; Jamaica and Aqueduct, in New York; Havre de Grace and Bowie, in Maryland, Charles Town, in West Virginia, and Hileah here.

His widow, Mrs. Bertha McLennan, is here, and a son, Charles, who had been working as assistant secretary at the Charles Town meeting, was to arrive here tonight to aid in completing the funeral arrangements.

At the Post . . .

Dear Frank: Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 21.

Those who had today's "double" on Tody West and Benish Way received a pay-off of $13.80, marking one of the few times that a customer would have been better off had he parlayed the pair. Jockey Trenchard had the time of his life in the last race. He laughed when the horses came out the paddock gate. He laughed when he looked at that 10 to 1 on the odds board. He laughed when he passed the stands with Changeable in front the first time around. He laughed when he lost his skull cap at the turn. He laughed as he brought the horse home a length in advance of No Mistake. But the real laugh was on those who made No Mistake virtually an even-money favorite and those who backed Tremendous and Beckville into short odds. Laughingly, BILL.

First race—Dolice is a shifty juvenile at present and showed a likeness for the going last time. Gets the Bennings call over Postponement. Donna Dulcin ran a good second last out and is ready for another money appearance. Emmy Fish would be dangerous if sent back.

Second race—The Bard has shown that he is partial to the rough going here and breezed home to a win today. Mobile to place. Did She has never run back to that good form of early fall. However, I understand this one has improved.

Third race—Manager Bill will have the hustling Sage in the saddle and may take care of these juveniles. Monastic is a sturdy youngster ready to give the top one a battle. Ebony Torch did nothing the other day at mountainous odds but carries that Flying Ebony stamp.

Fourth race—Beau Cavalier was running a powerful race when he stumbled and fell yesterday. If he can hold his feet tomorrow, Palumbo should ride home on the front end. Teenie R. is on the improve and gets the place pick ahead of Longitude.

Fifth race—If Hacky H. is going to win a purse it will have to be in this field. Has been a hard-luck horse here but may redeem himself in this sprint. Handley for the place. Eyota ran well today and should get some part of the pay-off.

Sixth race—I watched Lough Port closely last out and saw the boy steer along the rail to the stretch, where he kept in back of horses. I expect a different ride today and a different result. Old Field and Electric Gaff for the rest.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TODY WEST, $10.60, $3.80, $3.30; NANCY KAHN, $32.00, $39.80; BABY CHINK, $8.60.

TODY WEST lacked speed in the early part, came around the leaders in the drive through the stretch and, closing strongly, was up in the final stride. NANCY KHAN, within reach of the leaders throughout, came through on the inside, took a brief lead a few yards out, but was laboring. BABY CHINK, well placed all the way, moved up threateningly in the stretch, but weakened. LAURETTA NASH, far back in the first stages, closed with a rush. RAGTOWN BELLE stopped badly. MINT BUD could not get up. BIG DIPPER tired.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:03. Off at 2:03½. Winner, C. Doerner's b. or br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NORAS GRACE, $8.40, $4.40, $4.40; EYOTA, $4.00, $3.60; CLEAR KNIGHT, $4.60.

NORAS GRACE, fast away, took a short early lead, was taken back from the pace of CLEAR KNIGHT, saved ground on the inside and came on again in the drive. EYOTA, slow to find her speed, worked her way up gradually, came around the leaders in the stretch and closed with good courage. CLEAR KNIGHT took command after a half mile, but faltered in the drive through the stretch. GERTIE R., always a forward factor, hung on well. DUTIFUL had no speed.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:27. Off at 2:28½. Winner, G. C. Brenton's b. g. †W. B. Worthington-J. Cummins entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENISH WAY, $4.20, $3.80, $3.20; EMMY FISH, $6.20, $3.80; HAPPY LOPE, $6.40.

BENISH WAY, suited by the going, took command easily immediately after the start, was rated in front throughout and finished with much in reserve while being eased up. EMMY FISH, slow to find her speed, worked up gradually, wore down ROUND BEND, but could not threaten the winner. HAPPY LOPE, a forward factor throughout, finished well. ROUND BEND followed the early pace most closely, but tired. UMA made up some ground. BRILLIANT GIRL did not appear to fancy the going.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 1:53½. Off at once. Winner, L. A. Coley's b. g. (4), by On Watch—Narrator. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:27 3-5, 0:56 3-5, 1:28 4-5, 1:34 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE BARD, $7.00, $3.40, $2.40; WATER LAD, $4.00, $2.60; BLACK DREAMS, $2.20.

THE BARD, away well and racing kindly, assumed command at once, was rated in front throughout and was being eased up at the finish, when Jelly grew careless. WATER LAD, closest to the pace at all times, drove up on the inside in the stretch and was overhauling the winner. BLACK DREAMS, timidly handled going into the first turn, could not improve his position thereafter and was tiring at the finish. SAMBO G. was always outrun. McKIM had no mishaps. TERRA NOVA was never a contender and pulled up lame.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:19. Off at 3:20½. Winner, G. Y. Christmas' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAYBACK, $16.60, $10.60, $5.20; FORCEFUL, $3.60, $2.40; MONASTIC, $4.00.

GRAYBACK, rated off the pace of FORCEFUL until straightened out the stretch, found racing room on the inside, wore down the leaders, but had to be kept under pressure. FORCEFUL raced kindly to take command, drew out into a good lead on the far turn and held on well. MONASTIC, far back in the early running, closed gamely. HOURSEND, crowded out when turning into the back stretch, was rushed up on the inside, but flattened out when he met contention. NIGGERTOE lacked speed. BIFF stopped. WHIRRY fell in the front stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won easily; place, drawing. Went to post at 3:43½. Off at once. Winner, F. B. Halls br. m. MODERN TIMES, rated behind the pace of BARCELONA PETE until leaving the backstretch, responded readily when called upon, drew out into a safe lead and was in hand at the finish. BARCELONA PETE took command immediately after the break, was rated in front until overtaken by the winner, but was tiring at the end. REDCLIFFE, far back throughout, had no excuses. LIGHT BREEZE was always outrun. TUFFY G., within reach of the leaders all the way, stumbled and lost his rider in the front stretch.

CHANGEABLE took command with a rush after the first half mile when moving up on the inside, was steadied thereafter until challenged, and outstayed NO MISTAKE under punishment. The latter kept within striking distance of the winner, was messed about in the last half mile, and finally finished on the inside after being taken out entering the home stretch. OUR JEWELL made up ground slowly. DOUBTLESS was held safe. TREMENDOUS sprawled frequently in the footing and was not persevered with when she began to slip. BECKVILLE slipped and unseated his rider after going 5 furlongs.

Barashkova's Nose Victory Pays $3.20

First Three Horses Finish Inches Apart in 4th at Jefferson.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Dec. 21 (AP). — A finish that had the boys arguing until long after the races were over marked the running of the fourth event here this afternoon. Three horses reached the judges virtually on a line. The judges decided that Mrs. R. T. Flippen's Barashkova, the $3.20-for-$2 favorite, had won the purse by a margin of the velvet on his nose, with Belle Delight second and Cloirado third. The winner ran the 5½ furlongs in 1:07 3-5.

Belle Delight probably was best, but little M. Peters failed to get all possible out of his mount. He rushed the filly into a substantial early lead, but Barashkova loomed alongside on the final bend and then poked his head in front. The favorite drew into a daylight advantage after straightening out, only suddenly to tire in the final sixteenth. Belle Delight, on the inside, and Cloirado, on the outside, swarmed around the leader, but the judges saw Barashkova first.

Hunter Rides Double.

Jimmy Hunter completed a double when he guided the even-money choice La Salle to that gelding's second in a row in the fifth race. It was just a gallop for the Shannon Farm's representative, Jimmie L. trailing him by four lengths. Run On lost the place by a length. La Salle moved up rapidly after a quarter mile and opened up a wide advantage in the stretch. St. Jim fell shortly after the break. J. Leyland, his rider, arose apparently uninjured, but the horse appeared to be in some pain.

Thanks largely to a good ride by Tracy Reno, General Campbell was able to record a hard-earned victory in the curtain raiser, the veteran plater getting up on the inside with a strong closing bid to win by a half length from John Mill. More Power was a close third. The winner paid $5.

Stocks Calm To Light Loss In Dull Session

Pivotal Issues Unchanged as Sales Decline to 1,028,226 Shares.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Stocks found themselves becalmed today after Wednesday's trip through troubled waters. So-called pivotal shares scarcely moved; some of the shares whose gyrations had stirred up yesterday's squall were still a bit soggy, but offerings lightened appreciably.

On the basis of the averages, the market's net change was a small fractional loss, few issues showing changes as large as a point.

Approach of the holidays had its reflection on the market, which was dull throughout. Presumably, word that the stock exchange was "watching" certain volatile stocks tended to dampen speculative enthusiasm; at any rate, professional interest and participation seemed at a low ebb. Sales totaled 1,028,226, against 2,173,518 on Wednesday.

U. S. Dollars Improve.

Dollars had an uneventful morning, but improved in the afternoon when sterling eased moderately.

Currency firmness appeared to have helped Government bonds make their rather narrow improvement. The gold price was unchanged at $34.06.

On the stock exchange Union Bag & Paper rallied more than a point in quiet dealings. Atlas Tack was off 1, while Celanese lost 1½ and Industrial Rayon dipped fractionally. U. S. Industrial Alcohol tumbled 4, but was not active.

Among the less excitable shares, American Telephone recovered about a point, then closed unchanged. Consolidated Gas eased into new low ground for the year and finished off half a point. North American and Public Service of New Jersey were a bit heavy.

In rails, Santa Fe, New York Central and Pennsylvania yielded slightly. United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Chrysler, General Electric, Union Carbide, Westinghouse, Case and Standard Oil of New Jersey were mixed, changes favoring the minor fractions either way.

U. S. Smelting Spurts.

U. S. Smelting took a late spurt of nearly 3, while Homestake broke under 300 for a 5-point loss.

Absence of any follow-up to yesterday's brisk reaction confirmed impressions that that occurrence had been a local affair.

Most brokers are looking for continued dullness the rest of this week. Frequently the interval between Christmas and New Year's is a period of little or no change in stock prices, although late tax selling in recent years has been an influence.

Currency circulation rose $86,000,000, in line with the Christmas season, which always brings a marked expansion.

Hagerstown Reports Upward Turn in Trade

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 21 (Spl.). An increase in business of from 25 to 100 per cent was reported by local merchants last week, as compared with the corresponding week of 1932. Apparently, every type of business was affected by the increase in buying.

With several large pay rolls released this week, business men were anticipating the greatest pre-Christmas buying since 1929. They considered the total sales as all the more remarkable in view of the lower prices of merchandise since last year.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

NRA Is Losing Sight of What Justifies Increased Government Supervision of the Economic System.

By Ralph West Robey.

In the attempt to impose a code with minimum prices on the cleaning and dyeing industry the NRA has shouldered, it seems to me, a virtually impossibile and, on the whole, quite unnecessary task. It is worthy of general attention because the fundamental issue involved is only incidentally concerned with the cleaning and dyeing industry. As I see it, the question at stake is the difference between intelligent and reasonable governmental supervision of business and governmental regulation that is running amuck.

It may be granted at the outset that there is no hard and fast line between these two categories of regulation. It is purely a matter of opinion and judgment. Thus, at the one extreme are the defenders of private capitalism in its purest form; at the other extreme are the Communists. The major difference between them, as well as between the numerous groups falling within these limits, is in the degree of economic liberty each is willing to grant to the individual.

That this question of personal economic liberty is the major difference between these various schools of thought must be borne in mind in appraising our current attempts at regulation. In other words, it must be remembered that one group is not working for the benefit of society as a whole, while another group thinks only of itself. In the case if individuals there may be such a difference, but the principles upon which the various theories rest all look to the social good. Adam Smith, in preaching laissez faire and the highest degree of private economic freedom, was just as much concerned with the general welfare as was Karl Marx.

Now General Agreement Some Regulation Is Wise.

At present almost everyone believes some regulaiton is necessary. Almost everyone, too, believes that with the growing complexity of our economic structure the increased supervision by the Government has been, on balance, to the good. The question, then, is simply how much further we should go just at this time as a result of the troubles of the last few years.

For purposes of argument let us assume that more extensive regulation than we had until last March 4 is desirable. In other words, let us assume that we all are convinced that our economic system now has reached such a degree of complexity that it no longer can be permitted to operate with its old freedom. Let me emphasize that I am not maintaining that this is the case, but merely that it be accepted as a premise for the purpose of appraising what is being done.

Now, with this as a premise, it seems to me that one can formulate a broad principle which should be the controlling guide in the extension of Government supervision. This is that our efforts should be directed to those parts of the economic system which have been of primary importance in causing the difficulties, or which if permitted free rein might cause difficulty. Banking, I should think, would be an outstanding example. The textile and soft coal industries would be others.

Scope Might Include Most of the Field.

With such an approach one might find that in actual practice he in time covered all of the major industries in the country as well as a substantial proportion of our business transactions. At the same time there undoubtedly would be certain fields that remained untouched. In general these would be the small business units of a purely local character. We would not, to take the most extreme example that occurs to me, undertake to regulate the price that little street urchins must charge for shining shoes.

Yet, that in effect, is about what the NRA has attempted to do. From the point of view of the complexity of our economic system there is less difference between these street urchins and the one-man pressing establishment than there is between the one-man pressing establishment and our large corporations. Quite aside from the practical impossibility of policing all the small local business units in the country, therefore, there is a basic difference in the need for the regulation of them and for the regulation of those factors which have made our economic system so complex.

It seems to me, in other words, that even if one grants we need a closer supervision of our business structure by Washington than we had before last March, he still is forced to the conclusion that in some directions at present it is running amuck.

Bond Market Sags Fraction As Sales Drop

Federal Loans Improve; Trading Volume Cut to $9,049,000.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Little interest was shown in the bond market today and generally unimportant fluctuations marked the dullest trading since the early part of the month.

Sales dwindled to a total of $9,049,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues eased two-tenths of a point. For the sixth consecutive day, however, this average has pointed downward.

Firmer international dollar rates, with an unchanged domestic gold price and fresh rumors of currency stabilization discussions at Washington, found some improvement in United States Government securities, although this section was unusually quiet.

Liberty Loans Up.

Liberty loans ended up 1-32d to 6-32ds of a point and most of the Treasuries were slightly higher.

Losers of equal amounts included various bonds of Alleghany Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago & Western Indiana, Cleveland and Union Terminal, Denver & Rio Grande, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific, Southern, and Wabash.

On List of Gains.

In the utility and industrial divisions improvement was recorded by issues of Dodge Bros., General Cable, Goodrich, Loew's, Paramount Publix, Utah Power, Consolidated Gas and American Telephone.

Among the losers of fractions to a point or more were loans of American & Foreign Power, International Telephone, Postal Telegraph, Liggett & Myers, National Dairy, New Orleans Public Service, Pacific Gas, Portland General Electric, U. S. Rubber and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Foreign obligations were irregular. Those of Dutch East Indies were off 2 to 3 points and the Cubans and South Americans were a bit heavy. The Argentines rallied 1 to 2, and some issues of Germany and Finland firmed.

New Dam Is Urged On Savage River

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 21 (Spl.). In a report filed late yesterday with the Upper Potomac Water Board, the construction of an impounding dam on Savage River, just below Crabtree Creek, is recommended by Gannett, Seelye & Fleming, consulting engineers, Harrisburg, Pa., as the better development for the conservation of water to improve the Potomac dry weather flow.

The report recommends that a dam 155 feet high, storing 6,500,000,000 gallons of water, be constructed at a cost of $1,260,000. This engineering firm was retained nearly a month ago by the Upper Potomac Water Board, composed of the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co., the Celanese Corporation of America, the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co., the Potomac Edison Co. and the Mayor and City Council of Cumberland.

Phelps Dodge Votes 25 Cents Special Return

McAndrews and Forbes to Pay Extra Dividend on Common.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Directors of Phelps Dodge Corporation today ordered a special dividend of 25 cents a share out of realized assets and surplus, payable February 1 to stock of record January 15.

Reflecting the rise in earnings since gold went to a premium, Natomas Co. has declared an extra dividend of $1.25, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25, both due January 2, 1934.

Cotton Reacts Again Under Liquidation

January Closes at 9.82 as General Market Drops 2 to 5 Points.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—A further slight decline in cotton today was attributed to continued near-month liquidation and scattered selling. March contracts sold off to 9.97 or 5 points net lower and closed at 9.99, with the general market closing steady at net losses of 2 to 5 points.

There was a little buying here, through houses with continental and Liverpool connections, while the Southern selling was comparatively light.

Prices stiffened up slightly after trading in current December contract ended at midday, but slight bulges were not maintained with January working off to 9.80 and May to 10.12, or about 4 to 7 points net lower at the low point of the day.

January Interest Reduced.

Offerings were in fair volume at times, but appeared to be absorbed by covering or scale down buying from trade or commission house sources, which some attributed to a favorable view of the retail business outlook.

Exports today, 28,056, making 3,966,507 so far this season. Port receipts, 17,153. U. S. port stocks, 4,125,590.

Cottonseed Oil

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steadier today on increased covering and commission house buying of July, which seemed to be influenced by the bullish pig survey report by the Department of Agriculture.

Final prices were 2 to 7 points net higher. Sales were 40 contracts, of which 10 were in exchanges from May to July at 20 points and January to May at 39 points and January to July at 60 points. Bleachable spot nominal; December closed 4.05, January 4.08, March 4.32, May 4.52 and July 4.74.

Trade Failures Increase in Past Week

New York, Dec. 21.— Business failures for the first week of December were higher than the total for the five-day week preceding. Reports to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., show 303 defaults in the United States for the week ended December 7, against 268 in the five-day week ended November 29. A year ago the number was 588.

For the current year to date, the record of commercial failures has been reduced sharply, but the comparisons of the week to week totals do not show as much improvement as the comparison with the corresponding weeks in 1932 and 1931. For, the total failures for the latest week represent a decline of 48.5 per cent from the number tabulated for the comparative week in 1932, and a drop of 47.3 per cent from the corresponding record in 1931.

The increase over the previous week was mainly in the Eastern and Pacific Coast States, as in the Western section there was a decrease of 16 failures. Insolvencies with liabilities of $5,000 or more in each instance numbered 192, as compared with 164 a week earlier. For the comparative week last year the number of similar defaults was 389.

In the Dominion of Canada, insolvencies numbered 35, which was lower in comparison with the 36 failures in the week preceding, and 79 for the same period of 1932.

The weekly record of business failures in the United States for the year to date, with figures for the corresponding weeks in both preceding years, is given below:

Germany Planning Butter Sales Law

A law for the market control of butter, cheese and eggs similar to the oil and fat monopoly regime was passed by the German cabinet on December 15, 1933, according to a cablegram from Ambassador William E. Dodd, Berlin, made public by the Commerce Department.

The Government will establish a central agency for fixing prices and controlling distribution of both domestic and imported butter, cheese and eggs.

It is reported that one of the purposes of this measure is to afford the German government new bargaining powers for treaty negotiations with other countries.

RFC Benefits Urged Upon Closed Banks

C. B. Merriam Outlines Aid to Institutions in Radio Talk.

Benefits that will result if receivers of closed banks make use of facilities of the Government were summarized yesterday by C. B. Merriam, chairman of the Federal Deposit Liquidation Board. Mr. Merriam spoke over the Columbia Broadcasting System's network.

He said that funds which otherwise will remain frozen and useless for an indefinite period will be made immediately available to depositors and will serve as a direct and sound stimulus to business in their communities.

All the stimulating effects of a substantial increase in circulation in those communities will be achieved, and this will be based upon sound, tangible values already existing, he emphasized.

Loans Avoid Pressure.

By borrowing upon the assets of closed banks and making substantial cash patyments to depositors, he explained, receivers can avoid a great deal of the pressure to force the liquidation of the assets in their charge.

This will not only help to preserve values in general, but should make possible a considerable enhancement in the value of the particular assets pledged because those assets can be liquidated in an orderly manner over a reasonably long period of time.

Depositors thus will reap the advantage of receiving cash disbursements immediately, with the probability of a substantial increase in the value of their assets because such assets will not have to be forced upon a distressed market for quick liquidation.

R. F. C. and Liquidators.

He said the Federal Government and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have no desire to replace existing liquidating agents and receivers. Of necessity, these men must be depended upon to continue the liquidation of the assets in their care. The attitude of the corporation toward them will be no different from what it has been toward any institution to which it has made a loan. The relationship will be that of creditor and borrower.

The board of directors of American Security & Trust Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on the capital stock of the company, payable January 10, 1934, to stockholders of record at close of business December 30, due to the holding of the annual meeting of the company, January 16.

Transfer books will be closed from January 7 to 16, both dates inclusive.

Tobacco Crop In Free State Is Increased

Under the stimulus of a sizable tax remission on home grown tobacco, Irish Free State farmers have this year produced a tobacco crop estimated at 300,000 pounds, according to a report from Vice Consul G. H. Barringer, Dublin, made public by the Commerce Department. Last year, it is pointed out, there was little or no production of merchantable tobacco in the country.

Based on the 1,300 licenses issued by the government, it is estimated that the area planted to tobacco in the Irish Free State during the current year was between 800 and 900 acres. As growers of 50 plants or less are not required to have licenses, it is probable that there was in addition a considerable acreage planted to tobacco which will not find its way into the market.

Irish Free State tobacco, it is pointed out, is practically all of the type known in the United States as the heavy western type of burley. It will be used exclusively for blends in the plug tobacco trade.

In the face of a tax to be imposed next year on native grown tobacco, the report states that the government will undoubtedly be urged to remit the duty on manufactures composed solely of native leaf. It is realized, however, that it will be some time before the public could cultivate a taste for the home grown product in unblended form.

Tobacco growing in the Free State, the report declares, is at present handicapped by a lack of curing and handling facilities, and many farmers are unable to properly store their tobacco.

While the type of Irish tobacco now grown is used only for blends, it is said that pipe, cigarette and cigar tobacco can be grown in the Free State. However, if a taste for Irish tobacco could be developed, it would take from 10,000 to 12,000 acres to produce the 8,000,000 pounds of imported leaf now consumed in the country.

German Export Loss Delaying Cash Transfer

30 Per Cent Cut in Debt Payments Also Laid to Currency Dumping.

Berlin, Dec. 21 (AP).—Germany's declining exports and the continued "dumping" of foreign currencies make it impossible for the Reichsbank to maintain its present transfer quota of 50 per cent, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Central Bank, said today.

His statement was made to justify the Reichsbank central committee's cut to 30 per cent of the debt payments of all maturing interest and dividend amounts paid into the conversion fund, except the interest and amortization on the 7 per cent Dawes loan and the interest on the 5½ per cent Young loan.

Transfer in Full.

These will be transferred in full. The committee agreed to prolong for another six months the present moratorium on the payments to holders of German bonds.

Dr. Schacht painted a gloomy picture of Germany's foreign trade which, because of the devaluation of foreign currencies, he said, did not yield sufficient devisen (foreign credits).

"The export surplus averaged 65,000,000 marks monthly in July and November, but a considerable part of this amount was paid in registered marks," the president said.

Further Decline Expected.

He expects the actual revenue from devisen, however, to decline to about 25,000,000 marks in the coming months.

"The transfer payment will have to be ended completely if additional exports will no longer be possible," Dr. Schacht added.

"The currency dumping of our creditors has done serious economic damage, which can never be balanced by a reduction in our debts."

He then read five points of new regulations, three of which provide that the "transfer of the amortization payment, with the exception of those for the Dawes loan, will not take place and that existing regulations will continue," and pertain to sums not to be transferred, which will be credited to the creditors in the conversion.

The same regulations apply in principle to domestic creditors and owners of German foreign securities as to foreign owners.

C., B. & Q. Freight Loads Increase During Week

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Freight loadings on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for the week ended December 16 totaled 21,349 compared with 19,533 the previous week and 18,680 the same week last year.

The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, known as the "Nickel Plate" road, loaded 11,293 cars the same week compared with 10,499 the previous week and 9,946 the same week last year.

Bank Rate Unchanged.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in its 2 per cent rediscount rate.

Wheat Decline Laid to Boost In Area Seeded

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—More than a million acres increased estimate of winter wheat seeding for the 1934 domestic crop tumbled wheat prices down 2⅜ cents maximum today.

Liquidation developed, and with stop-loss orders caught, the May delivery of wheat fell below 80 cents for the first time since October 20.

Rallies Near Close.

Rallies of about a cent ensued in the late dealings, and wheat closed unsettled, ⅝ to 1⅛ under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅝ to 1 cent advanced; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ up, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents lower.

After trading was ended, opinion was general that most of the holdings which were overhanging the wheat market had been disposed of. This was the fifth day in succession that wheat had reached lower price levels.

From the outset, the trade appeared to be disturbed over an unexpected bigger acreage of winter wheat, notwithstanding that a low condition figure was announced. The fact that all deliveries of wheat at Liverpool touched a new bottom price record today for the season was also an unsettling influence.

Aid to Rallies.

On the other hand, rallies in wheat prices here were promoted by assertions in some quarters that the Government estimate of winter wheat acreage should not be taken too seriously.

A leading unofficial authority said the present practice of the Government was to change its estimates from time to time, and that new estimates made this month for past years showed more drastic changes than usual, reflecting undoubtedly wheat reduction plan bias. Attention too was called to indications of enlarged domestic flour sales by mills.

Corn and oats displayed relative strength, rural offerings of corn to arrive being limited.

Export Trade In Japan Is Steadily Rising

Depreciation in yen exchange continued to aid Japan's export trade during the first three-quarters of 1933, according to a report compiled in the Commerce Department's regional information division.

Exports during the nine-month period were valued at 1,353,960,000 yen as compared with 937,965,000 yen for the corresponding period of 1932. At the end of September, Japan's unfavorable merchandise trade balance stood at 69,916,000 yen, against 115,842,000 yen on September 30, 1932.

Although the quantity of raw silk exported in the 1933 period declined, the value rose to 301,966,000 yen as compared with 246,276,000 yen in the first nine months of last year. Shipments of cotton textiles had a value of 280,530,000 yen compared with 191,704,000 yen in the nine-month period of 1932. Increased sales of this item were made in Netherland India, Manchuria and comparatively new markets in South American and African countries, the report shows.

Exports of canned goods increased to a total value of 37,284,000 yen as against 17,000,000 yen in the 1932 period. Silk and rayon textiles, wheat flour, potteries, iron and iron manufactures, and toys also registered increases in the 1933 export trade.

The United States again ranked as Japan's most important customer, taking 28 per cent of total exports in the 1933 period. A large part of Japan's increased shipments of canned foods, potteries, toys and miscellaneous manufactures, it is pointed out, were consigned to the American market.

Japan Continues Import Duty on Foreign Rice

The Japanese rice control commission has authorized the department of agriculture to continue for another year the import duty of 2 yen per 100 kin temporarily imposed on rice since November 20, 1930, according to a radiogram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Frank S. Williams, Tokyo.

Britain Cuts Meat Imports; Ireland Is Hit

London, Dec. 21 (AP).—A radical reduction in the imports of meats into Great Britain as a measure of assistance to the depressed meat industry in this country was announced by Maj. Walter Elliot, Minister of Agriculture, in the House of Commons Wednesday.

The Irish Free State, apparently, will be the hardest hit by a reduction in the neighborhood of 12½ per cent of the total cattle imports from there.

The imports of fat cattle from the Free State, from now until March 31, will be cut to 50 per cent of the imports during the corresponding period of 1932-33 and the number of store cattle imports will be limited. Furthermore the importation of beef and veal from the Free State will be prohibited.

Regarding Canada, which is the other principal source of the English cattle supply, Maj. Elliot announced that the Canadian government has agreed to cooperate in stabilizing exports of both fat and store cattle for the first quarter of 1934 at the corresponding figures for the same quarter of 1933.

The imports of foreign canned beef would be brought under control and limited for the next quarter while the chilled beef imports from foreign countries would be reduced by the same extent as during the first quarter of 1933.

Christmas Trading Better.

Bristol, Va., Dec. 21 (Spl.).—Bristol business men, while sympathizing with tobacco growing farmers whose Christmas money was curtailed by the burley sales holiday find cause for encouragement regardless. They point out that Christmas trading is already the best in years, and the farmers, receiving better prices next month, will be able to lessen January's dullness by their deferred purchases.

The volume of freight handled by the Class I railroads of the United States in the first 10 months this year, measured in net ton miles, showed an increase of 6 per cent above the same period in 1932, according to reports just received by the Bureau of Railway Economics and made public yesterday.

Freight traffic in the 10-month period in 1933 amounted to 229,143,362,000 net ton miles, compared with 216,181,598,000 net ton miles in the same period in 1932, or an increase of 12,961,764,000 net ton miles. Compared with the same period in 1931, however, the volume of freight traffic for the 10 months this year was a reduction of 63,258,316,000 net ton miles, or 21.6 per cent.

In the Eastern district the volume of freight traffic handled was an increase of 7.4 per cent, compared with the same period in 1932, while the Southern district reported an increase of 6.7 per cent, and the Western district an increase of 3.8 per cent.

Freight traffic handled by the Class I railroads in October, 1933, amounted to 26,411,961,000 net ton miles, an increase of 36,974,000 net ton miles, or 0.1 per cent over the corresponding period in 1932, but a reduction of 4,167,245,000 net ton miles, or 13.6 per cent under the corresponding period in 1931.

Railroads in the Eastern district in October reported a decrease of 2.5 per cent in the volume of freight traffic handled, compared with the same month in 1932, while the Southern district reported a decrease of 2.3 per cent. The Western district reported an increase of 4.6 per cent.

More Industrial Plants Report Production Schedule Increase

Glass and Bottle Factories Continue Capacity Operations; Refrigerators Book Larger Orders; Auto Companies Boost Commitments.

New York, Dec. 21.—Reports of increased schedules are becoming numerous from industrial centers, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. Some plants already have stepped up operations, while many factories are planning to open earlier than usual to start on their spring runs.

As more industries are attaining a more balanced alignment of production with demand, any increase in the latter will be reflected almost immediately in wider operating schedules, as the processors' tax, the floor tax and a number of other handicaps preclude manufacturing for stock to any extent.

In the glass industry bottle and container factories continue their capacity operations. Beer bottles and whisky flasks make up most of the shipments, with some of the factories months behind in their deliveries.

Stemware Plants Behind.

Stemware manufacturers will require many months to catch up with their accumulated orders, with new ones piling up at an increasing rate; in the current orders, the higher-priced goods predominate.

In the electrical refrigerator industry, manufacturers not only are booking larger orders than a year ago, but will close the year with profit margins advanced appreciably. In many instances dividend payments have been resumed after a lapse of two years or more. In the hardware trade, shipments of many manufacturers thus far in December have been double the 1932 comparative total.

Inquiries for steel are on the increase, which is reflected in a higher operating rate this week.

Larger Auto Commitments.

Automobile manufacturers are beginning to place larger commitments, with inquiries revealing the broadness of the schedules planned for the first quarter. Automobile factories are adding to their pay rolls daily and are entering the markets for materials, as plans are well advanced on the gigantic schedules to meet the heavier demands in prospect for the 1934 models. Production for the current year now is certain to run in excess of 2,000,000 units, or a gain of approximately 45 per cent over the 1932 figures.

Influenced by the rising costs of raw materials, many hardware manufacturers are announcing price advances and the entire price structure, with few exceptions, is showing a firmer tendency. Quotations of many manufacturers are subject only to immediate acceptance, as there is an increasing reluctance on the part of other markets to guarantee prices for even short periods.

Japan's Trade In Chemicals Is Improving

That the organized effort of Japan to make itself self-sufficient in chemical products for which it formerly depended on outside sources is meeting with success is indicated in a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner D. W. Smith, Tokyo.

As a result of the increase in plant capacities and the devaluation of the yen, the report points out, Japan is now able to compete with other chemical manufacturing countries in world markets, particularly in the Far East.

The degree to which Japanese chemical manufacturers have profited by the depreciation of the yen is reflected in the favorable foreign trade figures for combined shipments during the first ten months of 1933 of sulphur, iodine, acetic acid, sulphuric acid, nitric acid, arsenic acid, sulphide of soda, iodine of potash, chlorate of potash, bleaching powder, calcium carbide and explosives, coaltar dyes, coaltar and pitch, paints and red lead and artificial fertilizers.

Exports of the items enumerated during the ten-month period amounted to 102,475 long tons valued at 13,975,946 yen, compared with 78,236 tons valued at 7,988,869 yen during the corresponding period of last year, and 56,970 tons valued at 6,077,939 yen during the corresponding period of 1931.

The combined exports of sulphur and artificial fertilizers amounted to half of the total volume of exports of the chemical products mentioned and the increase in the shipments of these two items from Japan in the past two years has been very noticeable. During the ten months ended September, 1931, 8,637 tons of sulphur and 8,587 tons of artificial fertilizers were exported.

The corresponding period of 1932 showed exports of 21,873 tons of sulphur and 13,675 tons of artificial fertilizers while during the ten-month period of the current year, exports rose to 26,555 tons of sulphur and 26,825 tons of artificial fertilizers.

Details concerning the countries to which shipments of these two items were consigned during the current year are not yet available. During 1932, however, 70 per cent of total exports of artificial fertilizers from Japan was shipped to the United States and Hawaii and 75 per cent of the sulphur exports went to Australia and New Zealand.

Christmas Tree Sales to U. S. Cut

Shipments of Christmas trees from New Brunswick to the United States have sharply declined this season as compared with previous years, according to a report from Consul Edwin C. Kemp, Moncton, made public by the Commerce Department.

Local shippers estimate that only about 150 carloads of trees have been shipped this year to the United States, the report states. Normal shipments in recent years have amounted to about 200 carloads.

Although the quantity of Christmas trees sent to the United States from the Canadian province has declined, shippers state that greater profit has been made this year than in former periods.

Better prices have more than offset the unfavorable exchange brought about by the decline of the United States dollar in terms of Canadian funds, it is pointed out.

Daily Reserve Banks' Credits Average $20,000,000 Higher

(Associated Press.)

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended December 20 as reported to the Reserve Board yesterday by reserve banks was $2,687,000,000, an increase of $20,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $495,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1932.

On December 20 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,687,000,000, an increase of $9,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with an increase of $86,000,000 of money in circulation, offset in part by an increase of $54,000,000 in Treasury currency adjusted and decreases of $21,000,000 in unexpended capital funds, nonmember deposits, &c., and $2,000,000 in member bank reserve balances.

The system's holdings of bills discounted and of bills bought in open market decreased $3,000,000 each. Holdings of the various classes of United States Government securities were practically unchanged.

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended December 20, 1933, in millions of dollars, were as follows:

Babson Offers 3-Point Plan To Aid Industry

Expert Urges President Also to Exempt Surtax Payments.

(United Press.)

Explaining that business in general was showing a healthy tone, Babson submitted to the President a three-point program designed to stimulate initiative in industry. It would call for exemption of surtax payments for the following:

1. Money spent in increasing the sale of agricultural products.
2. Money spent on building homes not exceeding $10,000 in value.
3. Money advanced to meet industrial pay rolls when banks turn down loans for pay rolls.

Business Gains Seen.

"The dropping off of this surtax," Babson said, "would mean that it would cost the Government about $100,000,000 in revenue but for every dollar lost in taxes there would be an increase in business 100 per cent."

He argued that every dollar put into surtaxes means that much less for the business man to carry on worth while experiments with.

He added, however, that he would not exempt business that wanted to expand along the lines in which there already is adequate method but only those who take risks "to increase the business of the United States."

Taxing of Bond Buyers.

Purchasers of bonds, for example, he would have taxed.

Discussing business generally, he said:

"I think the business outlook is all right if they (meaning the Government) just let the experiments grow without starting more. Washington has supplied the water for the crops. Now what is needed is a little sunshine."

Duke Clashes With Rover at Court Hearing

Two Hold Verbal Battle During Disbarment Proceedings.

Sharp personalities were exchanged in District Supreme Court yesterday when Jesse C. Duke, on trial in a disbarment proceeding, cross-examined United States Attorney Leo A. Rover.

Rover, with Justice F. D. Letts, District Supreme Court, was charged by Duke several months ago with sending up to the District Court of Appeals a "diluted, deleted, incomplete, false and inaccurate" bill of exceptions in a criminal case in which Duke was taking an appeal on behalf of five men.

For making these charges, which the Court of Appeals said were not substantiated in documents before it, Duke was cited for trial because of making "false accusations."

Ready for Verbal Tilt.

Early in his testimony, Rover evinced a desire to cross swords with Duke. The United States attorney said he had "lost faith" in Duke when the latter came to him in a case vaguely described as "the Funkhouser" case, and wanted Rover to "threaten to indict a man" so he (Duke) could collect a $30,000 fee.

Duke asked Rover what action he had taken in several matters that Duke had called to his attention. He was told that "nothing had been done."

"I wrote a four-page letter to the Attorney General asking him about your failure to carry out your duties in several cases, did I not?" Duke queried.

"Yes, and I answered in an eight-page letter and I have never heard any more from it," replied Rover.

Court Is Adjourned.

Duke had not concluded his cross-examination when court was adjourned. Prior to his appearance, James R. Kirkland and Harold W. Orcutt, assistant United States attorneys who prosecuted the case in which Duke noted the appeal, testified. Both said they had incorporated in a disputed bill of exceptions all material "exceptions" noted by the defendants.

"If there is any doubt about that bill of exceptions, I will sign it again," he said.

Further sessions were adjourned until January 2.

4 Boys, All 17, Hurt in Crash

Two Virginians Critically Injured When Car Overturns.

Four 17-year-old boys were injured, two critically, when their automobile careened from the Wilson Boulevard last night and overturned near Fort Myer Heights, Va.

George Coppage, of Clarendon, driver of the car, told police he was blinded by the lights of an approaching machine and forced from the highway. He escaped with minor hurts.

Charles Jones, also of Clarendon, and Donald Cramer, of Penrose, Va., were reported near death in Georgetown Hospital. With James Laycock, Clarendon, they were passengers in the car. Laycock was treated for slight injuries.

Physicians said Jones and Cramer suffered fractured skulls and internal injuries. Coppage, after questioning, was released in the custody of his mother, Mrs. Rose Coppage.

British Peer Succumbs in London at 85.

London, Dec. 21 (AP).—Sir Henry Dickens, 85, son of the novelist, Charles Dickens, died today from injuries received several days ago when he was hit by a motorcycle on the Chelsea Embankment.

Sir Henry lapsed into unconsciousness at 2 a. m., surrounded by his family, at the hospital to which he was taken Saturday following the accident.

Sir Henry is survived by his widow, Lady Dickens, and six children, three daughters and three sons, one of whom is Rear Admiral Gerald Charles Dickens, director of naval intelligence of the admiralty.

Mother, Released By Jail for Birth Of Child, Returns

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (AP).—Released from jail so that her child might be born in a hospital, Mrs. Veronica F. Skwirut went with the baby in her arms back to the prison today—at her own request.

There the infant will spend Christmas with his father, Karl Skwirut, sr., serving an indeterminate sentence on a contempt of court charge, growing out of an alleged bankruptcy fraud. There his mother voluntarily resumes a similar sentence because there is nowhere else for her to take 18-day-old Karl, jr., for the holidays.

And at the county prison unusual arrangements were made to entertain the tiny guest so long as his father and mother remain prisoners.

Uncle Sam Has the Jitters

Federal Workers and Offices Constantly Shifting in Endless Search for Quarters; All Office Space Has Been Reallocated During Past Year.

A continued drama, a drama to which might be applied also the adjective "moving" but for the danger of its being misunderstood for a pun, is being enacted here daily with Uncle Sam as the director, his Federal workers the characters and square feet the unit of dramatic criticism. It is the baffling question of space allotments for Governmental departments and agencies, and the virtually endless practice of shifting them about.

There is no plot, no unity; it is as old as the United States and will last as long. It is building up to a climax which may result in making Federal housing developments to date appear like a drop in the bucket.

A survey of office shifts, completed yesterday for The Post, reveals that virtually every inch of the 10,737,083 square feet of space used by the Central Government here has been reallocated since President Roosevelt took office. The greater part, by far, of all shifts is traceable to the creations of NRA, PWA, AAA and other emergeny agencies.

The Division of Government Space Control has been and is working 16 to 24 hours a day to provide quarters for the myriad of newly organized offices while accommodating, at the same time, housing needs of expanding permanent branches.

With only a few exceptions, the space control unit, which is under supervision of Secretary Ickes, reported that every agency has been called on to contribute office, file and storage space.

Demands have been so immediate and urgent that in many buildings, notably Secretary Ickes' Interior Department, desks and files have been moved into corridors. A whole building, the Walker-Johnson, was turned over to the Civil Works and Emergency Relief Administrations. The Interior building has sent so many of its branches elsewhere it is commonly being called the Public Works building.

Since spring the office space division has made between 90 and 100 transfers, involving 7,043 employes. Wholesale shifts, affecting many times that number, will be necessary within the next few months as the Triangle buildings are completed and thrown open for occupancy.

The need for further housing expansion here was stressed at a White House conference early this month between President Roosevelt, Secretary Ickes and Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission. Another discussion is expected to be held on the same question within a few days.

May—Crop Loan Office, Agriculture to temporary "C," 100 employes. Farm Loan Bureau, 1825 H to 1300 E street, 133 employes. Biological Survey, Agriculture, to temporary "C," 82 employes. Emergency Relief Administration, 1825 H street to Hurley-Wright, 75 employes. Agriculture Engineers, 1300 E street to temporary "C," 204 employes. Bureau of Efficiency (disbanded), Winder Building to warehouse.

June—Justice and War Department files, Rizik Building to 1818 E street. A. A. A., Agriculture extensible building to temporary "C," 75 employes. Public Roads, 1300 E street to Winder Building, 96 employes. Panama Claims, Winder to Hurley-Wright, 8 employes. Prohibition Bureau, 1300 E street to 1825 H street, 162 employes. Alien Property, Hurley-Wright to Tower, 136 employes. Vocational Education, 1800 E street to Hurley-Wright.

July—Public Works Administration, moving within Interior Building, number of employes unestimated. Office of Education, Interior to Hurley-Wright, 110 employes.

August—Certain I. C. C. units, Hurley-Wright to temporary, No. 2, 75 employes. Emergency Relief Administration, Hurley-Wright to Walker-Johnson, 150 employes. Emergency Conservation, Interior to temporary, No. 2, 30 employes. Coordinating Service, Interior to Navy, 44 employes.

September—Veterans' Administration unit, Interior, to 1214 New Hampshire avenue, 74 employes. Supervising Architect, Treasury to Evans, 50 employes. Coast Guard, Treasury annex to Wilkins, 267 employes. Forest Service, 928 F street to Victor, 50 employes.

October—Subsistence Homesteads, Interior to Hurley-Wright. Coordinating Service, Navy to warehouse. Bureau of Reclamation, Interior to Temporary "C," 51 employes. Fine Arts Commission, Interior to Navy, 10 employes. War Department moves within Munitions Building, about 300 employes.

November—Indian Office, Interior to Temporary "F," 214 employes. Plant Quarantine, Lemon to Temporary "C," 91 employes. Inspector General, Walker-Johnson to Munitions, 22 employes. Organized Reserves and Chief of Chaplains, from Walker-Johnson to Munitions, 11 and 17 employes, respectively. Indian Affairs, Interior to Temporary "F," 214 employes. George Washington Bicentennial Commission (moved a year ago from Washington to Walker-Johnson), Walker-Johnson to House Office Building, 37 employes. Petroleum Administration Board, Temporary "C" to Lemon Building.

December—Bureau of Mines, Interior, to Washington Loan & Trust, 233 employes. Chief of staff, Walker-Johnson to Barr, 160 employes. Judge Advocate General, Walker-Johnson to Otis, 98 employes. Alcohol Beverage Board, 1825 H to temporary "C," 162 employes.

War Department files in the Munitions Building were moved from upper floors to the first and double-decked in order to make room for the offices forced out of the Walker-Johnson Building. However, there was no alternative but to expand further into privately owned buildings when the chief of staff and judge advocate general's offices were transferred to accommodate Harry L. Hopkins' Federal Relief and Civil Works agencies.

With corridors obstructed by desks, hitherto unused alcoves fluttering with typists, and the cry for space still increasing, practically the only untried expedients are the drafting of Washington Monument as a file stack and lining of Lincoln Memorial with book shelves.

Perhaps that will be the climax which this space distribution drama is working toward.

Auto Passenger Is Charged With Bribing Boy Witness

Charged with bribing a boy witness to an automobile accident, Lester B. English, 25, of 2610 F street northwest, was bound over to the grand jury yesterday when he pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing in Police Court.

English was a passenger in a car driven by Ray Childress, 32, of 201 Eighth street northeast, when it struck and fatally injured John Darcangelo, 10, of 219 K street northeast. The accident occurred Tuesday at Third and K streets northeast.

English was arrested Wednesday by Detective Sergt. William J. Liverman, who charged to Assistant United States Attorney Milford Schwartz that English gave Jerry Scarano, 11, of 310 K street northeast, $1 and requested him to say the car was not speeding.

The Scarano boy told his father of the alleged bribe, Liverman said. He said the boys who witnessed the accident had first decided to buy their injured playmate "candy if he lived and flowers if he died."

Childress is being held for the coroner's inquest today.

Coca-Cola Official's Kin Doubt Suicide

New Rochelle, N. Y., Dec. 21 (AP). Relatives of Frederick M. Campbell, assistant to the president of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Inc., of New York, whose body was found today in his basement garage, said tonight they were not satisfied with the police verdict of suicide and would ask the medical examiner to reopen the case.

Mrs. Ed Barrow, wife of the secretary of the New York Yankees Baseball Club, and Campbell's mother-in-law, said she did not believe he killed himself.

Taxi Driver Held In Hit-Run Case

Negro Quoted as Admitting His Guilt.

Leonard E. Arnold, colored taxi driver, of 604 Harvard street northwest, was arrested yesterday in connection with the hit-and-run accident in which Miss Grace Loving, of 2901 Connecticut avenue, was injured Wednesday night.

Police quoted Arnold as saying that he had no hacker's license and was afraid to stop after the crash. Miss Loving is recovering from a broken nose and other injuries at Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Pfleiger, of 3008 Rodman street northwest, who was injured about the same time in the same vicinity by another hit-and-run driver, is reported in a critical condition from a fractured skull and concussion of the brain.

Proposed Rail Laws Drafted By Union Body

3 Points of Program for Congress Decided Upon.

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—Executives of railroad labor unions decided today on three points of a legislative program they will ask Congress to pass.

They will ask Congress to limit the railroad working day to six hours, maintaining the same weekly and monthly basic pay schedule. They will ask that laws be passed limiting the number of cars in a freight train to 70 and in a passenger train to 14.

They will ask that the hours of service in every 24 for dispatchers be limited to 6, for trainmen to 12, and for telegraph operators to 9.

A. F. Whitney, chairman of the executives and president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, explained that while the measures will increase employment to a certain extent, they are principally designed to increase safety.

The proposal to limit by law the number of freight cars is based on the fact, he said, that train brakes do not work uniformly at the head and rear of longer trains, causing many accidents to employes on the rear of trains.

Whitney said the United States Supreme Court has ruled that the Arizona law limiting freight trains to 70 cars is legal.

Bingham Asks For Arms Cut

Offensive Weapons Must Be Abolished, Envoy Says on Return.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The United States, said Ambassador Robert W. Bingham on his return from England today, has done "everything in its power to bring about a disarmament pact."

The Ambassador, who was accompanied by Mrs. Bingham and two secretaries, said he had been "strongly criticized from many sources" for remarking in a recent London address that "our Nation was prepared to go further than it had ever gone to promote the success of the (disarmament) conference.

"That was what I meant then," he added, "and it is what I think now."

The only way to solve the poblem of war, Bingham asserted, is by reduction of armament.

"I think new difficulties have arisen in creating a disarmament pact," he said, "but I believe in it as the method of keeping peace."

The solution of disarmament, said the Ambassador, "rests upon abolition of offensive weapons such as big guns, big tanks and bombing planes.

"If all these were eliminated, boundaries could be held by smaller weapons, fear would be eliminated and all countries would contribute toward the peace of the world."

Bingham is the publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times.

"All of Britain wants to see the (Roosevelt) program work out successfully," Mr. Bingham said. "If American news can only be displayed in English newspapers as liberally as we display news of Great Britain, there will be better understanding between the two countries."

Attacking the Government policy on uniforms as "inequitable," E. Claude Babcock yesterday appealed to the House Subcommittee on the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill to provide funds for furnishing them.

"The practice is inequitable from three points of view," the American Federation of Government Employes president declared, following the hearing. "First, the Government treats its uniformed employes differently; second, the employes to whom uniforms are not furnished are, as a group, very, very low paid; and third, the uniform is really what might be termed a necessary tool of the trade.

"Treasury guards, for instance, have a base salary of about $1,200 which, when reduced with the pay cut and the retirement deductions, give them a net monthly income of about $80. They are required to purchase uniforms."

Mr. Babcock pointed out that if the Postoffice Department decides to uniform elevator conductors and guards, that it would amount to an additional pay cut. A wide variance in cost of uniforms exists, he said.

"Guards who furnish their own uniforms pay $22.50 plus $2.50 for the cap. The Government is paying, under present contracts, $14 for the uniform and $1.95 for the cap," the labor leader revealed.

The uniform for some employes is like the saw for a carpenter or the typewriter for the typist, Mr. Babcock holds. It is a required part of the equipment necessary to perform the duties of the job and it is entirely logical that the Government should furnish it just as it furnishes typewriters and saws.

"We are not requesting an increase in appropriations," he stressed. "We are simply requesting that the subcommittee insert in the bill language which will permit administrative officers to purchase uniforms from available appropriations."

Friendly Warning.

If you Government employes have not seen "The Lake" yet you had better bestir yourselves. Only three performances remain at the National. We saw it last night and are going again. Were we to use all the complimentary adjectives from adorable to zestful, Katharine Hepburn would still be inadequately described. A cast of artists support her in a hit play. One of the sets is refreshingly unusual. Just tipping you off to something good.

Eligibility on the Civil Service reemployment list was extended by the commission yesterday. Upon request, the commission will retain names on the list for an additional period of one year. Heretofore, eligibility was limited to one year. There are 3,700 names on the register.

In view of the provision of the law, the commission stated, regarding apportionment among States of positions in the departmental service in Washington, the commission could not see its way clear to waive the apportionment provision of the regulations in making certification from the reemployment register.

Other changes announced were principally in details to bring the new regulations in line with the practice which has grown up under the former regulations.

Requests are coming to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund from Government clerks who find it difficult to play Santa Claus for their own children this year because of the pay cut and the fact that so many of them have added responsibilities to helping relatives caught in the unemployment wave.

So, you Government clerks who can afford it, now is the time to show real espirit de corps, and give a helping hand to The Post Toy and Doll Fund by bringing in toys or money contributions to help out your brother workers. Of course, you know that the people who come to such a place as the Toy Fund headquarters for help under these circumstances are those who will not be found on any charity list.

Conquest of Infant Paralysis Forecast With New Vaccine

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The World-Telegram says today an immunizing vaccine has been developed which gives grounds to believe that science is on the verge of conquering infantile paralysis.

The vaccine, aimed at the disease which is responsible for more than half of the Nation's cripples, is the result of experimentation in the laboratories of the Infantile Paralysis Commission in the Long Island College of Medicine.

It has proved effective in immunizing three-fourths of the animals tested—a ratio fully as high as that of standard vaccines, such as that used against diphtheria.

Discovery of the vaccine was announced last night in a paper read at the Academy of Medicine by Dr. Sidney David Kramer.

Much remains to be done, Dr. Kramer warned, before the vaccine is available for general use. How quickly the work can be completed, he added, depends to a great extent on the availability of funds.

"It's difficult to get monkeys for experimentation because of the cost," he said.

Measles Wave Feared As 66 Cases Appear

An epidemic of measles for Washington was believed threatened yesterday. Health Officer William C Fowler said 66 cases have been reported to the Health Department since December 1.

"While the number in itself is not high," he said, "it would indicate that we may be in for another epidemic. They come in cycles every two or three years, and there's not much we can do to stop them."

Justice of the Peace Leo Walters said the deaths were a murder and suicide.

Police Lose Rum, Car to Hijackers

Patrol Wagon, 240 Gallons Later Recovered.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 21 (AP).—A Norfolk police patrol bringing 240 gallons of bootleg liquor from the Ocean View Precinct to headquarters was "hijacked" this afternoon by liquor runners, who escaped with the wagon and liquor.

While passing a lonely road several men in an auto blocked the path and ordered the driver to dismount. The "hijackers" are said to be known to police.

Within an hour four police officers overtook the patrol wagon in Norfolk County, arrested one man and recovered the liquor. The liquor was a part of a seizure of 580 gallons made in a raid by Ocean View Precinct officers.

Georgia Road Pay 5 Cts. Hour, Says Hopkins

CWA Raised Scale to 30 Cents Despite Protests.

Civil Works Administration wages of 30 cents an hour for road work, over which protests were raised in Georgia, supplanted rates of 5 cents an hour for the same work, Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, asserted yesterday.

Asked about the criticism voiced by Gov. Talmadge of Georgia that C. W. A. wages in Georgia were too high for private competition, Hopkins stated that when the program was launched, rates as low as 5 cents an hour were paid for Georgia road work.

"We're paying 30 cents an hour for that work," Hopkins said. "The trouble is that some people want to put labor back on the 5-cent-an-hour basis.

"I can see nothing of the new deal for labor or anybody else by thinking on that level. I can see no possibilities of pumping purchasing power into the country at 5 cents an hour.

"Thirty cents an hour is $9 a week if rain doesn't keep men from working," he went on. "When we put in the program we were told it would ruin the State. We were told that 30 cents an hour for road work meant that no cotton would be picked. Well, cotton was picked, and it will be planted in the spring."

Hopkins said that discussion of the date C. W. A. would be tapered off in those parts of the far South where cotton planting starts early already has been started. C. W. A. has no intention to compete with the farmer, he said.

English Watch Hitler Moves

London, Dec. 21 (AP).—The British Government is actively participating in discussions regarding the international situation, Foreign Minister Sir John Simon told the House of Commons today at its last pre-Christmas session.

The public declarations of Chancellor Hitler of Germany which are of special interest to France, have been particularly discussed, he said.

"In our inquiries regarding them we have made it clear that we are not expressing approval of some suggestions," he added, "but it is out duty to try to clarify the situation and to find out what is behind the declarations."

"Hitler has made propositions which certainly are intended to suggest pacts of nonaggression with Germany's neighbors," Sir John added.

Paris, Dec. 21 (AP).—British support for the French stand against the rearmament of Germany and against the weakening of the League of Nations was expected in French circles today to come from talks between Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour and Sir John Simon.

The hope was expressed that the conversations of the two statesmen, which are scheduled to begin tomorrow, may definitely spike a Hitler rearmament program.

Kreuger Books Sold for Taxes

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 21 (AP). Paintings books and sterling silverware which graced the New York penthouse apartment of Ivar Kreuger before the Swedish match king died by his own hand, were knocked down to the highest bidders today, the proceeds going to the United States Government as part payment for unpaid taxes.

More than $7,000 was realized at today's auction, conducted by the Hudson County National Bank as administrator for that part of the Kreuger estate in New Jersey. About 500 persons, including Anders Jordahl, described by a bank official as the capitalist's "right-hand man," attended and saw all except one painting fall under the auctioneer's hammer.

The one exception was an oil painting—"The Bacchanalian"—attributed to Peter Paul Rubens. The bank withdrew it from sale on the grounds the $1,600 bid by J. Donald Duncan, of New York, was far below its real worth.

Ten other paintings were sold for a total of $2,395, with Dietrich's "Portrait of an Old Man With Fur Coat," going for the highest price of $500.

Eleven lots of books brought $729 and of the total $275 was for a 40-volume set of Charles Dickens bound in half-red crushed levant Morocco. In addition, an envelope addressed in the author's handwriting was inserted in the first volume.

65-Cent Whisky In Cincinnati Steps Up Trade

One store disposed of 240 pints in an hour. A neighboring store reduced the price of its blended liquor from $1.75 to $1 a pint.

The 65 and 80 cent whisky, put out by the American Medicinal Spirits Co., of Louisville, was barreled last spring, artificially aged by a chemical heating process, and bottled in the summer.

Passing Game Is Practiced By Lions

Morrison, Methodist's Coach, Confers With Lou Little.

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 21 (AP).—Columbia University Lions, en route to Pasadena, Calif., for a Rose Bowl engagement with Stanford's football team January 1, practiced their passing game today at the home stadium of the Nation's outstanding advocate of the aerial attack, Southern Methodist University.

The Lions were honor guests of a luncheon club and later showed their football wares in a two-hour workout on the S. M. U. gridiron.

No team in the land is supposed to know as much about tossing and catching passes as the Methodist Mustangs. But the Lions filled the air with passes—flat zones, forwards, laterals, and most any other kind one can mention.

Lions Thrive on Heat.

Coach Ray Morrison, wizard of the passing game, stood on the side line and watched Coach Lou Little and his assistants fire their cohorts through a strenous workout under a hot sun. The heat was severe, but the Lions took it grinning.

During the session of throwing and catching passes, Coach Little called Coach Morrison to the field, and for over an hour the two conferred together as the Lions went through aerial formations.

Owen McDowell, regular end for Columbia, received a royal welcome. He is a Dallas boy, having started his athletic career at Sunset High School, under Coach Bill Bushman.

After the workout, Coach Little sent a telegram to Stanford officials requesting that they allow Alvar Norgard, star Stanford end, to play against Columbia. Norgard was ruled ineligible Wednesday when it was discovered he played college football in 1929.

Hopes Norgard is Eligible.

"I hope their scholastic standard will not be so severe that Norgard can not play against us," Little said. "I want to meet the Pacific Coast boys at their best. I hope Norgard gets to play."

Little had no comment to make on Ferrar, tackle, who is Columbia's ineligible man.

Quizzed concerning the probable outcome of his game against Stanford, Little smiled and said his boys would be ready, and that they may surprise people who are unwilling to rank them an even chance for victory.

After the workout, the players departed for El Paso, where they will stop off for tomorrow's practice. From El Paso they go to ucson, Ariz., to remain for a week before going to Pasadena December 31.

Little Good Sport.

Palo Alto, Calif., Dec. 21 (U.P.). "That certainly is mighty sporting of him," said Prof. William B. Owens, Stanford faculty representative, when informed that Coach Lou Little was willing that Al Norgard, ineligible Stanford end, play against Columbia in the Rose Bowl.

"The situation is out of my hands, however," Prof. Owens said. "Restatement of Norgard would call or Pacific Conference action and I ouldn't ask for that."

Norgard was ruled out of the ew Year's classic at Pasadena hen it was learned he represented t. Ignatius for two minutes in a rid game in 1929.

Crisler Voted Doing Best Job in '33

Princeton's Coach Gets 60 of 161 Ballots Cast by Editors.

Thornhill, of Stanford, Put in Second Place; 3 Tie for Third.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (U.P.)—When Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler led his Princeton Tigers through a nine-game football schedule this year without a defeat or tie he earned for himself the distinction of having turned in the finest coaching job of 1933.

Crisler, who came out of the Midwest early in 1932 to rebuild the shattered Princeton football machine, obtained an overwhelming majority of the votes cast by sporting editors throughout the country in the annual United Press sports poll.

Of 161 votes on the question: "What coach—track, football, or whatnot—did the finest teaching job in 1933? Crisler received 60.

Get All but 18 Ballots.

Football coaches monopolized almost all the votes as only 18 ballots were cast for teachers in two other fields of sport—baseball and swimming.

In second place with 20 votes, came "Tiny" Thornhill, of Stanford, who performed an almost similar job to that of Crisler. Thornhill, with a squad of sophomores—the same material that the Princeton mentor had most of—boosted Stanford into the championship of the Pacific Coast and the Rose Bowl invitation in his first year as successor to Glenn S. "Pop" Warner.

A three-way tie existed for third place, as 17 votes each were recorded in favor of Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, in their brilliant drive to the world series victory; Gar Davidson, Army coach, also in his first year, and Ossie Solem, who took an Iowa team that hadn't won a Big Ten game in three years, and piloted it near the top of the conference heap.

15 Votes for Layden.

Elmer Layden, coach of Duquesne's "Dukes," and now successor to Heartly "Hunk" Anderson at Notre Dame, followed next with 15 votes. Layden's eleven won every game of a ten-game schedule, with the exception of Pittsburgh.

Harry Kipke, veteran coach of Michigan's Big Ten championship eleven, followed Layden with five ballots, while next on the list with three votes was Lou Little, mentor of the Columbia eleven, that is now on its way to the Rose Bowl to oppose Stanford.

Wallace Wade, of Duke University, and Frank Callison, of Oregon U., received a pair of votes each and one each went to Jack Scarry, coach of Lenore Knight, leading woman free-style swimmer; Bernie Bierman, Minnesota football coach, and Joe McKenney, Boston College gridiron mentor.

Little Was Expected.

Of the writers who favored Crisler, Thornhill, Davidson or Solem, a majority emphasized that these men turned in the finest jobs because their teams had not been expected to get very far at the beginning of the season.

Most stressed the point that Crisler did a particularly fine piece of work in turning out a brilliant team composed mostly of sophomores. The same held true for Thornhill and Davidson. The latter in particular, because in addition to starting his first year at Army he was confronted with a team that had only three 1932 lettermen on its roster.

Takoma-Silver Spring Alumni Wins, 18-14

Takoma-Silver Spring High School Alumni basket ball team defeated the 1934 edition of the high school last night in their annual game, 18-14, with thrills abounding from whistle to whistle.

Trailing a few minutes before the close of the first half, the Alumni "stepped on the gas" to nose ahead, 10 to 8, at intermission. So stubborn were the defenses of both quintets that field goals were at a premium in the second half. Clark, high school right forward, made a bold bid to overhaul the alumni lead with three looping tosses from near midcourt in the closing minutes of play.

Bozievich was a tower of strength both on the offense and defense for the victors.

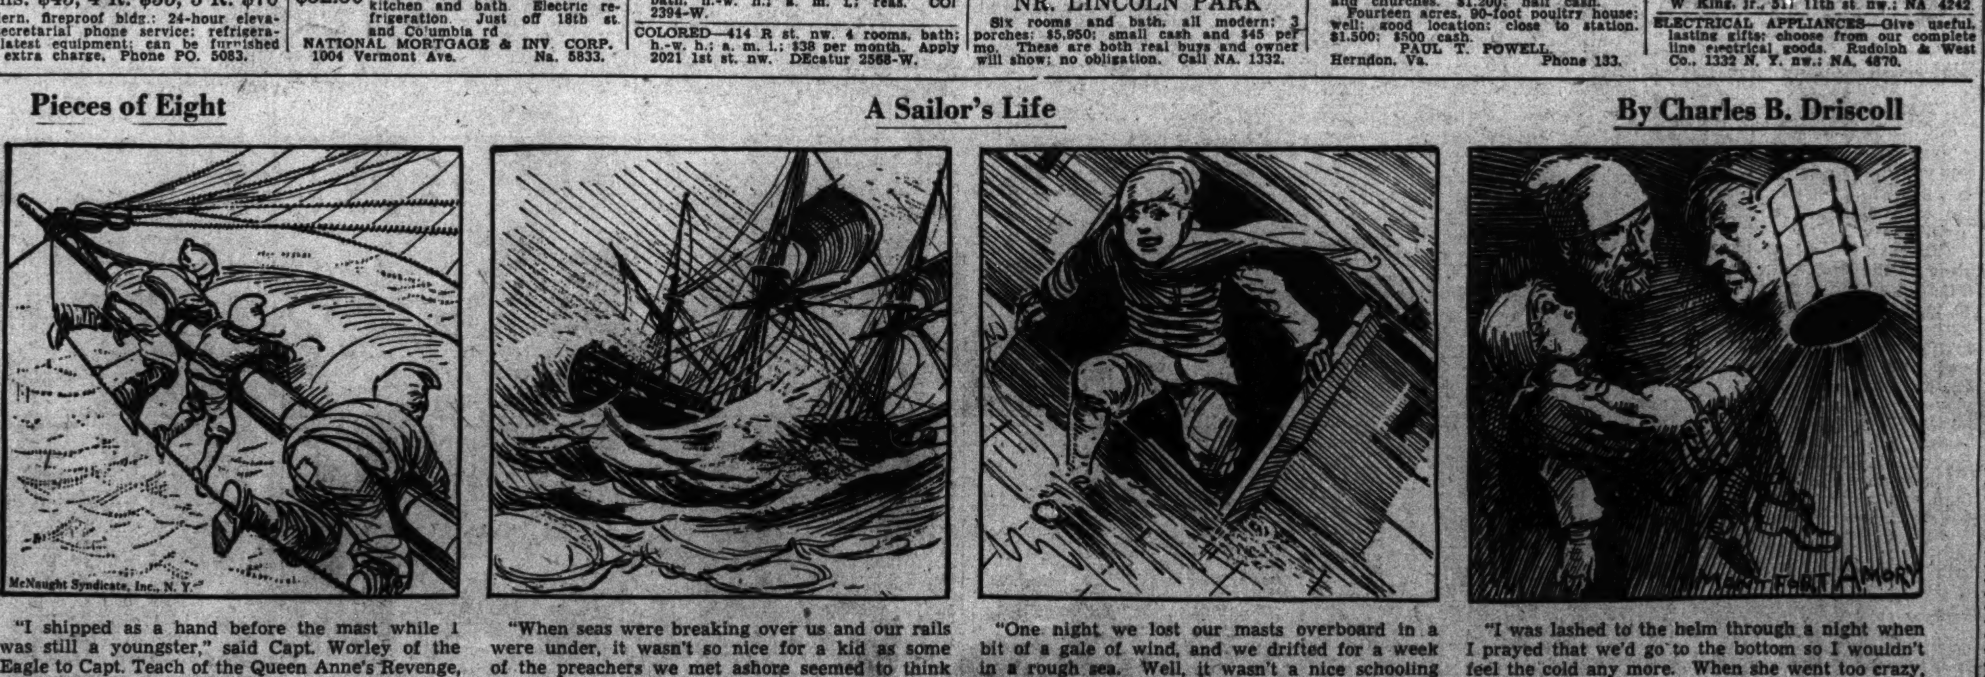
A Sailor's Life

By Charles B. Driscoll



McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

"I shipped as a hand before the mast while I was still a youngster," said Capt. Worley of the Eagle to Capt. Teach of the Queen Anne's Revenge, "and it didn't seem such an easy life, taking in sail in a storm.

"When seas were breaking over us and our rails were under, it wasn't so nice for a kid as some of the preachers we met ashore seemed to think it was. Such times, I used to think of my cozy home.

"One night we lost our masts overboard in a bit of a gale of wind, and we drifted for a week in a rough sea. Well, it wasn't a nice schooling for a youngster, Capt. Teach, whatever you may say!

"I was lashed to the helm through a night when I prayed that we'd go to the bottom so I wouldn't feel the cold any more. When she went too crazy, they came out and got me. I was unconscious, Captain."

Worn Out Words.

They used to say it cutely, the grand word "ab-so-lutely," I heard it every hour; if questions I propounded, that noble word resounded, with emphasis and power. Whatever was my query, the answer didn't vary, it always was the same; that "absolutely" bogie was sprung by every fogie, until it seemed a shame. But now men say it mutely, they're thinking "absolutely," but don't pronounce the word; it has been so mishandled, it's been so Gothed and Vandaled, that it's become absurd. And so there's always reason to sing and smile in season, some good is ever near; my neighbors, most astutely, refrain from "absolutely," and fill my soul with cheer. "Intrigued"—that word's another, it's "absolutely's" brother, I struck it every day; whatever I was reading, in spite of inner pleading, I found it in the way. I found it an affliction to read of jays in fiction "intrigued" by this and that; and every time I found it I'd soak my head and pound it, and dance upon my hat. "Meticulous" is fading, the word I saw parading on every printed page; I saw the word so often my brain began to soften, I seethed with futile rage. Such words as these are spoken until our hearts are broken, our lives are full of care; such words as these are written until our souls are smitten with fury and despair.

Seabury Sniffs At Farley Tea With Walker

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Samuel Seabury said today that the recent Paris tea party of Postmaster General James A. Farley and former Mayor James J. Walker was "a disgusting spectacle."

"It was not an edifying thing," said Seabury, who conducted the legislative inquiry that preceded Walker's resignation and voluntary exile, "to see the Postmaster General, a member of the Cabinet of the President of the United States, make a pilgrimage to Mr. Walker and to hear that he had eulogized Walker in a Paris speech.

"Take this as you like it. I think it was a disgusting spectacle."

Farley and Walker have known each other for 20 years or more. They met in Paris December 8 and chatted over teacups.

"Jim converted me to drinking tea," Farley said of the incident and explained that he had missed American coffee.

Criticism of the Postmaster General came from Seabury upon his arrival home today aboard the Empress of Britain. He went abroad on private business.

Seabury refused to comment on troubles in the New York State Republican party which led State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy to announce he would ask Seabury to investigate charges of public utility influences over the State Assembly.

"I want to understand the situation before I say anything," he said.

But he was curt and indignant over the Farley-Walker meeting.

Seabury was investigating Walker's administration when Farley was the "salesman" for Franklin D. Roosevelt's Presidential nomination campaign. Roosevelt was governor then and sat in judgment of charges aimed at Walker's dismissal. The mayor resigned, however, and departed for Europe just before Roosevelt concluded his hearings.

Godless Society To Rally Dec. 25

Drive to Spread Disbelief Launched in Russia.

Moscow, Dec. 21 (AP).—A drive of the All-Union Godless Society to convert to the ways of disbelief those who retain their religious beliefs was in full swing today as Christmas approached.

The government itself set an example in godlessness and demonstrated to the proletariat its complete indifference to the religious significance of the day. The central executive committee, the chief administrative arm of the government, scheduled the opening of its winter convention for December 25.

The atheistic organization, acting as a private agency with the full support of the Communist party, relies on an intensive propaganda and educational campaign to attract people away from the churches, which still function legally and usually are crowded on Christmas and Easter.

License Graft Charges Aired

War Veteran Relates How He Paid $7,000 for News Permit.

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Irving Abrams, a disabled war veteran, testified today that he paid $7,000 to a "big politician" for the privilege of operating a news stand here and had served a jail term rather than reveal the man's name.

He was a witness in an investigation conducted by License Commissioner Sidney S. Levine of charges of racketeering in the issuance of news-stand permits.

Abrams said he borrowed $3,000 of the $7,000, and that after he got his license a man whose name he did not know demanded $2,000 more. He said his license was revoked when he failed to pay the $2,000 and the lender of the $3,000 charged him with larceny.

He was sentenced to jail on the larceny charge. At his trial he refused to give the name of the man to whom he allegedly paid the $7,000.

Ritchie Joins Fight to Keep Navy School

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 21 (Spl.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, today joined the fight initiated by Annapolis civic organizations protesting the proposal now before President Roosevelt to consolidate the Navy and Coast Guard, particularly as such a plan would affect the removal of the Navy postgraduate school from Annapolis to New London, Conn.

The governor, in a telegram to the President, said: "It seems to me that these two splendid agencies of the American Government should be kept separate and intact. I am particularly concerned about the situation in Annapolis, which would result from the transfer elsewhere of the postgraduate school. This would necessitate the removal of about 200 officers and their families who are now a vital part of Annapolis life, and who have invested their savings in property there in the belief that their permanent livelihood would be in this community."

Civic organizations have filed a plea against the transfer with Senator Millard E. Tydings and Representative Stephen W. Gambrill.

Removal of the school would mean a financial loss approaching $1,000,000 annually to Annapolis, the complainants say. There are now 228 young student officers at the school and a faculty of five commissioned officers and 12 civilian instructors, who live in or near Annapolis.

Annapolis business men were successful two years ago in thwarting a proposal to remove the postgraduate school to the West Coast.

Chicago Prosecutor Urges Quick Trial for Alderman.

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—A parade of Democratic politicians filed before the grand jury today and told how Alderman Mathias Bauler shot and wounded Policeman John J. Ahearn in Bauler's liquor tavern.

State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney promised Bauler would be prosecuted vigorously. He asked the grand jury to indict for assault with intent to commit murder.

William D. Meyering, sheriff of Cook County, was one of the witnesses to the shooting, in which Ahearn and Deputy Sheriff Frank Wright were wounded. He was one of a dozen politicians in Bauler's tavern at 4 a. m. Tuesday, when Ahearn and another policeman clamored for admission.

The witnesses agreed, prosecutors said, that Bauler and Ahearn each fired twice. A stray bullet struck Wright.
